Piedmont Hotel Is Leased for 99 Years

DEAL IS BIGGEST OF KIND CLOSED IN LOCAL ANNALS

Hostelry Taken by Chas. T. Alexander Involves Aggregate Rental of $16,000,000 for Period.

ENTIRE PROPERTY TO BE REMODELED

Prominent Hotel Operator of Bristol, Va.-Tenn., Will Take Over Management After January 1.

What offers to be the biggest real estate deal of its kind ever to be consummated in Atlanta was announced Saturday with the sale of a leasehold estate in the Piedmont hotel for a term of 99 years, including the option to buy within ten years. It was made by the Piedmont Hotel company, owners of the well-known hostelry, to Charles T. Alexander, prominent hotel operator of Bristol, Va.-Tenn., and involves an aggregate rental of $16,000,000 and a basic valuation on the property of $2,000,000.

The hotel, which is one of the best known in the south, is now under lease to the Dinkler hotel interests, effective until January 1, 1929, when the new Alexander lease begins. The hotel will continue to operate as such, following extensive alterations to be made at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, it is understood. At that time Mr. Alexander will move to Atlanta to take personal charge of operating the hotel.

Follows Winecoff Sale.

R. R. Otis and J. H. Taylor handled the deal, which is destined to make history in the chronicles of Atlanta real estate. Following upon the heels of the Winecoff hotel sale and other large downtown property transfers, the transaction reveals one of the biggest movements toward commercial property activity ever to be witnessed in Atlanta.

Pringle and Smith have been retained as architects to prepare the plans for the alterations and the contract for them has been awarded to Beeler and company of Johnson City, Tennessee.

The present dining room and kitchen will be abandoned, and stores

DUCE MAY FREE FASCIST ENEMIES AS CHRISTMAS GIFT

Rome, November 12.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini may grant amnesty to a number of political prisoners on the occasion of the Christmas fetes, says the Tribuna. In doing this, the newspaper adds, Mussolini will take account of the prisoners' ages, condition of health and the economic situation of their families, as well as their antecedents.

The fascist emblem, victor's rods bound around an ax, will henceforth adorn the national flag, the premier has decreed. Only old shot-torn battle flags of historic regiments will be exempted from this addition.

Atlanta Leads U.S. In Postal Receipt Gain for 1926-27

Gate City Has Increase of 17.18 Per Cent; Los Angeles Second With 12.79.

CLERK HIRE ALSO GIVEN HIGH PLACE

Atlanta's already favorable position among 50 selected postoffices of the larger cities in the United States achieved a substantial advance during the fiscal year of 1926-1927, it was disclosed Saturday at the office of Postmaster E. K. Large when the fiscal sheets for the year which ended July 1 were received from Washington.

This city was first in percentage of increase of postal receipts for the fiscal year, with 17.18 per cent, while Los Angeles, Calif., came second with 12.79 per cent, and Birmingham, Ala., third with 10.07 per cent. Atlanta's receipts for the year of 1927 totaled $4,455,510 over a total of $3,802,262 for 1926. The average increase for all cities was 4 per cent.

New York, having the largest population, came first in the total of receipts for both 1926 and 1927, having $71,981,450 for the first year and $74,448,651 for the second, or an increase of 3.42 per cent. The next cities in importance from the standpoint of volume were Chicago, second; Philadelphia, third, and Boston, fourth.

Atlanta's position from the standpoint of the cost of clerk hire and per cent cost of city delivery to receipts was boosted for the better by the comparison. Where Atlanta was fourth from the lowest city on the per cent cost of city delivery to receipts in 1926, this city was third in 1927. In the case of postal hire as related to receipts, Atlanta occupied the thirteenth from the lowest place in 1926 and the tenth in 1927.

The percentage of the cost of city delivery to receipts for Atlanta in 1926 was 13.41, and in 1927 was 12.72, while the percentage of the cost of clerk hire to receipts in 1926 was 21.51 and in 1927 was 19.76. This demonstrates the very efficient management of the Atlanta postoffice, it was said.

RUMANIAN BILL ASKS PROHIBITION BY "PROGRESSION"

Bucharest, Rumania, November 21.—(AP)—Progressive prohibition, which in 12 years it is hoped "will make Rumania as dry as the United States," is called for in a bill which will be introduced in parliament shortly on behalf of the Bratiano government.

If, as seems most likely, the bill becomes law, only one saloon will be allowed to every 1,000 population with a gradual reduction in the number of saloons until at the end of 12 years all will disappear.

JURY WILL PROBE SERIES OF BLASTS IN NEGRO HOMES

Startling Facts to be Revealed, Police Authorities State—Another Dynamited Saturday.

Startling revelations regarding recent dynamiting of negro homes in the fifth ward will be made Tuesday when Detective Lieutenant T. D. Shaw goes before the grand jury to seek indictments of parties responsible for the series of outrages, it was revealed by the police officer Saturday.

Culmination of the series of explosions which have spread terror among colored residents of the ward during recent months came early Saturday morning when a blast of dynamite wrecked the home of Oscar Ward, at 380 Gray street, hurling Ward and his wife high in the air and sending them to Grady hospital suffering with injuries which were pronounced Saturday to be serious. The explosion occurred at 2 a. m., while the couple were asleep, and it was evident from the wreckage of the house that the dynamite had been placed directly under the bedroom.

U.S. RECORDS SHOW NO DAVIS LICENSE

BY SAM W. SMALL.
(Special To The Constitution)

Washington, November 12.—Revelation here today that the bureau of aeronautics has no record that Paul Davis, pilot of the ill-fated Waco plane which crashed October 27 at Candler field, Atlanta, killing two passengers, ever applied for or received license as authorized pilot followed the filing with the bureau of Lieutenant Glenn's report of the accident.

Lieutenant Glenn's report says that the plane was licensed, and that inspection, on October 22, five days before the crash, revealed the plane in good flying order. The plane was practically new, having been flown only about 75 hours.

The report, in its explanation of the accident says that the plane went into a sudden tail spin, and Davis, trying to effect a landing, was too low to gain control and get the nose of the plane up to rebalance it.

DOUG DAVIS SAYS BROTHER WITHIN RIGHTS.

Pilot Paul Davis, who crashed a Waco biplane several weeks ago at Candler field with resultant death to two passengers and serious injury to himself, had not applied for a pilot's license with the department of commerce, Doug Davis, his brother, said Saturday.

Paul Davis did not need a pilot's license for flying within the state of Georgia, and his flying was confined almost exclusively to Candler field, Doug Davis said. A department of commerce license is required only when the pilot engages in interstate, and not intrastate flying, Davis explained.

Doug Davis contended that his brother was entirely within his rights in taking up passengers at Candler field without a pilot's license. Paul, he explained, had been flying for some time at the time of the crash and was experienced in air navigation, although he had not applied for his license.

FROST PROMISED ATLANTA MONDAY; WINDS FOR TODAY

Cold Wave Due To Reach Here If Blustering Winds Abate, von Herrmann Says.

Jack Frost, gentleman of fable and fiction, but whose results are very much fact, bids fair to cast his chill and snowy mantle about Atlanta and environs Monday morning, according to weather bureau forecasts, promising Atlanta its first touch of frost this season.

Fair skies are seen for today, but yet this morning should prove no balmy affair with a forecast of 36 degrees on the slate. C. F. von Herrmann, local weather chief, says that if blustering Sunday winds moderate Monday morning Atlanta will have the first frost of the season.

The frost is due normally by the first of November. The approaching chill may bring temperatures to the freezing point, Mr. von Herrmann said.

New York city Saturday experienced the highest mark in temperature on November 12 since 1909, the mercury ranging around 70 degrees at 2:15 p. m.

The thermometer in Chicago is expected to drop to the freezing point with sunny, winter weather prevailing. Chicago experienced Friday and Saturday a drop in temperature of more than 40 degrees in 48 hours. This sudden change in temperature caused a small tornado which brought $300,000 property damage in the city.

NEW YORK ENJOYS BALMY WEATHER.

New York, November 12.—(United News.)—With the thermometer registering 70 degrees in New York city at 2:15 p. m., the highest mark on November 12 since 1909, the Army-Notre Dame football game and other contests in this region were played in baseball weather this afternoon.

While the New York temperature began to decline immediately after 2:15, it was recorded that only three times since 1871 had the thermometer gone higher.

CHICAGO HIT BY RAPID DROP.

Chicago, November 12.—(United News.)—Sunny winter weather with the thermometer hovering around the freezing point was forecast for the midwest over the week-end.

In Chicago the temperature drop was more than 40 degrees in 48 hours. Other sections experienced similar rapid vanishing of "Indian summer." Snow fell in western Kansas and the southwest was bitterly cold for that section. Snow flurries were predicted in territory surrounding the northern Great Lakes.

The sudden change in temperature in Chicago caused a minor tornado which brought $300,000 property damage in the city and suburbs.

SEVEN ARE KILLED IN HOTEL BLAZE

Bodies of Three Women, Two Men and Two Children Recovered in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., November 13.—(AP)—Seven persons were killed here early this morning when fire swept through the Graystone hotel in the downtown district. The bodies of three women, two men and two children were taken to the city morgue where efforts were made at identification.

Several persons were believed to have been injured in jumping from upper floors of the three-story building when flames broke out shortly before midnight.

The fire, of unknown origin, gained headway so rapidly that many persons were thought to have been trapped in their apartments.

HEINKEL SEAPLANE IS HIT BY WAVES AND IS CAPSIZED

Horta, Azores, November 13.—(AP)—The Heinkel seaplane D-1220 in taking off this morning for Newfoundland, was hit by waves, and capsized. The crew was not injured.

The plane was towed back into the harbor.

GRADY DIAGNOSIS PROBE IS STARTED

Executive Committee to Inquire into Methods Employed in Emergency Clinic.

Probe of diagnoses at Grady hospital with a view to increasing the efficiency of the service and making it as free of errors as is humanly possible, was begun Saturday afternoon when the executive committee, headed by Dr. Joseph Hines, started an inquiry on which it will base a report and recommendations to be filed with the hospital and charities committee of city council.

Only detailed and technical phases of the work was investigated at the meeting Saturday afternoon. The committee is expected to hold several other meetings before making its report, which will be submitted to the councilmanic committee November 28.

Action of the executive committee in inaugurating the probe was taken after the councilmanic committee ordered the investigation following unanimous vote of council Friday night.

Start of the inquiry was made following diagnosis of the case of Gertrude Allen, 4, who was stricken down Wednesday afternoon by a heavy truck. The child was taken to the emergency ward and was sent home. She later was carried back to the institution suffering from internal injuries and hemorrhages, but now is on the way to recovery, according to reports.

In conducting the investigation, the executive committee of the hospital was left free rein to go into all phases of the work with a view of obviating mistakes of diagnosis. It also will consider several other complaints, according to indications of the meeting of the hospital board Friday night.

Order for the probe came on motion of Alderman Robert F. Pennington, of the first ward, member of the council committee. It was seconded by Alderman J. Allen Couch, of the fifth ward, and had the approval of Alderman Charles M. Ford, of the tenth, and Councilman Horace Russell, of the ninth, chairman. Dr. J. C. Vaughan, the other member of the committee, did not attend the session.

Neither Steve R. Johnston, superintendent of Grady; Dr. Hugh Cochran, chief resident physician, nor members of the visiting staff will be under fire in the probe, it was pointed out, since laxity, if any exists, rests with internes employed at the institution.

Mr. Johnston's position is purely administrative, and while Dr. Cochran is the chief resident physician, he could not be responsible for a mistake of his employees except, of course, as head of the department. Members of the staff do make diagnoses in the emergency clinic, where, it is said, mistakes have been made.

AVIATOR KILLED AS PLANE CRASHES IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, November 12.—(United News.)—Al Proctor, 28, air pilot, was killed and his aviation pupil, Elwin Baker, 23, was seriously injured when their airplane crashed late today on a paved street in the Los Angeles residential district. The plane dropped 1,500 feet and hit the pavement with such force that the engine and parts of the wings were forced through the hard street surface.

MRS. VANDERBILT DENIES REPORTS OF ENGAGEMENT

New York, November 12.—(AP)—The Associated Press tonight received the following cablegram:

"Paris, November 13, (Sunday). Associated Press, New York—I wish to deny reports of any engagements whatsoever. (Signed) Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt."

Recently Paris dispatches not carried by the Associated Press asserted Mrs. Vanderbilt, nee Gloria Morgan, had "admitted" her engagement to Prince Hohenlohe Langebourge, nephew of Queen Marie, of Rumania.

NOTABLE FLIERS TO GREET LINDY

Washington, November 12.—(United News.)—America's most notable gathering of peace-time heroes will be held here Monday when 18 trans-oceanic fliers lunch with President Coolidge at the white house.

Charles Lindbergh will meet Ruth Elder, latest darling of the airways, and Charles A. Levine. The guest list, limited to the notable fliers, includes all the ocean aviators who have gained fame in the last six months except Commander Richard E. Byrd, who will be unable to attend.

Lindbergh will receive the Hubbard memorial medal of the National Geographic society from President Cool-

BURNS OPERATIVE DECLARES CHIEFS DIRECTED PLANS

William J. Burns Based Charges of Jury Tampering by Government on False Affidavit.

REPORTS FICTION DECLARES AGENT

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Testimony that the Burns Detective agency fabricated reports for use should the defense in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case decide that a mistrial was necessary was presented today to the grand jury investigating the surveillance of the trial jurors.

It was furnished by one of Burns' own operatives, who since October 24 had been assisting the government in weaving a net about William J. Burns; his son, W. Sherman Burns, and the more than a dozen detectives sent here at the behest of Henry Mason Day, one of Harry F. Sinclair's confidential associates.

This operative is William J. McMullin, of Philadelphia, a world war veteran, and known to Burns and his men as William V. Long; with the code designation of L-36. He swore that those directing the jury shadowing operations required him to swear to a false affidavit on which William J. Burns based his charge of jury tampering by government agents and which was presented to the oil trial judge, Frederick L. Siddons, by counsel for Burns.

Burns Knew Falsity.

McMullin declared that at the time the affidavit was presented, the elder Burns, founder of the detective agency, knew that it was false. This affidavit had to do with the alleged activities of Harris R. Lamb, a special assistant to the attorney general, whom McMullin declares was never shadowed for even a moment.

Some of the high lights in McMullin's whole story were made public by District Attorney Gordon after former Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, had appeared before the grand jury to tell that McMullin had voluntarily come to him on October 24, seven days after the Teapot Dome trial started, and explained what the Burns men were undertaking to do.

Pinchot reported immediately to Owen J. Roberts, of special government oil counsel, and plans then were laid to trap the private operatives. Under orders of the government, McMullin continued to serve with the Burns agency and the story of how he and the government prosecutors outwitted the Burns men, including

Child's Game of "Last Look" Brings Death to Little Girl

:: Janet Heinzenberger, Injured, Dies On Operating Table ::

BY A. S. HARDY, JR.

The little girl lay dead on the operating table at a local hospital at 7 o'clock after three hours of unsuccessful efforts to revive her with a pulmotor.

Returning home from school Friday afternoon shortly after 1 o'clock with several of her school playmates, the children were enjoying that game which captivates their childish fancies—the game of "last look."

Janet was in the very best of health and was playing the game. As she reached the apartment dwelling where she lived she quickly turned to one of the school girls and joyfully cried, "last look." Then without turning again toward her school mate, because she had gotten the last look, the child darted into the door.

She reached for the door knob but missed it and jammed her tiny hand and arm through the glass in the French door. The glass shattered, with the result that the fingers on the girl's right hand were almost severed and her right arm was deeply lacerated below the elbow.

Neighbors hearing the noise, summoned medical aid, and Dr. Muse, who was visiting a patient in the apartment building, responded. A tourniquet was made to stop the flow of blood and the child was taken to the hospital, where she was rushed into the operating room.

An anesthetic was administered and for approximately two hours Dr. W. L. Cousins sewed up the ragged-edged wounds. With the injuries dressed and the anesthetic mask taken off, little Janet began breathing. A deep, jerky breath came suddenly and the child's heart stopped—to beat no more.

Every art of resuscitation known to attending physicians was tried but to no avail. Janet had taken the "last look" at the friendly smiles of her schoolmates.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Heinzenberger home, the Rev. R. L. Russell, pastor of the Druid Hills Methodist church, officiating. Interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

Michalove Quits Universal; To Start Theater Chain Here

New York, November 12.—(Special.)—Dan Michalove has severed his connection with Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises and will return to his former home, Atlanta, Ga., within a few days to launch a new enterprise for the building, acquisition and operation of a chain of theaters in the southeastern states, it was announced here Saturday.

By this move Mr. Michalove goes into business for himself. The new enterprise is strictly a personal and individual undertaking on his part and will have no connection with any existing chain of theaters.

Immediately upon his arrival in Atlanta he will establish headquarters offices. At that time it is expected that he will make a more detailed announcement of his plans.

Rumors which had been rife on Broadway crystallized late this week with the announcement in The Film Daily that "By mutual consent Dan Michalove and Universal have reached the parting of the ways." For several weeks it had been known that Mr. Michalove was not entirely satisfied. Three weeks ago rumor circulated to the effect that he would return to Atlanta before the end of the year. But it was expected that he would retain his affiliation with Universal inasmuch as he was operating under a five-year contract that had a little more than four years to run.

The contract contained a clause providing that in case of any disagreement between himself and Universal over his method of operating the company's theaters, he could exercise the option of returning to Atlanta to assume supervision over the southern division circuit of Universal theaters, or take jurisdiction of the several Universal exchanges handling the distribution of the company's pictures throughout the south.

The break came late this week. It is complete and final. Mr. Michalove has severed all connection with Universal and will launch out independently heading his own theater operating enterprises.

Some light was thrown on the controversy which precipitated the break by Variety (New York) in its issue dated Wednesday, November 9, in the following story:

"Michalove was brought north several months ago on the strength of his theater-buying judgment, but has never been able to reconcile himself to the northern part of the country. On taking up his position with Universal, Michalove proposed to run the theaters regardless of the affiliation with Universal Pictures corporation, each house booking the pictures best suited for that locality. He was then given power to run the theaters according to his own judgment and took the job on that understanding.

"Recently Universal Chain Theaters became more closely identified with Universal Pictures corporation, through a change of book ownership and regulation, and with the result that Michalove's plan of theater operation was given a dent. Carl Laemmle is evidently insisting that Universal theaters play as many pictures as Universal produces. This probably resulted in friction leading to talk of a change.

"Michalove, starting with his first interview, has always been convinced that theater operation could be profitable only if the houses can book pictures without hindrance of producing affiliations."

"Lanky" Has Cooked 122,240,000 Meals

:: ALL BEEVES IF HOOKED UP TO TECH STADIUM WOULD HAUL IT AWAY ::

During 25-Year Regime at Georgia Tech

Above is an artist's conception of the Georgia Tech stadium being pulled by a gigantic ox, representing the composite of all the beef "Lankey" has cooked for the students during his 25 years as chef of the institution. At the right is "Lankey," himself, in a characteristic pose.

There's romance in eating steak!

Or something like that. Ponder sometime, while masticating an unusually tough piece of the alleged edible. Think of the energy and the power that is being ground between your molars. Or maybe the teeth still belong to the dentist. At any rate, think of it.

Professor F. C. Snow, of the civil engineering department of Georgia Tech, did, and here's the answer:

Dusky Robert Wallace, otherwise known as "Lankey the Cook," who is chief chef for all the "rambling wrecks" out on Techwood drive and thereabouts, has cooked enough beef for Tech students, which, if brought to life and yoked together as oxen, would have sufficient bull-power to pull the new Tech stadium at a speed of one foot per second!

It happened this way. "Lankey" has been cook at Tech since the second Sunday in March, 1902. Now that's a long time, and in that period, "Lankey" has supervised the preparation of 20,340 meals for 15,000 students. If you're bright at figures, you know offhand that this gives a total of 122,240,000 meals that "Lankey" has cooked.

In every good meal, there's some beef. Just how much doesn't matter, but Professor Snow figured it all out and arrived at the result given above. Of course, if you want to argue with Professor Snow over the accuracy of his figures, go right ahead.

The total amount of beef cooked was decided as 60,750 tons. This much beef cooked at one time would be enough to feed the entire population of Atlanta, and after that, according to the figures, you could go around with baskets and pick up a twelve days' supply left over to put in the ice box for those Sunday afternoon snacks.

A good part of this beef has gone into the line and the backfield of Tech Golden Tornados for the preparation for food for the training table is left to "Lankey," and he takes great pride in this phase of his work.

"Lankey" earns his soubriquet by virtue of being long, lean and lankey, and he is one of the best known figures on the campus. We needn't add "best-liked" for it was stated before that "Lankey" was the chef. He has never been late to work and, with the exception of one week, has never been absent from work either with or without permission.

So, give a heed to the lowly steak, it may be tough, but still you can't bull a concrete stadium!

MUSCLE SHOALS DISPOSITION ASKED BY TENNESSEEAN

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Representative Reece, of Tennessee, a republican member of the house military committee, which has jurisdiction over Muscle Shoals legislation, said today that the time had come for congress to dispose of the long standing question over what to do with the government properties on the Tennessee river in northern Alabama.

He declared that failure by congress to take definite action had proved expensive to the government, private industry and the farmer, adding that he proposed to use every means to obtain legislation this session.

Athens Women Provide Grave For Boy Convict

Athens, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Jack McDonald, age 19, will go to his grave in Oconee cemetery here Sunday morning without a sole friend or relative to mourn his passing, except those friends whose sympathy for the "unknown" boy was expressed today in the flowers they sent to his casket as it lay in the chapel of a local funeral home, and by a number of local women who provided for the grave lot. Search for the youth's relatives since Thursday ended today.

McDonald was killed Thursday by a guard in the employ of the Clarke county convict camp after McDonald attacked the guard, witnesses said. The coroner's jury exonerated the guard in the slaying.

After McDonald, who was 19, was killed, the secretary to the board of county commissioners for Clarke notified the Georgia prison commission of the youth's death. He was sent here from Fulton county, but the crime for which he was serving sentence of one to two years was committed in Union county.

County authorities made every effort to locate McDonald's parents or other relatives without success and the body lay unclaimed and unidentified. Today a man who bears McDonald's name came down from Union county to see if he could identify the dead youth. But the Union county man left without being able to claim Jack as a kinsman.

Floral offerings were received at the chapel at various times yesterday. One bore a card with the following inscription: "To the unknown boy. From a friend."

It was stated at the funeral home that more than 500 people visited the chapel Friday and Saturday, to view the body of the young convict.

In cases like this when a body is unclaimed the county takes charge of the burial and usually it is placed in a special section reserved for that purpose, but Saturday the funeral home was informed that a group of Athens women had bought a lot in Oconee cemetery for young Jack McDonald. Funeral services will be conducted from the chapel Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock by Rev. George Stone. Interment will be in Oconee cemetery.

NEW KIND OF SPECTACLES

1,000 Pairs To Be Given Free

Chicago, Ill.—A new, true-vision spectacle has been created. Its popularity is now sweeping the country. These spectacles will enable almost anyone to read the very smallest print, thread the finest needle and see far or near. The manufacturers, True-Fit Optical Co., 1445 W. Jackson Blvd., Dept. RASB, Chicago, Ill., are offering to give a thousand pairs free to those who will help introduce them. Write them today. They will also explain how you can get the agency and without experience or money make $200 to $500 per month.—(adv.)

UNION LEAGUE PLANS TO HONOR COOLIDGE

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Honorary membership in the Union league and its gold medal for exceptional public services, honors conferred upon no other president, will be accepted by President Coolidge Thursday when he goes to Philadelphia to speak before that organization.

The gold medal was bestowed upon President Lincoln and Johnson and honorary memberships were extended to Presidents Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. Both honors, however, have never been conferred upon the same individual.

The president, with Mrs. Coolidge, will leave Washington in a special train late in the afternoon. The return to the capital is scheduled immediately after Mr. Coolidge has completed his address.

DUNGY RECAPTURED AFTER JAIL BREAK

Marion, Ill., November 12.—(AP)—Harvey Dungy, former member of the Birger gang, who sawed his way to freedom from the jail here early Wednesday night, was captured today at West Frankfort, Ill. Sheriff Oren Coleman, of Williamson county, and Sheriff James Pritchard, of Franklin county, arrested the fugitive at the home of Ray Thomason, brother of the former Birger gangster.

Murderess' Fifth Husband, Fearful, Seeks Divorce

:: UNIVERSITY DEAN SEEKS MARITAL RELEASE ::

Lincoln, Neb., November 12.—James Stuart Dales, 76, dean at Nebraska university, and secretary to the board of regents, insists today that the sole reason for his wishing a divorce from his wife, whom he married three years ago, is that she concealed her past life and that he feared for his own safety.

He filed suit for divorce Thursday.

Dean Dales said that since their marriage he has discovered that he is her fifth husband and that she is a murderess and has a prison record.

His wife admits the charge of her husband but says that she told him of her past actions and that he assured her that they were going to marry anyway and live the future and not the past. His wife admits the statement made by Dean Dales that she divorced her first two husbands and that she murdered her third husband for which she received a one to ten-year sentence in the Nebraska state prison. She also admits that following her release from prison she married her fourth husband, George Ayles, but a short time later had him sent to prison for a year when she testified that he had stolen her car to drive to Omaha and back. Ayles pleaded guilty to the charge.

Mrs. Dales, who is 47, said that she was called to the office of John M. Ledwith, Dales' attorney, on Thursday and offered $2,500 if she would give her husband a divorce and not give any publicity to the proceedings.

Dean Dales' marriage followed an elopement to St. Joseph, Mo.

Rotary of World Expects To Meet In Dallas in 1929

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—Dallas, Texas, has been tentatively agreed upon as the 1929 convention city by the board of directors of the Rotary International. Chesley Perry said he believes that all arrangements will be completed within a month.

The convention will be held in June, probably opening on the 5th.

"And he threw the glove
Not with love
Right in the lady's face"

DO you remember the old poem of Leigh Hunt?

POOR mortified lady! If she could only have worn "Wear-Right" gloves, I am sure she would have hesitated to throw one of them to the lions to prove her lover's affection even if they cost only $2.50.

NOT only do they fit faultlessly and wash perfectly but they are made in the most exquisite range of colors.

COME and see them for yourself—you will be surprised at the suede-like texture and lovely designs.

BRITAIN SUGGESTS RUM SHIP CHANGES

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—The aid Larry Christiansen, an American coast guardsman, is said to have given in the hi-jacking exploits charged by the British government at Nassau against "Pop" Nesle has led to informal conversations between Great Britain and the United States with a view to ratification of the working agreement reached in 1926 for British cooperation in curbing rum smuggling in the Bahamas.

The chief concern of the British authorities, it was learned today, is that assurances be given by the Washington government that, in future, activities of American coast guard craft within British territorial waters will be so conducted as to avoid embarrassments to the Nassau officials such as developed in the Christiansen-Nesle case. In effect, the British suggestion is that only vessels under responsible American officers, presumably of commissioned rank, be intrusted with carrying out the observation mission within British waters provided for in the 1926 agreement.

GERMANS TO OFFER SYNTHETIC RUBBER

Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, November 12.—(AP)—Important progress by the German chemical industry since the war, including the development of commercial synthetic rubber, was described today before the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the Chemical Industrialists' Protective union.

It was announced that the German dye syndicate, "I. G. Farbenindustrie," has sufficiently progressed with experimentation in producing synthetic rubber to apply for world patents and that synthetic rubber would soon appear on the world markets as a commercial commodity. The synthetic product was declared to be the equal of the natural rubber and cheaper in cost of production, thus permitting its active competition with the natural product.

Dr. A. von Weinberg, a privy councillor and director of Farbenindustrie, explained that the synthetic rubber was obtained by "contact synthesis," a process which has been under experimentation ever since the war.

U. S. TARIFF OFFER APPROVED IN FRANCE

Paris, November 12.—(AP)—The French cabinet today approved a temporary Franco-American tariff arrangement. A new schedule of duties on American goods will be promulgated shortly by a governmental decree.

The cabinet approved the arrangement this forenoon and Minister of Commerce Bokanowski, presenting the matter, announced that the "negotiations have been very happily concluded.

While the French and American experts take the time necessary to negotiate a durable arrangement between the two countries the new schedule approved by the cabinet will reinstate the tariff formerly accorded to the United States except where the recent German commercial treaty with France establishes higher than minimums. In this case the United States will be on the same basis as Germany.

THREE MEN SOUGHT FOR ATTACK ON GIRL

Commerce, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Search was being made throughout this section today for three white men who are said to have kidnaped and assaulted a 14-year-old girl on the outskirts of Commerce at 9:30 o'clock last night. No clue to the identity of the men has been obtained.

The victim of the attack lives in Toccoa and is visiting an uncle here and in company with the uncle and his daughter attended a local show last night. The girl complained of having a severe headache and told her companion that she would return home alone, the distance being only a few hundred yards.

According to the story told officers by the girl, as she was proceeding down one of the principal streets here toward the home of her uncle, a closed car drove up and stopped and three young men flung the doors open, grabbed her and at the same time placed a handkerchief saturated with chloroform over her face, placed her in the car and carried her to the outskirts of the city to an isolated spot and assaulted her. She said none of the men was known to her.

The screams of the girl alarmed the neighborhood and she was brought into the city and given medical attention. She is at the home of her uncle, in a highly nervous condition, it is said.

The board of commissioners of Jackson county today offered $500 reward and the city of Commerce offered a reward of $200 for the arrest of the men wanted in the case. Governor Hardman is also expected to offer a reward for the state.

The girl's parents formerly lived near Commerce and the girl bears an excellent reputation, it is said here.

Thugs, Burglars, Holdups Busy Saturday Night

H. M. Harden, of 262 Ormond street, reported to police late Saturday night that he was held up by two negroes and robbed of $60 near his home.

Miss Lucile Johnson, of 248 Capitol avenue, had her purse snatched by a negro as she was going home early Saturday night, according to police reports. Miss Johnson was robbed of $30.

The home of Beaumont Davidson, at 691 Penn avenue, was robbed of a quantity of clothing early Saturday night, according to police reports.

Miss Dorothy Fain, of 223 Ponce de Leon avenue, reported that her apartment was visited by burglars early Saturday night and a quantity of clothing was missing.

The home of Dr. W. F. Huff, on Emory road, was entered by burglars and a quantity of clothing was taken, police were told.

L. P. Hancock, of 516 Whitehall street, reported that a Victrola was stolen from his home Saturday night.

TROOPERS ASKED FOR STRIKE ZONE

Denver, November 12.—(AP)—Governor H. W. Adams was asked today to send additional state officers to the northern Colorado I. W. W. coal strike zone.

Harry Raymond, in charge of the state law enforcement squad in the district, reported that "conditions in Weld county are critical and I believe we can use at least 25 more men." Raymond said operators were planning to reopen their mines in northern Colorado next week.

All the northern mines but one, the Columbine in Weld county, have been idle since the I. W. W. strike was called nearly four weeks ago. A huge strikers' mass meeting was held near the Columbine mine today.

State officers in the southern Colorado fields remained on duty although no activity was reported on the part of the strikers. Unconfirmed reports reached the state officers that the strikers planned to resume picketing next week.

Southern Colorado mines were operating with working forces between a half and three-quarters normal.

Hearing on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, filed by eight of the I. W. W. strike leaders held in southern Colorado jails, has been set for next Friday by Federal District Judge J. Foster Symes.

The men allege they were arrested without warrant and are illegally deprived of their liberty.

EMORY DEBATERS PLAN TO MEET WESLEYAN TEAM

Emory University, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Tentative plans are that Emory university freshmen debaters will meet the Wesleyan college freshmen debaters this year, according to Wallace Alston, freshman debate coach. Last year Alston was a member of the Emory team that met and defeated the Wesleyan varsity team in the first intercollegiate debate of that kind of the south.

Emory has this year over 65 first year men working for the debate teams. Definite engagements have been arranged with Mercer freshmen, Tech freshmen, Emory university academy freshmen. Emory will probably meet freshmen teams from Dahlonega and teams from various colleges of North and South Carolina, it is stated.

MOTHER, FATHER, GIRL 2 INJURED IN CRASH

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Smith and their 2-year-old daughter, of Gordon road, were taken to Georgia Baptist hospital for treatment for injuries received when their car collided with one driven by E. A. Horton, of Carlsbad, N. M., at Lucile avenue and Holderness street, late Saturday night.

None of those injured in the crash was seriously injured, but a case of reckless driving was made against both drivers. Horton, who is visiting at 859 South Humphries street, was driving east on Lucile avenue, while Smith was going west. The cars met head-on.

FLOOD PREVENTION PROGRAM PLANNED

St. Louis, November 12.—(AP)—A definite program of action for development of inland waterways and flood prevention will be drafted in the ninth annual convention of the Mississippi Valley association here Monday and Tuesday, President James E. Smith said today.

"The Mississippi valley needs a substantial, adequately financed flood prevention plan, a federal plan sufficiently comprehensive to secure the full and complete development of the nation's entire water resources," Smith said. The major streams of the Mississippi valley, with their navigable tributaries, are in need of development that will be sufficiently substantial and permanent to protect capital already invested in barge and packet services, and at the same time attract the establishment of additional carrying facilities.

DR. CHARLES MEEKS, BOWMAN PHYSICIAN, PASSES SUDDENLY

And many others

THAT is the wonderful thing about the Duo Art. It brings into your own home the playing of the greatest artists—not a mechanical copy—not an imitation—but the exact rendition of the artists themselves!

YOU CAN get the Duo Art in the famous Steinway piano, "the instrument of the immortals." It is also available in the Weber and the George Steck. In fact, there is such a selection of models that you cannot help finding one exactly suited to your needs.

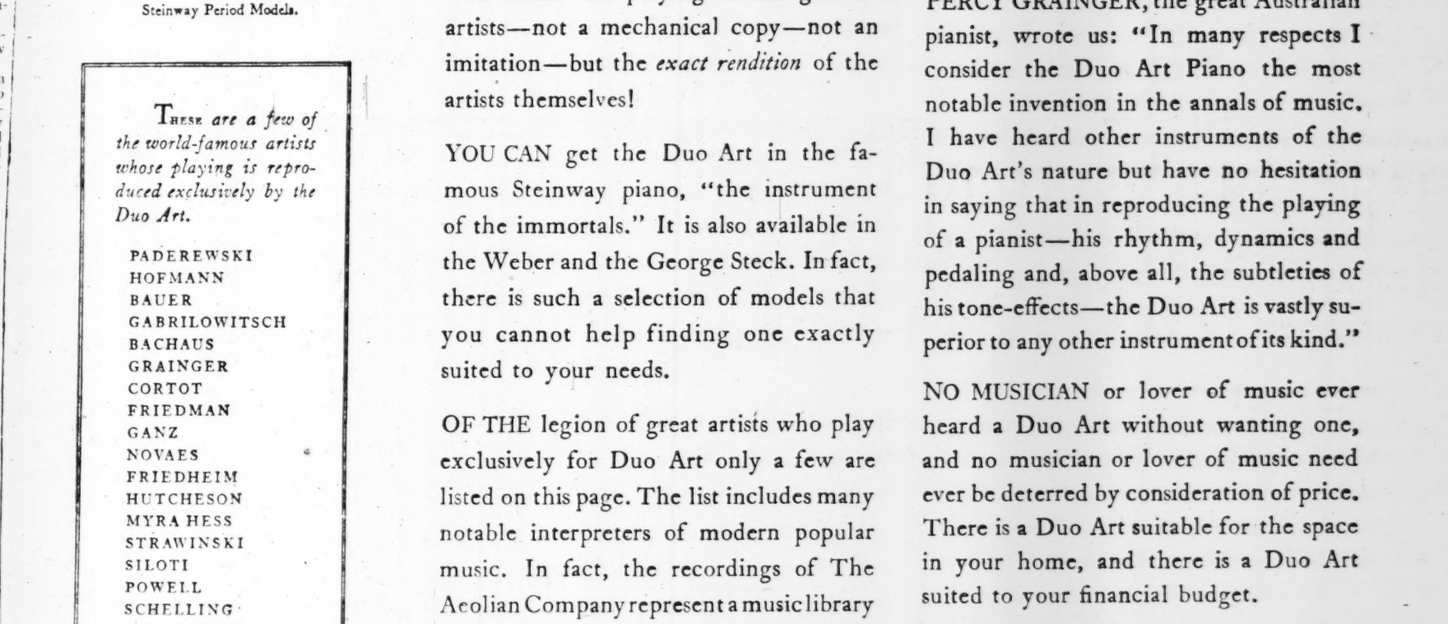

OF THE legion of great artists who play exclusively for Duo Art only a few are listed on this page. The list includes many notable interpreters of modern popular music. In fact, the recordings of The Aeolian Company represent a music library which is as all-embracing in the sphere of music as the public library of a great city is in the sphere of literature.

PERCY GRAINGER, the great Australian pianist, wrote us: "In many respects I consider the Duo Art Piano the most notable invention in the annals of music. I have heard other instruments of the Duo Art's nature but have no hesitation in saying that in reproducing the playing of a pianist—his rhythm, dynamics and pedaling and, above all, the subtleties of his tone-effects—the Duo Art is vastly superior to any other instrument of its kind."

NO MUSICIAN or lover of music ever heard a Duo Art without wanting one, and no musician or lover of music need ever be deterred by consideration of price. There is a Duo Art suitable for the space in your home, and there is a Duo Art suited to your financial budget.

TROLLINGER BOND HEARING DELAYED

At the request of Attorney Len B. Guillebeau, counsel for Thomas Trollinger, Simpson road "death farm" tenant, the hearing on an application for bail for the defendant which was scheduled for Saturday morning before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy in Fulton superior court, was postponed until Saturday, November 26.

Defense counsel filed the petition Thursday following Trollinger's indictment Monday on a charge of murdering Owen Carruthers, negro, whose body was unearthed on the farm just off of Simpson road, owned by L. B. Fuller.

At the hearing Mr. Guillebeau told the court that he placed subpoenae for witnesses whose names appear on the back of the indictment in the hands of the sheriff after filing the application for bail. The sheriff has been unable to locate the witnesses and could not serve them, counsel said, and therefore asked postponement of the hearing on this ground.

Under Two Indictments.

Trollinger is also under indictment for the murder of Millard Allen, who was shot to death Sunday afternoon, October 23, as he is alleged to have advanced upon Trollinger with a drawn knife, according to evidence at a preliminary hearing in municipal court on a murder warrant charging Trollinger with Allen's death. The defendant was exonerated and the warrant dismissed following testimony of several state's witnesses to the effect that Trollinger acted in self-defense.

The two cases against Trollinger have been placed on the trial calendar for Monday, November 21, before Judge G. H. Howard, in Fulton superior court. Since the charge are the initial cases for this date, the trial of Trollinger is slated to take precedence over all other cases on that date, according to attaches in the solicitor's office.

The state was represented at the hearing by Assistant Solicitor Roy LeCraw who readily agreed to the postponement as the cases against the defendant had been set for trial on the Monday before the date on which the hearing was continued.

In the event that the cases are not disposed of against his client before the date of the postponed hearing, Attorney Guillebeau said that he would insist on bonds being assessed in both cases against Trollinger.

Ready for Trial Monday.

The attorney expressed his satisfaction at the setting of the trials at such an early date and declared that he was "ready for trial" at any time on either or both of the indictments. He said that his client was anxious for trial and that he intended to prove that the grand jury had been induced to return the indictments "by reason of testimony of hearsay and rumors which are wholly false."

The state will contend that Trollinger beat Carruthers to death with an ax after the negro had been fired on by Millard Allen. The body was then buried in a cornfield on the "death farm" and unearthed by the officers on information from an anonymous party who also said that three or more negroes had been slain and buried on the farm.

It will be further contended that Allen knew of the burial of the negroes on the farm and that Trollinger shot and instantly killed Allen because Trollinger believed that his alleged co-partner in the alleged crime was "talking."

The trials are slated to bring out startling disclosures of a "moonshine vendetta," sordid floggings of several negroes, suspicious feuds growing out of the illicit trade in liquor and grim details of death.

Assistant Solicitor John H. Hudson will prosecute the cases for the state.

VIADUCT AWARDS IN CONDEMNATION SUITS ARE FILED

Two condemnation awards fixing the price of properties which will be used by the city for street purposes to allow ingress and egress to the streets to be affected by the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts, were filed Saturday morning in Fulton superior court.

The Rhodes-Haverty Investment company set the price for their property at $75,000. The award was made by Ward Wight, representing the city; M. S. Parker, representing the investment company, and J. N. Malone, as the third man.

The second condemnation award was filed by the Central Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, south, the price was set at $35,000, John N. Malone represented the city; A. G. Grant the church, and J. H. Ewing, as the third man in agreeing on the sum of the award.

Jackson, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—With appropriate exercises, citizens of Butts county honored the veterans of the world war in the Armistice day program held Friday. Robert H. Jones, Jr., of Atlanta, a leader in Georgia Kiwanis and a well-known speaker, made the principal address of the day.

The exercises were held in the courthouse auditorium at 3 o'clock and business houses closed to pay honor to the veterans. Members of the Kiwanis club, of which Colonel Jones is a well-known member, attended the exercises in a body. The exercises consisted of patriotic songs, an address of welcome and introduction by Mayor O. A. Pound and the address by Colonel Jones.

Following the exercises in the courthouse the members of the Jackson Rifles had a parade and this was followed by a barbecue for veterans of the world war.

The program was put on by all the civic and patriotic organizations in the community, and the occasion was celebrated with interest and spirit.

SERIES OF FIRES ALARM BUCKHEAD; MEETING CALLED

Alarmed over the series of four fires, which caused losses in the Buckhead community during the past two weeks, members of the Northside Improvement club have called a mass meeting to discuss fire protection for the future. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the R. L. Hope school.

County commissioners and leading citizens of the community have been asked to address the gathering. A. M. Smith is president of the Improvement club.

NOTED CONFIDENCE MAN IS ARRESTED

Detroit, November 12.—(AP)—Charles B. Knightly, 55, nationally-known confidence man, was arrested here today, after it was learned he had launched projects entailing investments of more than a million dollars, while posing as a personal representative of the DuPont interests and the General Motors corporation.

Knightley, according to police, came here in February, posing as a representative of Eugene Du Pont, the Walters-Du Pont estate and the American home foundation of New York.

Obtained Financial Backing.

He is said to have obtained financial backing from local bankers for purchase of hundreds of acres of land near the Yellow Coach company plant at Pontiac, ostensibly to build workers' homes. The plans called for construction of the homes in uniform groups of about 600. An elaborate advertising campaign was carried on.

While the project was still in a tentative stage, Knightley went to Canada, hired architects and announced plans for building an elaborate American club there. Stock in the club was sold throughout the United States. He approached Julius Haas, a Detroit banker, in regard to purchase of some property adjacent to the proposed club site on which Haas had an option. Unable to find the man's rating in Dun's, Haas turned the matter over to the Better Business bureau here, and that organization obtained the service of a private detective agency to assist in the investigation.

Knightley was found to have several swindling convictions against him and to have served terms in New York, Ohio, Massachusetts and Canada. He is said to be wanted in New York for swindling a dentist of $14,000.

Put Under Arrest.

He was arrested on a fugitive warrant from New York and announced he would waive extradition.

Private operatives tonight declared if projects put under way in this district by Knightley had materialized, he would have realized more than $5,000,000. He maintained an elaborate suite of offices in the General Motors building here and published a paper known as the "Vertical City News," which was claimed to be a house organ of the General Motors corporation. General Motors executives disclaimed knowledge of the publication.

COOLIDGES BOARD YACHT FOR TRIP DOWN POTOMAC

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge, with ten guests, boarded the Mayflower today for a trip down the Potomac.

The guests were: Senator Swanson and Mrs. Swanson, of Virginia; Representative and Mrs. Aldrich, of Rhode Island; Representative and Mrs. Frear, of Wisconsin; Major General and Mrs. Summerall and Admiral and Mrs. Eberle.

Ex-Wife of Ward, Divorced in Reno, To Marry Again

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Beryl Curtis Ward, back from Reno where she divorced Walter S. Ward, whose father acquired wealth in the baking business, has announced she will marry W. Lyle Alderson, wealthy New York importer, and then seek retirement to try for the happiness she believes still held out to her.

BENNING WILL GET ARMY TANK SCHOOL

Baltimore, Md., November 12.—(AP)—The army tank school now located at Camp Meade, Md., will be removed to Fort Benning, Ga., as soon as buildings and equipment can be provided there, it was learned at third corps area headquarters today. The change probably will not be effected before 1929 or 1930, officials said.

The change is deemed advisable because it will concentrate at Fort Benning courses of instruction included in the curriculum of the infantry school.

Troops of the tank corps now on duty at Camp Meade are not expected to be moved, it was stated.

According to word received at corps area headquarters, the change was decided upon last week by the war department.

Colonel Oliver C. Eskridge, area commandant, said Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, had considered making the transfer next year, but his plan in this respect was believed to have been altered after an inspection of facilities at Fort Benning. This led Colonel Eskridge to express the belief that the removal would not take place before 1929, and possibly not until 1930.

5 WOMEN'S COLLEGES QUIT STUDENT GROUP

Northampton, Mass., November 12.—(AP)—Because "too much money and energy are spent on conferences which overlap each other and have the same aims," five women's colleges—Smith, Vassar, Wellesley, Bryn Mawr and Mount Holyoke, today resigned from the Women's Intercollegiate Association for Student Government, which closed a three-day conference this morning. The five colleges will support only two conferences on student government in the future, one to be held in the spring and attended only by delegates of the five, and the other a meeting of the National Students federation. The conference, representing about 60 women's colleges, voted to hold its next session at Western Reserve university.

Piedmont Hotel Is Leased For 99 Years by Alexander

The Piedmont, famous Atlanta hostelry, leased for a period of 99 years to Charles T. Alexander, shown at the right.

LEASE ANNOUNCED OF PIEDMONT HOTEL

hotel in Louisville, costing $750,000, was built by Mr. Alexander in 1914.

Mr. Alexander is a North Carolinian by birth and an alumnus of the University of North Carolina. In addition to his hotel interests he is a good roads advocate and interested in civic developments generally. He is an active officer of the Appalachian Tours, Inc., as well as of the Appalachian Scenic highway, both of which are conducting campaigns to route tourists through Atlanta.

The Piedmont hotel property is considered one of the finest pieces of realty in the south. The building is ten stories and basement and occupies a lot with a frontage of 161 feet on Peachtree street, 182 on Luckie and 149 on Forsyth, being almost a whole city block.

All these streets are traffic thoroughfares. Within a radius of an eighth of a mile of it there are eight theaters accommodating 15,000 people. In a quarter-mile radius there are ten other hotels and 35 office buildings. A total of 1,234 street cars and 133 busses pass its doors daily.

The building was erected in 1903 by Senator Hoke Smith, George W. and Samuel Parrot and was incorporated as the Piedmont Hotel company. They and their heirs still own it. It has since its opening continued to be one of the leading hotels of the south.

The construction is of steel, reinforced concrete, brick and stone. The late Willis F. Denny was the architect and Miles & Bradt the contractors. George W. Parrott personally supervised the work. The construction was so solid that there is hardly a crack in the plaster.

The title to the Piedmont hotel property reveals an interesting history of the rise of Atlanta real estate values from the time Henry G. Collier bought the half-acre tract extending from Peachtree street to Forsyth street along Luckie for $300, from Reuben Cone and Annie Williams, February 1, 1850. Four and a half years later Henry Collier sold the property to Merill Collier for $2,260.

Later, with division of the half-acre tract, William Ezzard paid $3,980 for the block on which the hotel now stands, selling afterwards for a profit of more than $15,000. In 1901 the Piedmont Hotel company, the present owners, bought the site of the hotel, measuring 128 feet on Peachtree street, 182 feet on Luckie street and 33 feet at the intersection of Luckie, Broad and Peachtree streets, for $125,000 in separate parcels from Hoke Smith, W. S. Everett and George W. Parrott.

will be constructed on the Forsyth street side, with an entrance from that street. The Peachtree frontage will be lowered to the street level. A mezzanine floor will be built over the Forsyth street shops, with a lounge and rooms for various purposes. The basement will be rearranged to provide for a rathskeller, laundry and shops of various kinds. Alterations in all the rooms will be made.

To Meet Requirements.

These changes, the owners of the property and its lessee agreed, became necessary to meet the present day requirements of Atlanta, although the spacious lobby and public rooms with high ceilings, which had given comfort and safety to patrons are to be largely retained.

Mr. Alexander is a notable figure among hotel men in the country, having contracted and operated some of the leading hostelries in the United States. The Hotel Patten, at Chattanooga, was erected and opened by him in 1908. It cost $815,000. The Hotel Briston, in his home town, built and opened by him in 1911. In 1913 he built and opened the Hotel Ohio, at Youngstown, Ohio, at a cost of $900,000. The construction of the Windsor hotel at Wheeling, W. Va., was financed by him in 1914 at a cost of $750,000. THREE ARE BURNED TO DEATH IN HOME

Batavia, Ohio, November 12.—(AP)—Jesse Darlington, 25, his mother and baby son were burned to death, and his wife was burned probably fatally when their farm home near here was destroyed by fire today.

BOTH SIDES CLAIM KENTUCKY VICTORY

Louisville, November 12.—(AP)—Charges of corruption and fraud in last Tuesday's state-wide election, coupled with claims of success for their respective tickets, were made in statements issued tonight by chairmen of the democratic and republican campaign committees.

Without disclosing figures upon which their claims were based, republican headquarters claimed to have elected Flem D. Sampson, candidate for governor, and the entire state ticket.

The democrats admitted that Sampson was "elected" but a statement issued by Thomas S. Rhea, chairman of the democratic state campaign committee, said the committee could not concede that the republican nominee had been elected by "free suffrage of the people."

INJUNCTION HOLDS UP CLEVELAND ELECTION

Cleveland, Ohio, November 12.—(AP)—A temporary injunction barring the board of elections from certifying the results of Tuesday's vote on the proposed city charter amendment sponsored by former Governor Harry L. Davis was granted today by Judge Frederick P. Walther in common plea court. The board also was enjoined from destroying the ballots.

The injunction marked the first step in Davis' announced plan to obtain a new election on the ground that the vote Tuesday was fraudulent.

The Davis amendment would have declared the city manager's office vacant Monday, with Carl F. Shuler, city law director, serving as acting mayor until January 17 when a new mayor, named at a special election, would take charge of the city government. It would also have eliminated the present proportional representation feature of the existing charter.

GRADE CROSSING RULING IS ASKED OF HIGHEST COURT

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—The supreme court having recently held that persons who crossed railroad tracks did so at their own risk, was asked today to decide how far states can go in eliminating grade crossings.

The question reached the court in two appeals granted by New York state courts to the Staten Island Rapid Transit railway to test out the validity of the transit commission's order in 1925 for the elimination of grade crossings over its tracks at Belair road, Hope and Tomkins avenues, Fort Wadsworth.

The railway in its appeals contended that the order deprived it of its constitutional rights by taking its property without due process of law and challenged the right of a state to regulate grade crossings of interstate carriers, asserting that such power has been placed by congress in the interstate commerce commission.

SENATOR HARRIS WILL MAKE TOUR OF GEORGIA TOWNS

United States Senator William J. Harris will make a short speaking tour of Georgia, beginning Monday, November 14, it was announced Saturday.

Senator Harris will speak at 11 o'clock in the courthouses in the following places: Blackshear, Monday; Ocilla, Tuesday; Monticello, Wednesday; Waynesboro, Thursday, and Marietta, Friday.

POLES CELEBRATE INDEPENDENCE

Rome, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Poland's ambassador to the holy see, her minister to Italy and Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, today attended a special service of the Church of San Stanislao, in honor of the anniversary of the independence of Poland.

After the services the Polish ambassador gave a luncheon to Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, and Paderewski. Later Pope Pius received the pianist in special audience.

NEW BARITONE MAKES METROPOLITAN DEBUT

New York, November 12.—(United News.)—Everett Marshall, 26-year-old baritone from Lawrence, Mass., made his operatic debut with the Metropolitan Opera company tonight. He sang the secondary baritone role of the Herald in Wagner's opera, "Lohengrin."

A large and friendly audience heard him and, although Marshall's role was a minor one, he was cordially received. Friends and relatives of the singer were among those crowding the house.

Marshall pursued his musical studies both in the United States and abroad. He is scheduled to sing in tomorrow's Sunday night operatic concert. A feature of the program is to be a duet sung by Marshall and Frederick Jagel, young Brooklyn tenor, who made his first appearance with the company in "Aida" last Tuesday.

WINSTON CHURCHILL HITS BACK AT WELLS

Southend on Sea, England, November 12.—(AP)—Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, hits back at H. G. Wells, the novelist, who in a recent letter indorsed the liberal candidate as opposed to Lady Iveagh, the conservative candidate, on the ground of the war-like policy of the conservative government.

In a message to Lady Iveagh, in which the chancellor refers to Wells' allegation that the government was heading for war, he says:

"It is wrong to make an untrue statement like this and indescribably mean to make an untrue statement for the paltry purpose of cadging votes."

HELD IN ST. LOUIS, MAN IDENTIFIED AS NOTED CROOK

St. Louis, November 12.—A man arrested here last Saturday while committing a burglary was identified today as a member of the notorious Adler gang of burglars and check-passers, whose operations in the last three years were said by detectives to run above a million dollars.

Police at Cleveland, Detroit, Baltimore and Chicago asked that the man be held. Cleveland police said he had jumped a bond there. The man gave the name of Richard Berg, 24. He used a different name in each of the other cities. He furnished bond after his arrest here and police fear he will jump it.

of the evidence uncovered in the police investigation, stated that he was satisfied they had ample proof as to the guilty parties to secure indictments and he added that the police department was determined to put a stop to this form of law breaking in Atlanta.

Lieutenant Shaw was assisted in his investigation by Detectives B. P. Gillespie and J. Lewis Whitley, following a preliminary investigation of the Gray street affair by Police Captain J. L. Gordon and Call Officers Claude Carroll and H. H. Hardy.

A virtual reign of terror, it is said, has existed among negro residents of the fifth ward during recent months, caused by a series of explosions which have wrecked houses and injured some of their occupants. No intimation was given by Lieutenant Shaw as to the possible motive of the perpetrators of the explosions.

NOTABLE FLIERS COOLIDGE GUESTS

A reception for the fliers will be held Monday afternoon by Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken, civilian air chief.

Most of the famous fliers, including Lindbergh, will add an ultra-modern touch by flying to Washington tomorrow and Monday for the events, planned by President Coolidge and aviation leaders as a fitting close to the nation's "flying year."

The fliers expect to form an association among themselves to promote weather service for trans-Atlantic flights, as a preliminary to expected development of regular over-ocean airplane service.

Those expected to be at President Coolidge's table, in addition to Lindbergh, Levine and Miss Elder, are:

George Haldemann, Miss Elder's co-pilot on the flight from New York to the Dutch tanker Barendrecht off the Azores.

Bert Acosta, Bernt Balchen and George Noville, who flew with Byrd on his New York to France flight.

William S. Brock and Edward P. Schlee, who crossed the Atlantic to London and then flew across Europe and Asia to Japan.

Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert Hegenberger, first to fly from San Francisco to Hawaii.

Arthur C. Goebel, winner of the later Dole race to Hawaii, and Captain William V. Davis, who accompanied him.

The Hubbard medal ceremonies will be attended by President Coolidge and many notables, and will be broadcast nationally by 15 radio stations.

RUTH ELDER OPENS FIRST BANK ACCOUNT.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Ruth Elder, Dixie flier, today opened what she said was her first bank account with a check for $500, presented her by a watch company. George W. Haldeman, her co-pilot on the "American Girl" on their ill-fated flight to Paris, accompanied her to the bank.

It was a quiet day for the fliers, who rested at their hotels after yesterday's strenuous reception. Miss Elder remained with Lyle Womack, her husband, emerging from a trip to the bank in a striking ensemble suit of deep red and white, with a hat of the same color.

Monday, if the weather is favorable, Miss Elder and Haldeman will fly to Washington to attend a reception to be given by President Coolidge to all trans-Atlantic fliers.

Bars Panama Trip.

Concerning her plans for the future, Miss Elder said she would not go to Panama, where her husband has been employed, in the near future. As to their personal plans, she said they had not yet had time to talk them over.

She showed resentment toward those who have criticized her husband for not having taken any part in her activities since her return from France.

"Lyle is all right," said Miss Elder. "We understand each other perfectly."

During the day a representative of the mayor of Wheeling, W. Va., called to pay the respects of the city to Miss Elder.

Bird Grocery Dividend.

Bird Grocery Stores, Inc., has declared the initial quarterly dividend of 1 3-4 per cent on the preferred stock, payable December 1, 1927, to stockholders of record November 21.

Care of Babies

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. And it is so pleasant to take. Taste it yourself and you'll know why "Children Cry for It."

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or when you even suspect the approach of constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. See how quickly all fretfulnes or wakefulness will cease!

Only one word of warning; the above advice is true of genuine Castoria.* The kind called Fletcher's, bearing Fletcher's signature is genuine —and does not contain opiates or any other drug that can harm your baby. Other preparations may be just as free from harm; the writer does not know as to that, but does know one family whose children will never make the experiment!

"SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

Atlanta in Art Limelight

:: Tech Graduate Hangs Etchings in New York Gallery ::

As Exhibitors Show Works

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Atlanta stands in the limelight in matters pertaining to art this month. In New York a graduate of Georgia Tech, and native Georgian, will see an exhibition of his own etchings take first place in current matters artistic in that metropolis.

And in Atlanta itself, at the High Museum of Art, exhibitions of the works of three artist, one an Atlantan and two natives of Texas, are on display for the balance of the month. They fill every gallery in the beautiful museum on Peachtree at Fifteenth and include some of the most fascinating, peculiar and beautiful examples of modern painting and etching ever seen here.

It is expected, though not yet certain, that the exhibition now in New York, by Phillip Harris Giddens, of Americus and Georgia Tech, will be brought to Atlanta a little later.

A new collection to be shown to the public at the High Museum on Monday, and for the balance of the month, is from the brush of Everett Gee Jackson, of Texas, one of the most important of the younger American workers in oils. The works of Mr. Jackson, and the subjects he has chosen, both show unique contrast to any exhibit previously hung in the museum and wide interest is sure to be awakened in these colorful canvases.

Then there is that collection of eachings and block pictures by Blanding Sloan, erstwhile Texan but now nomadic artist of lower California. It is safe to say that no one can go and look at Mr. Sloan's etchings without being fascinated. Some of the fascination may be peculiar in origin, for it must be admitted that, in both subject and treatment, Mr. Sloan is an artist unlike anything before seen on land or sea. Bizarre is a mild term to apply to his work. In fact, without disrespect, it would be easy to apply adjectives that would never be permitted in a home newspaper.

The third exhibit is of the work of Athos Menaboni and one never saw more delicate coloring than is effected in these watercolors. Beauty and charm belong intrinsically to Mr. Menaboni's work. The roomful of his creations is a dream of exquisite color and loveliness of subject. It is an important showing in itself.

Mr. Jackson, whose collection is thrown open for public inspection Monday, studied at the Chicago Art institute, at the San Diego Academy of Fine Arts and under the famous impressionist, Otto Schneider. For the past four years he has lived and painted in old Mexico, preferably in the primitive villages and many of his canvases have won important prizes at the greater art exhibitions of the country.

All three exhibits are of the distinctly modern type—modernity and futurism is having its showing at the High Museum this month and, whether or not you follow all the developments of the art world; whether or not you enjoy looking at lovely paintings for their loveliness alone, you will be far from wise if you miss seeing these Sloan etchings; the watercolors of Menaboni, or the oils of Jackson. For they will provide an important conversational topic in many Atlanta homes for months to come and it is altogether possible that they will reveal, to many Atlantans, the depths or shallownesses of their own souls.

ATLANTAN IS SELECTED TO HEAD STATE NURSES

Miss Anna Bess Feebeck, for the past 15 years connected with Grady hospital and superintendent of nurses at the institution for the last several years, was named as head of the Georgia State Nurses' association at the meeting held Thursday in Macon.

MISS ANNA BESS FEEBECK.

Miss Feebeck is one of the oldest institution employees in the state in point of service, and Saturday was receiving the congratulations of her friends on her selection to guide the destinies of the association for the coming year.

She was raised highly Saturday by Steve R. Johnston, superintendent of Grady hospital. Mr. Johnston also congratulated the association on its selection.

PROMINENT LOCAL MEN FORM NEW LAW FIRM

T. V. Morrison and Albert S. Anderson, Jr., are principals in the newly-formed law firm of Morrison and Anderson, which will occupy quarters at 308 Candler building. Mr. Morrison is the senior member of the firm, and Mr. Anderson the junior partner.

Mr. Morrison is widely known throughout Georgia for his work in Greek letter college fraternities during the past eight years. He is the founder of Alpha Lambda Tau, a national fraternity, a graduate of Oglethorpe university and the Lamar school of law at Emory university.

At Oglethorpe Mr. Morrison won a place on the football team and membership in the famous "O" letter club. He was also active in dramatics and debating. While at Emory he was elected alumni president of the class of 1924 at the final meeting, a position to which he was named for a five-year term. Mr. Morrison is also prominent in Masonic circles.

Mr. Anderson also is a graduate of the Lamar school of law. He is a charter member of Lamar's inn, of the Phi Delta Phi international legal fraternity, and a member of Masonic orders here.

Mr. Anderson's father, Albert S. Anderson, Sr., of Millen, Ga., is a former solicitor general of the Ogeechee judicial circuit, and prominent in legal circles at Millen.

COMPLETE MODEL OF LARGE BRIDGE ON DISPLAY HERE

A complete model of the 10-mile bridge which spans Mobile bay, near the city of Mobile, is on exhibit in the arcade at the Biltmore hotel. Passersby are evincing much interest in the display, arranged by Ewing S. Humphreys, of the Virginia Bridge and Iron company, of Atlanta.

The original structure was erected by the Cochrane Bridge company, of Mobile, from a fund raised by popular subscription. This bridge completed the first link of the Gulf Coast highway from New Orleans to Florida points. Four other bridges along the route are nearing completion.

HOME-MAKING TOPIC OF AVONDALE PASTOR

Rev. Adiel Jarrett Monerief, Jr., pastor of the Avondale Baptist church, Avondale Estates, will preach tonight the second of a series of Sunday evening sermons to young people on the general theme, "Love, Marriage and Homemaking." The first of the series was delivered last Sunday evening to a large congregation of the young people, and the interest is increasing. The series will probably run until December 1.

JAMES NELSON HUSTON DIES IN WASHINGTON

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—James Nelson Huston, 78 years old, United States treasurer during Harrison's administration, died here today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Howard M. Gordon, after an illness of five weeks.

Huston was born at Greencastle, Pa., but moved to Indiana when a young boy. He engaged in politics there, and after leading the republican state commitee in the year Harrison was elected, was appointed United States treasurer, from which post he resigned in 1892 to enter business. For the past 12 years he had engaged in real estate business in New York and Washington.

Besides Mrs. Gordon, another daughter, Mrs. H. D. Crippen, of New York, survives him. Funeral services will be conducted here Monday.

FOREIGN PRESS CLUB IS FORMED IN WASHINGTON

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Emphatic evidence of Washington's place in the limelight of international events came today with the announcement of the formation here of an association of newspaper correspondents, whose job it is to "cover" for foreign readers what transpires in the national and international aspects of American life. Nearly all important foreign capitals, such as London, Paris and Berlin, has similar groupings of foreign newspapermen.

The announcement of formation of the "Foreign Press Association of Washington, D. C." was made by Robert J. Remy, manager of the American bureau of the Havas News agency of Paris. A temporary committee, composed of Remy, Wilmot E. Lewis, representing the London Times, and Dr. Max Jodon, Washington representative of the Berliner Tageblatt, has been named to arrange for the election of a board of directors of the new organization, which will make its headquarters at the National Press club, of which all of the foreign correspondents are members.

FRECKLES

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckleface, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes your freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist or department store and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove your freckles.—(adv.)

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottle.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.—(adv.)

Maier and Pattison Recital At Auditorium Wednesday

Guy Maier, right, and Lee Pattison, whose two piano recitals have won them an enviable place on the American concert stage, will appear in concert on Wednesday evening at the city auditorium under the auspices of the Atlanta Music club.

Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, American pianists, who will be presented in a recital of music for two pianos under the auspices of the Atlanta Music club on Wednesday evening at the city auditorium, are outstanding figures in their chosen field of music. Prior to the advent of these young pianists there were practically no musicians who devoted their efforts exclusively to this form of expression. Since their student days in Boston, and in Berlin under Arthur Schnabel, they have devoted themselves most exclusively to programs of music for two pianos.

Their work has brought about a veritable renaissance of two-piano playing and given fresh inspiration to present-day composers. Leo Sowerby, Ernest Hutcheson, Leopold Godowsky, John Alden Carpenter and others have written compositions for two pianos, dedicated to Maier and Pattison.

On the program which they will present here, the modern school of music will be amply and interestingly presented. They even play a glorified jazz, thereby confounding the lofty of brow and delighting all the rest.

The program will include, beside numbers by Bach, Saint-Saens, Rachmaninoff, Chopin, Poulenc and Liszt, the "Two Etudes in C Major" by Chopin and freely arranged by Maier, these being the familiar "Butterfly" and "Black Key" studies which are played simultaneously on two pianos; Brahms' "Six Love Waltzes" arranged by Maier and another of his arrangements, that of Dohnanyi's "Valses" from the operetta, "The Veil of Pierrette."

Maier and Pattison's tour extending from Boston to Havana and from New York to San Francisco will include some 40 concerts and a series of six afternoon concerts for the school children of Kansas City.

Tickets for this second attraction on the "civic series" presented by the Atlanta Music club, will go on sale Monday morning at Phillips & Crew Piano company.

BURNS OPERATIVE TELLS FULL STORY

William J. Burns himself, reads almost like a moving picture scenario.

As Gordon told the story in the presence of Pinchot and McMullin, the Philadelphia man, who formerly was an insurance adjuster, was employed by the Burns agency on October 13 and sent here on October 18, after the oil trial jury had been sworn in.

Became Disgusted.

"McMullin became so disgusted within a few days that he went to Governor Pinchot," Gordon said. "He had read in the newspapers that Pinchot was in town and he sought him out because, as he expressed it, he knew the governor was on the level."

Roberts could scarcely believe the story at the outset, but had McMullin continue with the Burns men and report to the prosecutors. McMullin, it was stated, became disgusted because Charles G. Ruddy, in charge of the Burns' operatives, required him to sign reports which both knew had not the slightest foundation in fact. McMullin told the district attorney that these reports, bearing on the alleged movements of Lamb, were to be used if the defense found it necessary to move for a mistrial.

It was on the basis of McMullin's reports that government counsel finally went before Justice Siddons to present the reports of the activities of the Burns men and to suggest a mistrial in which defense counsel joined. This was on October 31.

Still the Burns people were in ignorance as to how the government got its information. McMullin never came under suspicion and two days after the mistrial was ordered he was asked to make an affidavit based upon the false reports he said he had signed concerning the activities of Lamb, "the government agent" to whom Burns referred in making his charge of jury tampering by the government.

Sparred for Time.

As the story was related by Gordon, McMullin declined to do so until he could see the report dealing with Lamb. He was sparring for time until he could see Roberts. He was told to return to Philadelphia, which he did after reporting to Roberts. The original report had been sent to New York and a Burns agent was ordered to take it to Washington so McMullin could see it.

Meantime Roberts had told McMullin to make the affidavit as requested. Frank J. O'Reilly, another of the Burns men, made another affidavit, which was presented to Justice Siddons along with that of McMullin. Government counsel were kept constantly informed of every move by the Burns men and naturally learned that the affidavits had been prepared.

Long was kept around the courthouse from the beginning of the grand jury investigation and in order to camouflage the real purpose for which he was wanted, District Attorney Gordon summoned all of the private operatives to Washington.

In Jury Room.

Time and time again the operatives were taken into the grand jury room singly and asked a few questions then excused. Gordon said his information was that they reported to William J. Burns as to what they had told the jurors and were told that they had done fine in not telling the grand jury anything.

On the day that Burns was announcing the filing of the affidavits directed against Lamb, McMullin was in the office of Neil Burkinshaw, assistant district attorney in charge of the investigation, preparing an affidavit of six or seven pages, embodying the knowledge he had gained from his contact with the operatives.

Gordon and Burkinshaw took elaborate precautions to deceive Burns and his own men as to what was going on behind the scenes scarcely a dozen feet away. The Burns men were hustled in and out of the grand jury room while McMullin was dictating to a speedy stenographer.

When the dictation was over, a notary was sent for and taken quietly into another room. McMullin was escorted to the grand jury room, sworn under the name of Long, and, as Burkinshaw himself puts it, was asked a number of meaningless questions by the young assistant prosecutor. When word went in that the transcribing of the affidavit had been complete, Long was hustled into still another room, where he read, swore to and signed the affidavit while there again was a procession of Burns men passing in review before the grand jury.

Work in Open.

Burkinshaw explained that he decided to work right under the eyes of Burns and his men because if he met McMullin away from the courthouse their suspicions would have been aroused. He was apprehensive that his plan might go awry, but apparently it was entirely successful.

McMullin finally told his whole story to the grand jury today for the first time after Pinchot had testified, Monday the Burns, father and two sons, W. Sherman and Raymond, and their operatives will be recalled and given an opportunity to amplify their previous testimony. Most of them have been before the jury at least twice and some even more than that.

From the time of the mistrial the Burns men knew, as they put it, that they had been "sold out," but they professed complete ignorance as to the identity of the person from whom the government got its information. They even questioned newspaper men on that point.

And during the 12 days they were in doubt, McMullin mingled with them freely, attending what Gordon described as their "pep" meetings, at which the grand jury investigation was discussed seriously and facetiously, and promptly reporting to District Attorney Gordon or to Burkinshaw by telephone. Sometimes his reports went in while the meetings were in progress and Gordon said he had difficulty in understanding because of the "hilarity" of the other operatives in a nearby room.

These meetings continued until the early hours of the mornings and Gordon and Burkinshaw said they were awakened as late as 2 a. m., to receive reports from McMullin. This operative told Gordon that he had been directed by his superiors to stick to the story of his reports when he testified before the grand jury.

Pinchot was closely guarded against interviewers while he was at the courthouse today, but when he reached his home on Rhode Island avenue he showed no hesitancy in talking to an Associated Press reporter, who waited for him there.

Pinchot Talks.

"On October 24," said the former governor, "a man came to me, because he said he thought I was on the level and he wanted to give information concerning attempts to influence the Fall-Sinclair jury.

"He said he was disgusted with the whole affair and wanted to tell the 'whole story.' I sent him to Owen Roberts, government oil counsel, and so far as I know this was the first indication of what was going on.

"Roberts had him tell the story to District Attorney Gordon and this man, whose name is McMullen, swore to an eight-page affidavit which tells very much more than anything that has come out so far.

"It reveals that the Burns detectives were not only trying to tamper with the jury, but were trying to make it appear that the government was tampering with the jury."

Pinchot said that he knew of no reason that the Burns detective had come to him other than that they had a mutual friend. McMullen is said to come here from Philadelphia.

"McMullen might have known that I have been fighting these fellows a long time," Pinchot said, "but he only said that he came to me because he thought I was on the level."

McMullin Praised.

Far from suspecting McMullin, William J. Burns, according to the operative, frequently praised him and patted him on the back when he reported he had told the grand jury nothing, and even called upon him to drive him around Washington in his car, which he brought from Philadelphia, at Burns' request.

Besides the report as to Lamb, McMullin told the prosecutors that he had been required to make a number of other false reports, including one that he had been in near-by Maryland. He said he never had been out of the city of Washington while on the operation except to go back to Philadelphia occasionally and that the report that he shadowed Juror Norman J. Glascock to Potomac flying field, near here, was a "sheer fabrication."

This was known to the Burns men, he asserted, adding that after he had sworn to the affidavit that he had seen Lamb and Glascock at that field, his superiors took him there so that he would know the "lay of the land" if the grand jury questioned him about that particular report.

While previously informed by McMullin that this report was fabricated, Gordon explained that he summoned Lamb and Glascock before the grand jury for questioning about it so as to further mislead Burns and his operatives as to the extent of the government's connection.

Quotes Burns.

While this phase of the inquiry was going forward, Gordon said he was informed that Burns told his men that they had the government prosecutors "running around in circles" and that they had nothing to worry about.

"It now seems appropriate," Gordon remarked with a smile, "that we should ask 'who's running around in circles now?'"

After Gordon had concluded his statement to the correspondents, Pinchot, who had remained at the courthouse for more than an hour, declared that McMullin had come to him "freely and out of patriotic loyalty to the government; asked no promise of reward, though he was apt to lose his job, and perhaps his life."

"It is unusual," he added, "that this is done in this sort of a case without the person asking for something." McMullin was under strict injunction from Gordon not to talk and the district attorney himself said there would be "no objection to the revelation of McMullin's activities and connection in this matter in more detail, except that the public interest requires that no disclosure be made this time as to all of his testimony touching the activities of his superior officers and fellow operatives."

Gordon would not amplify this statement nor would he say whether McMullin had directly connected Harry F. Sinclair with operations of the Burns men. He also refused to answer questions whether actual contacts had been made with the jurors.

Served as Lieutenant.

McMullin, who is a short stocky man, with wavy brown hair, served as a second lieutenant in the second aerial squadron at Kelly Field, Texas, during the war. He first enlisted in New York and then was transferred to a primary flying school at Columbus, Ohio, before being sent to Texas.

After the war he returned to Philadelphia and worked for some time as an insurance adjuster for a Philadelphia firm. When he sought employment with the Burns agency he used the name of a friend with that friend's consent, although he had his own automobile license in his own name throughout the time he was with the Burns men.

McMullin told the prosecutors that he was "not asked to produce his license of a detective when he applied for the job." It was explained that there was a "good reason" for McMullin enrolling under an assumed name, but that this reason could not be disclosed at this time.

The operative's whole story is in the affidavit which was made at the courthouse, and which Burkinshaw said he wanted made against the contingency that some accident might befall the "star" witness in the case.

28 DENOMINATIONS HAVE ARMY CHAPLAINS

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—The army" is not cluttered up with religious dissensions," although there are 28 denominations represented in the chaplains corps, providing "abundant variety" in religious expression, Colonel John T. Axton, chief of chaplains, points out in his annual report made public today.

Difficulty is experienced in maintaining "an established ratio" among the denominations due to "changes of denominational affiliations by men already in the corps," Colonel Axton said, but he added:

There were 21,208 religious services in the army during the last fiscal year with an estimated attendance of 1,780,578 and in addition chaplains officiated at 581 army marriages, 1,079 baptisms, and 1,283 funerals.

ROYAL CANADIAN TROOPS REVIEWED BY PRESIDENT

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—The Royal Canadian and 22d regiments of Canada's standing army were reviewed by President Coolidge today, the red-coated uniforms casting a brilliant picture against the executive mansion.

The troopers were aligned in two ranks on the south lawn of the white house, and the president, accompanied by his staff, and Vincent Massey, the Canadian minister, walked along the line in formal review. As Coolidge appeared the kilted Canadian Highland band played the "Star Spangled Banner" and later he posed with the troopers for pictures.

Earlier in the day Coolidge received at the white house a group of Canadian officials who came here to attend the unveiling of Canada's war memorial in Arlington cemetery to Americans who served in the Canadian forces during the world war, including J. H. King, minister of the soldier reestablishment, and J. L. Ralston, minister of defense.

HANKOW NATIVE CITY IS RAVAGED BY FIRE AS TROOPS EVACUATE

CHINESE GENERAL SEEKS TO DESTROY CITY ON RETREAT

Thousands of Troops and Civilians Are Roaming Streets and Engaged in Looting.

JAPANESE MARINES GUARD FOREIGNERS

Nanking Nationalists Are Now Seeking to Consolidate Position in Yangtse Valley.

Hankow, China, November 12.—(AP) The evacuating troops of General Tang Seng-chi set fire to the native city of Hankow tonight.

Thousands of troops and civilians are roaming the city, looting. Panic reigns.

YANG-TZE VALLEY ABLAZE WITH WAR.

Shanghai, November 12.—(AP)—The Yangtse valley is again ablaze with civil war, with the important inland commercial center of Hankow once more the scene of disorders.

tator at Hankow, General Tang Seng-chi, before the steady advance of the Nanking nationalists who have been opposing him, has left almost leaderless his unpaid troops, free to loot the city and striking terror in the hearts of the whole population including the foreigners.

Reports from the former capital of the nationalist regime, state that Japanese marines have landed, that the foreign concessions have been barricaded and that Chinese inhabitants of the city are moving on the foreign sections for protection.

Fighting and looting is going on in the city, say the advices, while the authorities for the Wuhan cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang is being handed over to Tang's successor, General Ho Chein, who is seeking to take command of the situation.

Meanwhile the Nanking nationalists, seeking to consolidate their position in the Yangtse valley again, are rushing on Hankow and the head of

ABRAHAM LINCOLN REFUSED RAILROAD JOB AT $10,000

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—Abraham Lincoln's influence on the building of railroads and his epochal decision not to become general counsel for the New York Central railroad just before he was nominated for president is related in "Lincoln and the Railroads," a new book by John W. Starr, Jr.

Lincoln had gone to New York in 1860 to make a political speech. There he met Erastus Corning, an executive of the Central. According to Starr, Corning offered Lincoln $10,000 a year as general counsel.

"Why, Mr. Corning, what could I do with $10,000 a year?" Starr credits Lincoln with having said. "It would ruin my family to have that much income. I don't believe I had better consider it."

Within a short time he was elected to the presidency of the United States.

Tears Caused By Court Plea Of Manoilescu

King Ferdinand Urged Return of Carol, Says Aide on Trial.

Bucharest, Rumania, November 12. (AP)—M. Manoilescu, former undersecretary of finance, who is on trial for complicity in a plan for restoration of state rights to former Crown Prince Carol, continued speaking in his own defense today. He made an impassioned five-hour address, which was pronounced even by his adversaries as a magnificent effort of oratory. He disclosed many heretofore hidden facts concerning the late King Ferdinand's attitude toward Carol, and Carol's difficulties with Premier Bratiano.

The text of a letter from King Ferdinand to the president of the council a few days before the king's death, as disclosed by M. Manoilescu, begged the president to bring Carol back to his rightful place on the throne.

While quoting this letter from memory and offering to divulge its whereabouts, Manoilescu brought tears to the eyes of many by its touching appeal, and the court proceedings were momentarily halted until composure was regained.

Wanted Carol's Return.

Later in the trial, appeal was made to M. Popovici, who was finance minister in the Stirbey cabinet, to confirm that Ferdinand desired Carol's return and his succession insured before he died. Popovici said he had

JOURNALIST FRAT MEETS HERE 1928

Pi Delta Epsilon Chooses Atlanta as Convention Place and Tech Man as President.

Columbus, Ohio, November 12.—At the final session of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, meeting in its annual convention here, George M. Sparks, head of the journalism department of Georgia Tech, was elected national grand president. The convention also unanimously selected Atlanta as the place for the 1928 meetings with the Georgia Tech and Emory chapters serving as hosts. Atlanta was chosen as the convention seat for 1928 by unanimous vote of the delegates, although strong bids were put in by representatives of the University of Florida, George Washington, Penn State and Minnesota.

The convention reelected H. G. Doyle, of George Washington, vice president; H. E. Lobdell, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, grand secretary; J. C. Patty, grand treasurer, and R. E. McNeil, Colgate, grand editor. The chapters of Ohio State, Ohio Wesleyan and Cincinnati university were hosts for the 47 delegates representing 34 chapters from all parts of the country.

The conclave opened on Thursday night with a smoker, while business sessions were held on Friday and Saturday. The college journalists were

SYMPHONY'S ONLY SEASON CONCERT SET FOR TODAY

Atlanta's Own Orchestra To Make Bow Under Baton of Leide at Keith's Georgia This Afternoon.

Atlanta's own symphony orchestra will make its only bow of the season this afternoon at Keith's Georgia theater. Promptly at 3:30 o'clock Conductor Enrico Leide will lead his men into the thrilling strains of Sir Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance" march, opening a concert which has been made up of the most popular selections of the past four years of symphony concerts in this city.

It is because of insufficient financial support of the orchestra in the past that only one concert can be given this year. The sale of seats for this concert, however, holds out hope that the money difficulties of the symphony association will be sufficiently relieved to make possible plans for a resumption of the regular Sunday afternoon concert series for the season of 1928-29.

Today's concert is given as a benefit, the members of the orchestra giving their services free, with the approval of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians. The theater is also given without cost, through the interest of Manager Roltare Eggleston.

Seats sold fast Saturday at the box office, and it is certain that, while the house will probably not be filled to capacity, a worthy audience will gather for the occasion. All the boxes have been sold and a majority of the balcony seats, while approximately two-thirds of the lower floor also has been taken.

In a few cases persons have bought tickets, but have not called for them at Phillips & Crew. These are advised by officials that they can secure their tickets at the time of the concert by asking for Harvey Phillips, who will have all such unclaimed reservations.

Prominent in the program this afternoon will be Mrs. W. J. Morrison, distinguished pianist, who will play Mendelssohn's Concerto in G. Minor, with the orchestra accompaniment.

Miss Eda Bartholomew, one of the leading organists of the city, will preside at the big theater organ, adding its sonorous volume to the orchestra in "Pomp and Circumstance," and in the closing number, a "Faust" phantasy.

The harp ensemble, composed of pupils of Mrs. William Butt Griffith, which created such a furore on previous appearances, will also present a group of numbers. Mrs. Griffith will give a harp solo, the "Meditation," from Thais.

Members of the harp ensemble, who will play Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" and Handel's "Largo," are Miss Jacqulin Moore, Mrs. Marion Keelin, Miss Jo Beth Apperson, Mrs. Burnham Marsh and Mrs. Griffith.

Other orchestral numbers on the program include the Largo from Dvorak's "New World," symphony and Wagner's "Rienzi" overture.

START ON TRACKS DUE THIS WEEK

City and Rail Officials To Sign Pact Monday; Mayor Defers Action on Power Co. Share.

The first shovelful of dirt in lowering of railroad tracks to make way for the new twin viaducts will get under way during the coming week with signing of the contract between the city and rail officials who will arrive in Atlanta for the purpose on Monday. Final negotiations with the Brooks-Calloway company which was chosen for the work will be completed at this time, it was announced Saturday.

While Mayor I. N. Ragsdale announced Saturday that he had deferred action on the proposal passed Thursday by the aldermanic board by which the $400,000 contribution of the Georgia Power company would become available, he called attention to the fact that law allows him five days to give his decision on measures passed by the executive bodies of the city. Failing to act in this period, the papers become effective without his signature.

Failure of the aldermanic board to pass or offer a motion for consideration automatically passed it at the Thursday session.

RUMANIA PEASANTS ARE DENIED RIGHT TO HOLD MEETING

Bucharest, Rumania, November 12. (AP)—The government has refused permission to the national peasants party to hold its congress at Alba Julia November 20. The congress would be permitted if held in any other city but Alba Julia, a government spokesman said, and the discussions restricted to subjects having no connection with the dynastic situation.

The Amazing Adventures Of Anarchist Aber

By Lawrence Aber.

As Told to Ben Cooper, Staff Representative of The Constitution.

CHAPTER THREE—RELIEF OF LADYSMITH

SYNOPSIS.

In the first installment of his amazing and thrilling narrative, Aber traced his ancestry to the British peerage, and told of his birth in Wales. His story so far relates as follows: He was born in 1880 in Monmouthshire, Wales, and at an early age deserted from a British navy schoolship. He remained in the slums of New York for a time, and at the age of 18 enlisted with the American army in the Spanish war. After the Spanish war he went back home and after a brief stay with his mother enlisted with the British South African forces for the Boer war.

En route to Capetown on a troopship, Aber and his fellow soldiers went through the tortures of privation and rough treatment. Landing in South Africa, they proceeded to Pretoria, and after a march that seemed like a long and fantastic nightmare, arrived at Ladysmith, where they entrenched for a long siege.

CHAPTER III.

Well, there we were, cooped up in a little trading post with short rations, Boers all around us, plenty of bad water, and generally in a devil of a fix. When we left England, we all thought that the war would be over in a month . . . that the mighty Briton would humble the Boer in less time than it takes to tell of it. But we were badly fooled, for it was just seven months and fourteen days that we remained at Ladysmith and starved until relieved.

The horror of its haunts me to this day. Our situation was a bad one, and we might have been wiped out easily if the Boer had only known the truth and made a real charge during the latter part of the siege. Without the battle of Ladysmith, the Boers would have won. The army was licked, and England did not seem to care. The queen died and politics let us starve. We couldn't quit because we had no place to go. We knew that the Boers were devils who would have turned us over to the negroes for torture if we had surrendered.

Just imagine. They were at home, when we were 6,000 miles from home. They were accustomed to the heat, and we were not. In addition, they had plenty of food and good water, and we were lacking. The Boers served notice on us to surrender, offering a fair deal. We knew what we would get, and told him where to go. Meanwhile, we sent out negro couriers to ask for relief, and sat and prayed for assistance. Some of our runners broke through the Boer lines and reached the colonies, but it was not until the soldiers themselves rose up and demanded of their officers that Ladysmith be relieved that the relief column actually started to save us.

Bare rations! Those two words, applied to Ladysmith, tell a nightmare story of human suffering that is almost unbelievable. Rats, cats and dogs served to replenish the menu, together with horses and other animals. Grass was used as a last resort to keep from starving. Scurvy broke out, as it naturally would under such conditions, and by the end of the siege, 86 out of my 109 men had the disease.

LADYSMITH WOMEN REAL HEROINES.

The women of Ladysmith were heroines. They stood watches with the men, and handled rifles with the best of us. They shared in the privations without complaint, and in spite of the fact that they were in worst shape than the men. One of them, a Lady Northcliff, I remember particularly. The women would stand watches while the men rested.

As time dragged on, we began to despair of relief, and were desperate enough to do anything. Often I and other soldiers would crawl out across the veldt, kill some Boer for his food, and bring it back to the children. The garrison went about with hungry but determined looks on their faces, intending to die rather than suffer the negroes to get hold of the women and children.

Children crying from hunger . . . women hollowed-cheeked and with burning eyes. Men who resembled beasts of the forest in appearance . . . while scurvy raged and took its toll. This scurvy causes the skin to get hard, crack and then forms puss. My nose swelled something dreadful, and I looked as though I had a bad cold.

In addition to the food prob-

COWGIRL CLEARED OF MURDER CHARGE

Rodeo Champion Accused of Killing Male Companion Acquitted on Self-defense Plea.

Lakeview, Ore., November 12.—(United News.)—Lorena Trickey, famous rodeo performer, was found not guilty today by a jury in the Lake county court here of the murder of J. P. (Smiling Slim) Harris, her common law husband.

The jury received the case at 12:35 p. m. and at 1:50 p. m. announced it was ready with the verdict. The 12 men of the jury filed back into the court room and the foreman informed the court of her acquittal.

When the verdict of not guilty was brought back Lorena smiled for the first time during the trial. The court room was in an uproar, the cowboys and ranchers who jammed the court room shouting and whistling. Her brother fought his way through the court room crowd, climbed over their heads and took Lorena in his arms. The girl's plea was self-defense.

OFFICIAL FAMILY ATTENDS FUNERAL OF GUATEMALAN

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge today attended funeral services for the late Guatemalan minister, Don Francisco Sanchez Latour, at the Washington cathedral.

The services were held in the chapel where Woodrow Wilson is buried and were attended also by Secretary Kellogg, other officials of the government, and members of the diplomatic corps.

50,000 WEDDINGS ARE MADE LEGAL

Austrian Court Brings Order to Confusion Caused by State and Church Conflict.

Vienna, Austria, November 12.—(AP) By a dictum calmly spoken by the Austrian constitutional court today 50,000 bigamous marriages, according to canonical law, were declared legal. Nearly 133,000 children were thus declared legitimatized.

The socialist governor, Albert Sever, eight years ago challenged the Roman Catholic church's canonical law by granting dispensation from "lets or hindrances" which heretofore have prevented the reunion of divorced Catholics, and more than 50,000 couples straightway contracted "Sever marriages," which had the semblance of legality, until one or the other of the contracting parties chose to denounce the union; whereupon the courts unhesitatingly declared the marriages bigamous and any issue therefrom illegitimate.

By this ruling hundreds of women and many men were driven to self-destruction whenever they found themselves thrown into the streets in disgrace. No amount of pleading availed for the itroduction of parliamentary legislation to declare "Sever marriages" legal. The constitutional court today, however, in its capacity as an appellate court, reversed the judgment of the lower court, and by declaring a "Sever marriage" legal brought order to the Austrian marriage confusion.

Fading Art of Letter-Writing

:: MRS. COOLIDGE IS OWN PERSONAL SECRETARY ::

Is Kept Alive by First Lady

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—The first lady of the land, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, is one of the few women in official life who is keeping alive the art of letter writing, and while she has a private secretary and many stenographers and typists at her disposal she writes all of her personal notes and letters in long hand.

In one corner of her boudoir is a small but substantial desk, equipped with every convenience for writing, and there Mrs. Coolidge composes her little notes, sometimes dispatching them by a special messenger when addressed to Washington friends and, for those at a distance, dispatching them through the mails.

There are no quill pens or fancy penholders or other unsubstantial equipment about the desk, which is well supplied with white house stationery in various sizes and kinds, and instead of adopting the new fancy—an old one revived—of shaking sand over the paper to dry the ink, Mrs. Coolidge uses an old-fashioned blotter. She writes a clear hand, devoid of flourish, and never abbreviates words, nor has she a hackneyed style, but rather, a graceful running and conversational way of expressing herself.

No mistresses of the white house has ever written so many letters or notes while abiding there and hence none will leave for future history so many testimonials of her ability in the fine art of expression.

PROHI ENFORCEMENT SHOWDOWN IS URGED BY SENATOR BORAH

GRADUAL REVISION OF TARIFF URGED TO HELP FARMERS

Creation of Federal Board To Aid in Price Stabilization Asked by Commission.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—The American agricultural situation is of fundamental national concern, the business men's commission on agriculture reported today after a year's study of the farmers' problems, and it made these remedial recommendations:

Gradual tariff adjustment to equalize more nearly the benefits of the protective tariff system as between agriculture and the manufacturing industry.

Administration through an endowed and independent national agricultural foundation of a comprehensive land utilization policy.

Revision of state and local tax systems.

Strengthening fo the rural banking system.

Revision of railroad rates on farm products.

Nagel Makes Report.

The recommendations were contained in a report made public today by Charles Nagel, chairman of the commission, which for a year has been investigating agriculture from a business point of view. The commission, created by the national industrial conference board and the chamber of commerce of the United States, but reaching its findings independently of either, according to Nagel, has heard the testimony of hundreds of farmers and others connected with the industry throughout the country.

The commission declared that the aim of agricultural policies should be "such improvement in the economic position of the farmer as is consistent with the wisest utilization of land resources and the development of types of farmers and of rural life that will make for greater farm prosperity and for the social and political welfare of the nation as a whole." Legislation of the McNaury-Haugen type it regarded as injurious to the long run interests of agriculture and as setting a dangerous precedent.

Farmer Has Suffered.

The report said it was evident that American farmers, in post-war readjustment, have suffered more seriously than those engaged in other fields. That many have been forced from the industry and that land resources have been impaired by neglect and wasteful exploitation. There is evidence also, the report continued, that real as well as money costs in agriculture are rising; that farmers are failing to obtain a return equivalent to that obtained in the city by workers of no greater ability; that the comparative advantage of other industries is rapidly increasing; that the yearly fluctuations of farm commodity prices

SEVENTH WOMAN HELD IN SLAYING

Soperton, Ga., November 12.—(AP)—Another woman has been arrested in connection with the killing of Clayton Newsome last Sunday. She is Miss Willie Mae Jenkins. She says she knows nothing of the crime.

Miss Jenkins, who is 19 years of age, was taken into custody last night at Kite, Ga., and brought to the local jail, where she was charged with murder. She told newspaper men today that while she was on her way to see a sister who was ill, she met Frank Miller, also under arrest in connection with the slaying, on the highway about a mile from the scene of the crime shortly after sunrise Sunday morning.

Miller greeted her with an air of melancholy, she related, and when she asked the reason for his sadness she quoted him as repling that he had "killed a man." She said he did not give her any details and that their discussion ended there, since she was in a hurry to get to her sister.

Miss Jenkins, a pretty blondie, is the seventh woman to be arrested in the case. Mrs. Emma Coates, at whose home young Newsome, the son of a well-known turpentine operator of this section, was slain early Sunday, was taken into custody with her four daughters shortly afterward, while Mrs. Dessie Wheeler was arrested yesterday.

Mrs. Coates and her daughters said Miller shot Newsome when he sought to enter the Coates home near here. Miller, however, denied any knowledge of the slaying and claims he was at the home of a friend at the time. Mrs. Wheeler likewise denies any knowledge of the affair.

Local authorities said they expected the coroner's jury to complete its inquiry into the case probably Tuesday.

Queen Marie Dons Shroud And Trousers

Turkish Population Is Delighted and Rumanians Are Shocked.

Balchik, Rumania, November 12.—(AP)—The dowager Queen Marie startled and at the same time delighted Mohemmedan dwellers of this sleepy little town today by appearing in the white Turkish trousers, and flowing white shroud and veil which constitute the Moslem women's national costume.

The temperature here is pretty much the same as at Palm Beach and the queen and princess found intense relief from their heavy robes of mourning for the late King Ferdinand in donning the zephyr-like white cotton garments and sandals of the Mohammedan women.

Smiles of satisfaction borne by the queen's Turkisl subjects on seeing the dowager queen in the costume ordained by their prophet, however, seemingly were not reflected by the rest of Rumania's population for when photographs taken prior to the queen's public appearance in this unconventional dress reached Bucharest, society accustomed to seeing Marie in widows' weeds, pretended to be shocked when they realized the queen had suddenly jumped from prosaic black silks into white balloon trousers.

PLANES WILL AID IN LIQUOR DRIVE

Government Plans Extensive Campaign Against Moonshine Operations in South During Winter.

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—An air attack against moonshiners is being planned by the prohibition bureau.

The Mississippi valley will be the first scene of operations and if the experiment proves successful officials expect to organize an air patrol to cover the entire United States in spotting the loactions of moonshine distilleries.

Within a short time, a plane, now being fitted out at Bolling field here to carry a pilot and an observer, will soar up and down the valley in search of distilleries that are reported to be one of the main sources of the liquor supply for Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri and Louisiana. The plane will carry a machine gun and if a distillery should be found in impenetrable mountain fastnesses, the observer will open fire on the plant in an effort to destroy it.

But the main value of the planes, officials explain, will be in mapping the location of the liquor plants which later may be raided by land squads.

Prohibition Commissioner Doran believes that the winter season is particularly favorable for such operations as leaves will be off the trees and vision from the air will be better than during the season of heavy foliage.

Already, however, reports have come to officials of counter measures by the moonshiners, who are reported to be attempting to camouflage their plants in various ways so that they may not be seen fom the air.

IDAHO MAN CALLS FOR G. O. P. STAND IN FAVOR OF LAW

Political Expediency Is Both Discreditable and Futile in Party, Declares Senator.

ONLY TWO COURSES ARE OPEN, HE SAYS

Declares Party Must Stand for Rigid Enforcement of Prohibition of Law or Repeal.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Senator Borah, of Idaho, called tonight for a showdown in the next presidential campaign on the prohibition question and law enforcement.

Explaining that he would not assume to advise the democrats, he aimed his demand chiefly at the republicans, who, he asserted, should take a stand for rigid enforcement of the eighteenth amendment.

"It is my contention," the Idaho republican declared before the New York Woman's Law Enforcement committee, "that the supreme political problem in the United States today is obedience to law—the integrity of the constitutional government."

Fight To End Urged.

"I contend that the highest duty resting upon a political party at this time is to recognize that fact, meet it openly and courageously, call its voters and supporters to the contest and fight it through to the end. In the clear sunlight of this issue, mere political expediency is both discreditable and futile.

"We know from the decisions of the supreme court that we are passing through a period in which corruption has reached to the very doors of the white house, dominated cabinets and robbed the people of their inheritance.

"We know that our daily press day by day records a series of crimes, both in number and in horror which have no precedent or parallel.

"We know, if we but stop to reflect, that this spirit of lawlessness has come to be the most stupendous problem of our national life.

"We know, too, that this spirit of lawlessness has now taken the form of an utter disregard and defiance of our charter of government itself."

Contending that there are only two

GERMAN PLANES MAY START TODAY ON AMERICAN HOP

Horta, November 12.—(United News.)—Intense excitement was caused here late today by announcement from both the pilots of the Junkers airplane D-1232 and the Heinkel plane D-1220, that they were preparing for a flight to the United States at daybreak.

Mademoiselle Lilli Dillenz, Viennese actress, who will be a passenger in the Junkers plane, said she was fearless of the consequences of the trip. She had high hopes, she said, of realizing her ambition to fly to the United States.

Real 'Redskin' Taught Hoover To Hunt With Bow and Arrow

:: SECRETARY REMINISCES AT IOWA DINNER ::

Washington, November 12.—(United News.)—Adventures of his boyhood on an Iowa farm when he hunted prairie chickens and pigeons with bow and arrow under the tutelage of a real "redskin" were recalled by Secretary Hoover this week at the Iowa State society's annual dinner here.

Although he has since achieved high distinction, Hoover said he has never lived down the humiliation he suffered one day 40 years ago when he carelessly allowed a live rabbit to escape from his youthful hands.

"Rabbits fresh from a figure-four trap early on a cold morning are wiggly rabbits and in the lore of boys of my time it was better to bring them home alive," the secretary explained.

"My brother, being older, had surreptitiously read full directions for rendering live rabbits secure. I say surreptitiously, for mine was a Quaker family unwilling in those days to have youth corrupted with stronger reading than the Bible and those great novels where the hero overcomes the demon rum.

"Soon after he acquired this higher learning on rabbits he proceeded to instruct me to stand still in the cold snow and to hold up the rabbit by its hind feet while with his not oversharp knife he proposed to puncture two holes between the sinews and back knee joints of the rabbit, through which holes he proposed to tie a string and thus arrive at complete security.

"Upon introduction of the operation the resistance of the rabbit was too much for me. I was not only blamed for its escape all the way home and for weeks afterward, but continuously over the past 40 years."

An Indian boy gave the future secretary of commerce instruction in how to catch the wily prairie chicken which roamed the heath of his native state in large numbers. A stanch bow and arrow were his only weapons.

His first glimpse of the fanfare of national politics was obtained in the Garfield campaign when he trudged along in the rear of a torchlight parade in his native city, West Branch, Iowa.

There was only one democrat in West Branch, and as he occasionally imbibed too freely of spiritous liquors, he was regarded as representing "all the forces of evil," Hoover told his auditors. The lone democrat was a kindly soul, however, and popular with the boys because he rationed gumdrops among them in return for errands at his store.

Hard work was the lot of all in his little community, the secretary said, adding:

"I am no supporter of factory labor for children, but I have never joined with those who clamored against proper work of children on farms outside their school hours."

Fall Believes Next Trial Will Cost Him His Life

:: WANTS OPPORTUNITY TO CLEAR NAME ::

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Albert B. Fall said good-bye to Washington tonight with a lurking presentment that after his new trial here in January he may not be strong enough to turn homeward again.

A few hours before train time the 66-year-old former interior secretary received an Associated Press reporter in the hotel room where he has battled illness for the last week. He said his intention was to go to his New Mexico ranch, so that he might build himself up to be able to return here January 16, the day set for a new trial of the Teapot Dome case in which he is a defendant with Harry F. Sinclair.

"I would like to feel that there is more than an even chance for my ever returning home after that," Fall continued, "but I think there is only a 50-50 chance. I shall come, if it is possible, because I want to have the opportunity, as far as possible, to clear my name."

Fall sat low in an easy chair, his stooped shoulders shrouded in a blue velvet bathrobe. The paleness of his cheeks showed how illness had sapped his vitality, but his eyes were bright and his voice strong as he referred to the grand jury investigation growing out of the recent mistrial of the Teapot Dome case.

"I had not the slightest idea that any detectives had been hired to investigate jurors," he said. "This whole affair was absolutely new to me, and at no time was the matter mentioned in my presence. Mr. Sinclair never intimated to me knowledge of such activities, if he even knew. During the trial, I visited his room only one afternoon and he was in my room only a few times."

Fall revealed that on the day of the mistrial he sought to ask Justice Siddons to have the case go on immediately.

"My plea was interrupted by an objection by Mr. Pomerene, of government counsel," he said. "I was willing to have the case go on with that jury, or to start again the next day with another jury.

"I took me twelve months to build up for the trial, and even longer than that to build up for the Doheny trial. Now I intend to rest and walk in New Mexico, where the warm climate and altitude agree with me. Unless doctors forbid me to return to Washington in January, I will come. But I must consider my family, and, although I am old, perhaps I can re-

MEETING CALLED ON DECATUR FARE

Decatur, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Announcement is made here that a mass meeting of the citizens of Decatur will be held at the courthouse next Wednesday night at 8 o'clock to hear discussions of the proposed changes in the street car fare between here and Atlanta, which will be voted upon next Saturday.

Decatur citizens are to vote upon a proposal to abrogate the present 5-cent fare clause in the franchise with the Georgia Power company and agree to pay the same fare as paid in Atlanta. The service would also be supplemented with a fleet of buses that would operate from the end of the Ponce de Leon car line, in Druid Hills, into Decatur and also from the end of the line at Emory university into Decatur. Fare on the bus lines would be paid on a zone basis.

The decision to call the mass meeting was reached at an informal meeting last night of about 60 business men of Decatur when the proposed change was discussed by Congressman L. J. Steele, city attorney, and others.

A citizens' committee for Decatur has been organized and Dr. W. S. Elkins has been named chairman of the executive committee of the body. Other members of the executive committee include Dr. W. S. Neims, F. E. Coogler and Robert Ramspeck.

The meeting next Wednesday will be in charge of the executive committee and Dr. Elkins, chairman, will preside, it is announced. J. Howell Green, president of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce, will be one of the speakers, it is announced.

In calling the mass meeting the executive committee announced it was desired that the whole subject of the car fare proposal be gone into thoroughly by the citizens and it is expected that the proposition will be discussed pro and con.

Co-Eds To Take Part In Stunt Night Program At Emory University

Emory University, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—For the first time in the history of the event, Emory University will feature coeds in its stunt night program which will open next Monday evening in the university auditorium.

Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, director of the Emory Glee club and director of the annual affair, has announced a before unequalled lineup of skits and student talent. The shows began in 1919 and for the last two years have been held in the Woman's club auditorium. Monday will be the first time that the program has been staged in the new auditorium.

The stunts include a bathing beauty contest, producing the Venus-like forms of Emory's freshmen of the masculine sex, J. C. Edwards, typical Spanish beauty impersonator of genuine charm, will woo the terpischorean muse, and Chess Logarmarsino, of Atlanta, will give his "Apache Nights." Peter Manning will give his misinterpretations from Shakespeare.

Virgil Eady's ten-piece jazz orchestra, Bob Martin's piano playing and educated dog, the singing of "John Peel" and negro spirituals by the Glee club chorus of 60 male voices, the harmony of the Emory Four quartet and the symphony orchestra will be features.

REVISION OF TARIFF STATUTES URGED

are growing more severe; that tenancy is increasing and that the quality of the farm population is deteriorating.

Various factors were held responsible, some connected with the gradual change from an agricultural to an industrial nation; others problems of readjustment. Among the major causes were listed post-war deflation of values, delay in adjusting farm prices to the new levels, and increased taxes, interest rates and transportation costs. Restricted immigration was said to have increased foreign competition by keeping European farm work at home, depriving American agriculture of immigrant farmers qualified to farm successfully, and by admitting low-standard farm labor.

Reduce Imports.

Increase in foreign indebtedness to the United States was said to have compelled debtor nations to reduce imports, increase exports and become more self-sufficient as regards agricultural products, decreasing foreign consumption, while at home a decline in per capita consumption, changed habits, new methods of preparing and distributing foods and the development of substitutes for textiles have combined with other factors to reduce domestic consumption.

The commission expressed belief that the farmer's economic position could be improved if he could obtain higher prices and larger markets or could reduce the costs of production, but declared permanent relief along these lines cannot be obtained by legislation, except through efforts to diminish trade restrictions which tend to reduce the foreign market.

Governmental policies facilitating sound extension of markets for farm products and reducing wide fluctuations in prices further would aid agriculture, the report continued, but government buying and selling was opposed unless and until other methods failed. The commission recommended establishment of a federal farm board consisting of a small number of men appointed by the president to aid in stabilizing prices and production.

Improved Methods Urged.

The farmer, by improving production methods, can help himself in the chief immediate means of improving his economic position—reducing production costs, the report said, adding that a higher yield per man must be sought by increasing the average size of farm units and utilizing labor fully throughout the year. Putting to grass or reforesting mucky land now in crops and larger expenditures for commercial fertilizer and improved equipment were suggested as further aids.

Cooperation in purchasing goods containing seeds, improving livestock, harvesting, grading and standardizing and in providing cheap credit and calamity insurance were held to promise the farmer "advantages similar to those obtained in the manufacturing industry through large scale production and corporate organization." Cooperative selling, however, was said to offer greatest opportunities in marketing perishable commodities, but not the staple crops.

Balanced Production.

Balanced production, industrial efficiency and sustained prosperity, the commission said, could be attained through a carefully planned policy of land utilization, directed by an independent and endowed organization, such as a "national agricultural foundation" which eventually would concentrate farmers on the best land.

The commission advocated relinquishment by states of the general property tax to local governing units and the acquisition of needed revenue from income, business and excise taxes. Extension of branch banking and serving agricultural credit needs by a system of fewer but stronger banking institutions were recommended, while lower interest rates and release from undesirable dependence upon local merchants or landlords for current credit needs were seen as possible through more extensive use of the intermediate credit system and the establishment of agricultural credit corporations.

Further benefits, the report said, would come from readjustment of railroad rate structures and extension of waterway systems. Particularly the Mississippi waterway system and the Great Lakes to ocean route. Prevention of flood disasters in the Mississippi basin was said to be urgently required.

Debutantes Will Appear in Leon Froshin Revue

Two of the beautiful models from Atlanta's Debutante club who will appear as models in a fashion revue to be staged by Leon Frohsin on November 16 at his exclusive shop on Peachtree street. The society girls who will appear as models in the morning and afternoon revues on that date will donate their services to charities sponsored by the club. At left is seen Miss Florence Eckford, daughter of Mrs. F. Burgess Eckford, modeling a handsome evening gown fashioned of shell pink chiffon velvet featuring a graceful full skirt and semi-close fitting bodice. Miss Ann Kessnich is the striking figure at the right, and particularly becoming to her slender beauty is the Doris Reid model created of ombre shaded metal cloth.

BORAH DEMANDS PROHI SHOWDOWN

courses open, enforcement or repeal, the senator added:

"The only safe course—and certainly it is the only honorable course—is to meet the issue and throw the tremendous power of the party behind the law and the constitution."

Enforcement of the law, Borah asserted, requires the election of a president and officials who believe in the prohibition law and "who will be as vigilant and active to enforce it as its opponents are to violate it."

Not only is the constitution defied, the senator said, "but its enforcement and maintenance in many respects have become a mere formality. And yet we are told that this is not a matter with which political parties may deal or about which they should be concerned."

Position on Dry Law.

In this stronghold of the wets and home of Governor Smith, Senator Borah, himself mentioned as possible presidential candidate, insisted that the people generally were interested today in what is the position of a presidential candidate on the eighteenth amendment.

Molification of the Volstead act is not involved in the prohibitoin question, he argued, contending that repeal or enforcement of the eighteenth amendment is the heart and life of the wet and dry issue.

Referenda on the prohibition question were characterized by Senator Borah as insincere and ineffective. Modification of the Volstead act, he declared, "cannot give that which the constitution prohibits, to-wit, intoxicating liquor."

Rallying the women to the issue, the Idahoan insisted they alone "can bring the political parties to the support of this constitutional amendmen."

"Organize," he shouted, "demonstrate your power, sit on the floor of the convention and not in the galleries, sit as delegates and not in the galleries as ornaments. Write platforms and not essays."

"There is only one way by which this law can be enforced," he declared, referring to the prohibiton act, "only one way by which the constitution can be maintained, and that is by placing the control of the machinery of government, the instrumentalities of enforcement in the hands of those who believe in the law and who will be as vigilant and active to enforce it as its opponents are to violate it.

"This is a presidential election. The chief duty of the president is to see that the constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof are enforced. Upon the chief executive rests that stupendous task.

"The people have seen fit to adopt this amendment. It is now a part of the law of the land. The congress has legislated. Laws have been passed designed to carry into effect the constitution. The courts have been called upon to pass upon the constitutional amendment and to construe the statutes passed in pursuance of that amendment.

Enforcement Urged.

"The constitution is there. The statutes are there. The decisions are there. The only thing left is to enforce the law and to maintain the constitution so long as they remain unrevoked or unrepealed. Under these circumstances the people must necessarily be interested in the views of their candidates for the presidency."

Predicting that everybody except the deaf and the dumb and the candidates will be discussing the wet and dry issue in the coming campaign, Senator Borah declared that "a political party which is unwilling to declare its purpose to enforce the eighteenth amendment will not enforce the eighteenth amendment."

"There is no reason in the world," he added, why, of a party intends to enforce the eighteenth amendment, it should not say so."

Tennessee Fowls Lead in Egg Laying Contest at Athens

Athens, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—At the end of the first seven-day period of the second Georgia national egg-laying contest here a pen of pullets from the Pedigree Poultry farm of Rankins, Tenn., is leading the entire contest with a production of 37 eggs.

A total of 2,560 eggs was laid by the 102 pens entered in the second contest. The per cent lay for the week figured 36.1. All 10 high pens were White Leghorns, with Pedigree farm's entry leading the procession, followed by George S. Sutton's entry from Aurora, Ind.; C. R. and Richard Ward of Hartford, Ky., has the the third high pen for the week.

Eighteen states and the Dominion of Canada are represented in the Second Georgia contest. The Leghorns again predominate in numbers, 68 pens being entered. The Rhode Island Reds have eight pens while the Plymouth Rocks rate second with 10 entries. Seven pens of Anconas are entered with three pens of Wyandottes, two pens of Jersey Black Giants and two pens of Black Minorcas and a pen of Kiwis.

Negro Is Charged With Stealing Car Of East Lake Citizen

Decatur, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Louis Zimmerman, a negro was placed in jail here today charged with having stolen an automobile several days ago from Ward Wight, of East Lake. Preliminary hearing in the case has been set for Monday.

Wight notified Sheriff Johnson that his car had been reported seen in that county and a search by the sheriff proved fruitless until a citizen reported to him the loss of some chickens and the capture of a small dog left by the thief. The sheriff took the dog back to the neighborhood where the chickens were stolen and when turned loose trotted to the home of a negro named Smith, the sheriff said, and in whose yard was parked the Wight car.

Chickens found in coops in the yard were identified by the complaining citizen, the sheriff said, and Smith was arrested on a charge of stealing the fowls, while Zimmerman, a visitor in the home was charged with stealing the automobile, which was returned to Mr. Wight today. It is said that Zimmerman formerly lived in the East Lake community.

MAN IS SENTENCED TO DIE FOR ASSAULT

Parkersburg, W. Va., November 12.—(AP)—Convicted of assaulting a 5-year-old girl, Wesley H. Swain, 42, was sentenced today to be hanged February 3.

In pronouncing sentence, Circuit Judge McDougle told Swain he was fortunate in being permitted a trial. "Feeling ran high the night of your arrest," he said.

Swain appeared unmoved by the sentence.

4 AUTOS WRECKED IN CRASH SERIES

Four automobiles were considerably damaged in a collision at Courtland and Ellis streets late Saturday night, according to police reports, and J. O. Owens, of 385 Capitol avenue, was taken to Grady hospital with minor injuries, while Miss Helen Steel, of 195 Ivy street, was taken to her home, and placed under the care of a family physician.

An automobile driven by an unidentified negro, going south on Courtland street, struck Owens' car, which in turned crashed into Miss Steel's coupe. The negro's car then collided with an automobile driven by Hollis McLaughlin, of 537 Boulevard, former Cracker baseball pitcher. The negro did not stop but increased his speed after bumping into Owens' and McLaughlin's cars.

Failure of a negro to stop a truck at a boulevard stop sign, on Trinity avenue, late Saturday night resulted in a soda fountain front at Pryor street and Trinity avenue to be crashed into and two other cars slightly damaged.

As the negro attempted to cross Pryor street he collided with a coupe driven by a negro, Joe Brown, of 249 East Ellis street, who was going north on Pryor street. The negro's car was struck by another car going south on Pryor street, as the truck crashed into the store front. No one was injured.

MASONIC CLUB HOUSE OPENS IN NEW YORK

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Pageantry and colorful ceremonies, including a parade of more than 3,000 Masons, featured the opening today of the Level club, said to be the first clubhouse and hotel to be erected in the country for the exclusive use of members of the Masonic order.

At a banquet tonight Mayor James J. Walker, Harold J. Richardson, grand master in New York state, and executive officers of the club were speakers.

The new building, of 17 stories, cost $4,300,000. It includes an auditorium, gymnasium, baths and 265 guest rooms, each equipped with a radio receiving set.

Emory Museum Given Curios By Students

Emory University, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—A large collection of coins, rings, mosaics and earthenware from ancient times has been given to Emory university for the museum by Wilbur Glenn, Atlanta, son of Thomas K. Glenn, of Atlanta.

The collection was secured by Mr. Glenn and his son during their trip abroad last summer. From March until the later part of July they traveled through Greece, Italy, Asia Minor and northern Africa. Young Glenn, now a student at Emory, has given the collection to the museum through the wish of his father who is a trustee of the institution.

More than a hundred coins are in the collection, including a large bronze coin of the time of Ptolemy, king of Egypt in the second and third century B. C. A coin of the Maccabean period, similar to the one cast by the widow into the treasury box, is also in the group.

Judas betrayed Christ for "thirty pieces of silver." A coin of these times, like the ones which Judas received, is among the group of coins. One of the gold pieces used by Mark Anthony to pay his legionaires is also to be found.

The originals of the lamps now used by educators and illustrators to symbolize the "midnight oil" are in the collection. There are five of these old earthenware lamps from Carthage and Timgad.

Lost art in the making of certain types of glass is exhibited in the articles from the Orient. Four glass cases, two bottle stoppers and a lamp made of a glass which is no longer in existence may be seen. Chemists have been unable to discover the secret of the formula.

In the group of things from Carthage is a marble frieze, a stone cannon ball and a marble mortar. There is also a collection of rings from Constantine and Damascus.

1 MAN DEAD, 2 HURT IN SHOOTING AFFRAY

Swainsboro, Ga., November 12.—(AP) Frank Ware is dead and Deputy Sheriff D. H. Medlock and George Lewis are suffering gunshot wounds as a result of a shooting affray which occurred at the home of Frank Ware early this morning.

Ware was shot and killed by Deputy Medlock when the latter attempted to place him under arrest for the shooting of Lewis, which occurred a few hours before.

The shooting followed an argument between Ware and Lewis, whom Ware accused of "breaking up his home."

Yesterday afternoon Ware drove his wife and children away from home, according to a report reaching the sheriff's office. They are now with relatives in Swainsboro.

It is said Lewis went to Ware's home when he heard of the difficulty and decided to remain there because Ware was drinking. During the night the argument arose between the two men and Ware shot Lewis.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Lewis, parents of George, a young man of 21 years of age, went to the home of Deputy Medlock, reporting the shooting and swearing out a warrant for Ware.

Deputy Medlock immediately went to Ware's home, 3 miles west of Swainsboro, to serve the warrant. As he entered Ware's house he was fired upon twice, one bullet striking him in the breast and another in the arm. He returned the fire, killing Ware.

The officer and Lewis will probably recover from their wounds, it is said.

No inquest will be held.

ATWATER AGAIN HEADS PEACH GROWERS' BODY

Macon, Ga., November 12.—(AP)—James R. Atwater, of Thomaston, has been reelected president of the Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange, and William C. Bewley, Macon, was reelected secretary-treasurer and general manager at the annual meeting of stockholders, it was announced here today by the exchange.

Other officers elected were P. J. A. Berckmans, Jr., Mayfield, first vice president; James B. Sutton, Macon, assistant general manager; Charles H. Cureton, Macon, auditor and assistant treasurer.

The stockholders directed that a letter be written to the interstate commerce commission requesting a response to the peach growers' freight and refrigeration case which has been pending for several years.

Rift in New Lute Of Former Wife Of Dodge Heir

Manila, November 12.—(AP)—The Hawaiian love romance of Mrs. Horace E. Dodge, Jr., divorced wife of the son of the wealthy Detroit automobile manufacturer, and the Lieutenant Benjamin Franklin Manning, which culminated in their marriage at Honolulu several weeks ago, came into prominence again today when it became known that they recently had separated while on a honeymoon tour.

The Mannings came to the parting of the ways at Shanghai, when the round the world liner President Cleveland, on which they were passengers from Honolulu, put in there recently. Manning left the ship at Shanghai and his whereabouts at present are unknown.

RIOTING SOLDIERS THREATEN HANKOW

their column is within fifteen miles of the city, according to reports received here in foreign commercial circles.

The vernacular newspapers are informed that thousands of the defeated and disorganized Hankow forces have arrived at Wuhan and the population of Wuhan and Hankow is described as panic-stricken. A body of 10,000 Hankow troops has crossed the Yangtse to Wuchang and is proceeding southward and the area through which the retreat is being made now fears wholesale disorder.

The foreign naval commanders are known to be keeping in extremely close touch with the situation, the wireless being constantly in use between the flagship at Shanghai and the patrol boats at Hankow and other ports on the Yangtse. A check-up of the patrol on the river of the various powers shows that there are 54 ships between Chinkiang and Chungking, with a heavy concentration at Hankow, made within recent days as a result of the tension existing within the Wuhan city.

American vessels total seven for Hankow with others at Chinkiang, Wuhu and Kiukiang; Great Britain, twenty-five ships; France, four, two of which are at Kankow, and Italy, three, two of which are at Hankow.

Reports from Hankow said that General Tang Seng-chi is believed to have fled to a Japanese steamer bound for Japan.

While the civil war has broken out afresh in south China, the northern campaign dispatches concerning the fighting in the Lunghai northern campaign which has been under way for some time was continuing. Foreign dispatches concerning the fighting in the Lunghai railway area stated that the troops of General Feng Yu-hsiang are continuing their advance on Suchowfu, capital of the province of Kiangsu, cutting off the retreat of about 1,000 Russian mercenaries in the northern forces. Many of these have been killed and many captured. Three armored trains also have been captured.

Tang Prominent.

General Tang Seng-chi has played a prominent part in the military situation in China for the past year. He was one of the chief rivals to General Chiang Kai-shek, one time nationalist generalissimo, and was among those who denounced Chiang shortly before the latter resigned from his command. He has been in control of Hankow for some months.

If the Nanking nationalists should succeed in capturing Hankow, it would consolidate their position in the Yangtse valley. While a Nanking victory at the former capital of the nationalist regime would greatly enhance the prestige of the Nanking government, the city of Canton still must be taken into consideration since some of the former Hankow leaders have begun activities in Canton to set up an independent nationalist government there.

Although Hankow has been the scene of much interest in recent months, no actual fighting has taken place there since late in 1926 when the Cantonese as the nationalists then were generally called, captured it.

JOURNALISTIC FRAT MEETS HERE IN 1928

ATLANTA ENVOYS SEEK CONVENTION.

Francis W. Carpenter, editor of the Emory Wheel, and William Chambers, business manager of The Campus, at Emory university, who are the representatives of the Emory chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, took letters from Governor L. G. Hardman and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, of Atlanta, and from other prominent Atlantans, in which the convention is urged to choose Atlanta as its next meeting place.

Ed White, representing the Georgia Tech chapter of the fraternity also joined the Emory representatives in urging the convention to select Atlanta for its 1928 convention.

Notice To All Members of Gate City Lodge No. 54, I. B. P. O. E. of W.

You are urged to be present Wednesday night, November 16th, to hear the report of the Building Committee and its recommendations. Members are also urged to be present in order to get their accounts straight, so that they may be eligible to vote on the first Wednesday night in December, at which time we are to elect our semi-annual and annual officers. This is required of all members.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated! Look at Tongue

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—(adv.)

Georgia Baptist Convention To Meet Soon in Augusta

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON
Editor of Christian Index.

Augusta, Ga., November 12.—The Georgia Baptist convention will meet in its 106th session at Augusta December 6-8. The sessions will be held in the Curtis Baptist church, one of the largest church auditoriums in the state. The opening session will be held Tuesday night, December 6, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, eastern time.

The convention will be preceded by the annual laymen and pastors' conference. The sessions of this pre-convention conference will be held Tuesday morning and afternoon, December 6. The president of the conference, Dr. John A. Davison, formerly of Columbus, has removed to Clarksville, Tenn., and in his absence Rev. Charles W. Henderson, of Forsyth, secretary of the conference, is arranging for the program and will call the conference to order. The tentative program for the laymen and pastors' conference includes the names of a number of prominent Baptist leaders in Georgia. Dr. C. W. Daniel and Dr. F. C. McConnell, of Atlanta; Judge T. V. Whipple, of Cordele; Dr. Cecil Cook, of Albany, and Dr. Roland Leavell, of Gainesville, are among the speakers for that conference.

Dr. Mell President.

Dr. John D. Mell, of Athens, president of the Georgia Baptist convention for the past 15 years, will call the body to order on Tuesday evening, December 6, and following the usual devotional service the convention will be organized with the election of officers. It is likely that Dr. Mell will be reelected president and Dr. B. D. Ragsdale, of Macon, for more than 30 years secretary of the convention, will also be reelected to that place of leadership. Four new vice presidents are chosen every year.

The president's address will be delivered by Dr. Mell following the election of officers and the convention sermon will then be delivered by Dr. Leon M. Latimer, pastor of the First Baptist church of Griffin. It is expected that President Mell will bring to the attention of the convention some suggestions regarding a closer coordination of the work of the convention looking to a larger support of the institutions fostered by the convention.

Wednesday's sessions will be featured by the annual address Wednesday morning by Secretary Arch C. Cree and the report on Christian education. This report will embrace the work of the Baptist institutions in Georgia and there will be separate reports on the work of the education board of the Southern Baptist convention, the south-wide theological seminaries and the Baptist Bible institute at New Orleans.

It is expected that there will be a special report from the trustees of Mercer university giving some account of the present survey which is being made of that institution by a group of educational experts. Hugh M. Willet, of Atlanta, president of the board of trustees, will likely make the report for Mercer. President Aquila Chamlee, of Bessie Tift college, is expected to report for that institution, as will Dr. W. D. Furry for Shorter college, President A. M. Gates, of Brewton-Parker institute; President Claude Gray, of Locust Grove institute; President L. H. Browning, of Norman institute, will make reports to the convention for their respective institutions.

Committees to Report.

There will also be reports by two special committees of the convention on educational matters. The committee of three, a standing committee, will make its report through Dr. W. T. Granade, of Statesboro, chairman. The committee on the educational policy of the convention, a committe set up at Valdosta last year, will make its first report to the convention through Dr. C. W. Daniel, of Atlanta, chairman.

The entire morning session will be devoted to these reports on education and to discussion which will follow. It is expected that a number of important matters will come to the convention under these reports, looking to the enlargement of the endowments of the institutions and the further development of the convention's program of enlarged support of Christian education.

The discussion of home and foreign missions will have right-of-way on Wednesday afternoon and on Wednesday night the report on state missions will be heard and discussed. It is likely that the reports on home and foreign missions will be discussed by the secretaries of these respective boards, Dr. B. D. Gray, of Atlanta, and Dr. J. F. Love, of Richmond, Va. Dr. Arch C. Cree, of Atlanta, will be in charge of the period Wednesday night which will cover state missions. Dr. Spencer B. King, state superintendent of missions, and Dr. Austin Crouch, executive secretary of the Southern Baptist convention, are expected to take a part on the program.

Thursday morning will be devoted to reports on the Georgia Baptist Orphans' home and the Georgia Baptist hospital and also The Christian Index. Thursday afternoon will be a crowded session with reports from the holding commission and a number of other important boards and commissions.

Augusta is aking ample provision for the entertainment of the convention. Rev. C. M. Seigler, pastor of the Second Baptist church, is chairman of the committee on hotels. Rev. E. G. Sheridan, pastor of the Curtis Baptist church, is general chairman of the committee on arrangements. Provision will be made for entertainment in private homes on the Harvard plan for all who wish that arrangement.

Fred Schoifield, of Atlanta, will have charge of the music during the convention. He is director of music in the First Baptist church, Atlanta, and is well known throughout the south as a song leader.

Big Attendance Seen.

It is expected that an unusually large attendance will be registered at Augusta on account of the interest in a number of matters to be discussed and also because of the excellent roads into Augusta, making travel by auto as well as by train comfortable and convenient.

The tentative order of business for the convention has been prepared by W. W. Gaines, of Atlanta, and Rev. Broadus E. Jones, of Atlanta.

One of the interesting features of the Tech-Georgia "football" week-end will be the annual meeting of the Georgia-Alabama-Florida Sigma Nu association, which will convene here on Friday and Saturday, December 2 and 3. This association, which was formed some years ago, is growing steadily in attendance and in interest among Sigma Nu alumni throughout the southeast and indications are that one of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings ever held will be had this year owing to the number of visitors who will be in Atlanta to attend the Tech-Georgia football classic. The convention will be entertained with the combined force of members of the Atlanta Alumni Sigma Nu association, by Gamma Alpha chapter of Georgia Tech and by Xi chapter of Emory university.

Senator Walter F. George, who is president of the association, is expected to attend and to play a prominent part in its activities. Oscar Palmour, of Atlanta, national regent of Sigma Nu, will also be present.

A dinner is scheduled to be held at the Georgian Terrace hotel on Friday evening, December 2, and over 300 active and alumni members of the fraternity from Atlanta and adjoining states are expected to attend. Percy Megahee, of the Southern Bell Telephone company, and president of the Atlanta Alumni association, will preside as toastmaster.

The business sessions of the convention will be held Saturday morning, December 3, while all members are to attend the Tech-Georgia football game that afternoon. On Saturday evening a Sigma Nu ball will be given at the Druid Hills Golf club by the Atlanta alumni chapter and the two collegiate chapters of the fraternity in the city in honor of the visitors.

Last Meet at Columbus.

The last meeting of the association was held at Columbus, Ga., during the Christmas holidays of last year, at which time Senator George was chosen president of the association. Borden Burr, national committeeman from Alabama and a former regent of Sigma Nu, was named first vice president. Allan Woodall, of Columbus, is second vice president. Others officers include R. L. Fagan, Fort Valley, Ga., secretary-treasurer, and Duncan Graham, McRae, Ga., publicity director.

President Megahee, of the Atlanta Alumni association of the fraternity, has appointed the following as a committee to prepare for the entertainment for the coming convention: W. L. Kemp, R. L. Fagan, Sam H. Worley, W. N. Shaeffer, Leeman Anderson, Candler Cotchman, Embry Kendrick and Ed Jameson.

Among the prominent Atlanta Sigma Nus who are expected to attend the sessions are Preston Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power company; George M. Napier, attorney general of Georgia; Eugene Talmadge, Georgia commissioner of agriculture; Judge W. F. Jenkins, Colonel Robert C. Alston, Oscar Palmour, regent of the fraternity, and W. L. Kemp, a former vice regent.

Included in the out-of-town members of the fraternity who will attend are Judge M. J. Yoemans, Dawson, Ga., judge of the Hiawassee judicial circuit, and Judge Eschol Graham, of McRae, judge of the Oconee judicial circuit.

Speakers for the banquet and the Saturday morning session of the convention will be announced later.

FLUSH THE KIDNEYS BEFORE BREAKFAST

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.—(adv.)

CuredHisRupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 481-A Marcellus Ave., Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

ATLANTAN TAKES IMPORTANT POST

Announcement that Saunders Jones, of Atlanta, vice president of the southern division of the White Automobile company, has been transferred from Atlanta to Cleveland, Ohio, the home office of the company, where he will serve in his capacity as vice president of the White company and as assistant to the president, was made Saturday at Cleveland by Walter C. White, president of the company, according to news dispatches received in Atlanta.

In his new post as assistant to the president, Mr. Jones will have all the authority that goes with that position. C. B. Cowan, of Birmingham, district manager, will take over Mr. Jones' work in the southern region as acting manager of the region pending appointment of a vice president for this post. The announcement was made through Stanley P. Seward, advertising manager of the Wite company.

Mr. Jones began his career with the White company as a salesman at the Dallas, Texas, branch. Later he became manager of the Nashville branch, then vice president of the western region with headquarters at St. Louis. Later he was trasferred to Atlanta as vice president of the southern region.

Another prominent Atlanta man who has served at one time in the capacity of vice president of the White company is B. W. Woodruff, now president of the Coca-Cola company.

2 NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR GIRLS' HOME FUND

A subscription of $100 from the Lutheran Evangelical church of the Redeemer and another for $80 from the Woman's Missionary society toward lifting the mortgage on five units of the churches' home for girls was announced Saturday by John A. Manget, chairman of the board.

Appraised value of the homes with equipment is $177,000, while the total mortgage indebtedness is but $75,000. At present there are 233 girls residing at the homes.

BOY WITH BULLET IN BRAIN SHOWS NO CHANGE, REPORT

Loren Leister, 12-year-old youth, who has been lying at the point of death in Grady hospital for two weeks with a bullet imbedded in his brain, showed no noticeable change in his critical condition, attaches stated Saturday.

Loren was shot by a stray bullet from the gun of E. F. Keheley, proprietor of a Marietta street restaurant, while passing by the establishment on Halloween night.

ACTRESS CLAIMS HUBBY DESERTED HER FOR CAREER

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—Charging that her husband regarded his career of far more importance than married life, Helen Menkene, actress, filed suit for divorce in superior court today against Humphrey Bogart. They were married May 20, 1926.

Although each had a separate career, the bill alleges, she attempted to make her marriage the paramount thing in her life, even offering to relinquish her career to establish a home for him.

The actress, who charges her husband with cruelty and desertion, stated that she went to London last summer in the hope that after the separation Bogart would take a different attitude toward married life. On her return, however, she found he had not changed.

HUGE NEW TUNNEL OPENS IN GOTHAM

New York, November 12.—(AP)—The new $48,000,000 Holland tunnel—a submarine boulevard linking New York and Jersey City under the Hudson—was formally opened today with elaborate ceremonies on both sides of the river.

At a telegraphed signal from President Coolidge, flags draped across the tube openings were dropped and seven years of labor had ended. Thousands who had gathered for the ceremonies in Jersey City trooped through the big tubes, preceded by the widows of two engineers who died before their work on the tunnel was completed.

At one minute after midnight tonight the tunnel will be opened to commercial traffic, an event bringing realization of the dreams of Clifford H. Holland, its designer, who died in 1923.

Provided with 20-foot roadways, the twin tubes, 9,250 feet long, have an estimated capacity of 3,800 vehicles hourly, and 15,000,000 vehicles a year. A toll system which charges rates ranging from 25 cents for a motorcycle to $2 for a heavy motor truck, is expected to provide revenue that will pay costs of construction in ten years, although the estimated period was twenty years.

A change of air 42 times an hour, the engineers claim, will provide an atmosphere in the tunnels even purer than that breathed in city streets. The ventilation system is regarded as one of the greatest engineering triumphs of the entire project.

ANARCHIST ABER TELLS OWN STORY

lem, our ammunition ran low, and at times during the siege, each man had only six rounds at a time. We lived in dug-outs, and the few shells sent over the town by the Boers did little damage. The Boer used a home-made cannister formed out of pipe and rocks, but this wounded only a few of the garrison members. The rifle was the real deadly weapon of that war.

Then, welcome sight, came the relief column, pouring in from two sides and scattering the Boers, who at times during the siege had maintained as high as 30,000 men around Ladysmith. We were a dreadful sight to the relief column, as our clothing supply had fared badly, and I personally had only one torn shirt, a pair of pants, a rifle and six rounds of ammunition when relief came. I left Ladysmith a crown-sergeant, the same as the American sergeant-major, and was awarded two medals, the king's and queen's medals.

We were all sent to Durbin and ordered discharged as unfit for further war service. I returned to England in January of 1901, and No. 2 war was over but not forgotten. If you wish to be a soldier of fortune, do not go to any of the leading nations because all they want is fools to fight for small wages, on poor food and patriotism. Later I will show how the life of a soldier of fortune can be made to pay.

I was discharged with a solemn oath never to soldier again. That was more than 20 years ago, and I am still at it. On discharge I tried to find work, and the patriotic ex-soldier went hungry as usual. Many's the day when I begged in London and cursed the crown government. I got down to rags and after a while had to steal in order to eat. I was well on my way toward becoming a bolshevik and anarchist.

TEN MILES FROM CANNIBALIS''

Hungry, down-hearted, friendless, my thoughts turned again to the sea as I roamed the cold streets of London after the Boer war, and by good luck I managed to get myself "shanghaied" by a crimp, together with a bunch of down-and-outers, and so when the square-rigged ship Inverness sailed for Brazil and the Orient, I was aboard as a sailor. It was now the latter part of 1901.

My pay as a sailor was to be 2 pound 10 shillings a month, and that was fair money in the fix I was in. There was only a wood bunk to sleep in and the food was rotten as usual. The American farmer feeds his hogs better stuff than we got on the Inverness, but still I was happy. Salt horse and a daily beating at hands of the captain or the mates formed the diet. The captain was a religious old cuss, and would hold a prayer feast every day, and then turn around and wield the belaying pin right and left.

Forty-three days of this hard business, and our ship made Rio de Janeiro. Those 43 days included every known kind of punishment, and some new forms invented by the captain. My wardrobe consisted of a hat, shirt and overalls, and these were soon mere rags from the many fights the crew got into with each other. Once I was nearly killed by a mate armed with a club, but a bucket of cold salt water brought me around again pronto.

Fed up with this sort of treatment, I tried to desert in Rio, but was caught by a negro policeman and returned to the skipper for a reward of one pound. Talk about your beatings, I sure received one then, and in addition was thrown into the chain locker to think matters over. Other members of the crew had received equally hard treatment, and so after we left Rio and started around Cape Horn for the Orient, we began talking mutiny. The captain heard these whisperings, however, and more beatings followed.

Rounding the horn, we ran into storms, and intense cold weather, icy sails, sleet, blizzards—all the weather gods had. My face and hands were frostbitten, and I nearly died from cold and hunger. Eventually, we reached Suva, in the Fiji Islands, and here, at this farthermore outpost of civilization I met a man who had been through the Spanish war. When he found out that I was also a Spanish war veteran, he volunteered to help me, and with the aid of a cannibal native, he hid me out until the Inverness sailed on.

With the hell ship gone, I became a beachcomber, and hung around Suva, making trips in native praus occasionally. Three months later the trading schooner Moonmaid put into Suva, and I met Captain Norton, the skipper. The schooner was one of those ships that trade through the islands, the skipper exchanging junk for valuable copra. "Captain," I said to Norton, "do you need a mate? I've been everywhere, and will do anything." "You're my man," he replied promptly. "I'm short a good mate right now."

BEACHCOMBER TO MATE.

I had been living a life of ease and no care as a beachcomber, and soon found that life as the mate of the Moonmaid was almost as easy. Captain Norton, whose name meant most anything devilish to the islanders, trained me well as a trading schooner mate, and told me that he would "show you more action, more experiences and more of open hell in 60 days than you have ever seen." And he sure kept his word.

The captain was known to have been a train robber in the states, and was said to have been wanted for murder. He told me that he lived in the islands for his health, and was in business with my American friend at Suva. Norton carried two guns, and bossed his native crew with a hand of iron. He was a good friend to myself, however, and we got along fine. We hunted trade in the worst possible places, where the natives would cut your throat for their menu and your life wouldn't be safe a minute.

With salt, whisky, calico, cheap alarm clocks, rifles, etc., to trade, we sighted a small island called Sitanki. Palm-fringed shores came into view, and native canoes put off. We came to anchor about a mile off shore, and I stood in the bow with a rifle in my hand, while Norton stayed on the poop. A canoe came alongside with five men in it. The chief called, and Norton answered, and then the trading started. Savages with rings in their ears and noses handed over copra for a few trinkents, at last, the trading done, we hauled up anchor and headed for the sea again, for the natives are dangerous and treacherous, and we did not want to be too close to shore at dark.

We had to keep a close eye on that native crew, for they were New Guineans, and every one was a cannibal. They gave us little trouble, though, and we were thankful for that. When we headed for New Britain, New Guinea, Norton gave me some clothes and a new Wembly revolver, and began perfecting my navigation. With him, I learned what it was to lay off a palm-fringed coast that looked like heaven, except that the endless boom, boom of the tom-toms at cannibal feasts nearly drove me mad.

While with Norton I had occasion to fire pointblank into native war canoes with a 12-guage shotgun to repel the brown devils and prevent them from using us as the piece de resistance at a feast. One of our sailors tried to knife me one night, and next morning I had the pleasure of pulling a lanyard that caused him to choke to death on the mainmast. Unless the white man is a devil incarnate he will not last long in that part of the world.

We continued north as far as Borneo and the Celebes Islands, where few white men went those days. Our profits ran high, and I received wages as much as $75 a month. I left Norton in the spring of 1905 with a money belt containing over $1,000 as my share of the voyage, and headed for Manila.

Unveil Statue of Alexander Stephens In National Hall of Fame December 8

Gutzon Borglum, noted sculptor, is shown here putting the finishing touches to his statue of Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy, which will be unveiled December 8 in the statuary hall of "The Hall of Fame" at Washington, D. C.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

When a magnificent statue of Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy and distinguished son of Georgia, is to be unveiled in Statuary hall, "The Hall of Fame," at Washington, D. C., December 8, it will serve as a perpetual monument to one of the south's ablest sons. At the same time it will mark the culmination of tireless effort on the part of two prominent American citizens, one being Mrs. J. M. High, of Atlanta, who financed the undertaking, and the other Gutzon Borglum, noted sculptor, who designed the monument and contributed his efforts to the work without remuneration.

Erection of this monument in Statuary hall was made possible through the efforts of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, who enlisted the support of Mrs. High and Mr. Borglum, according to Dr. Garnett Quillian, of Atlanta, who is chairman of the statuary committee named by the governor of Georgia. This committee under the leadership of Dr. Quillian placed a statue in the hall last year of Dr. Crawford W. Long, the first surgeon to use ether as an anesthetic, which was unveiled May 30, 1926.

Dr. Quillian announced that no special invitations will be issued for the unveiling of the Stephens statue at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of December 8, but said everybody is cordially invited to attend.

At present the statue is in the studio of Mr. Borglum at San Antonio, Texas, where it is receiving the finishing touches from the famous sculptor who conceived the original design for the Stone Mountain memorial and who worked for years on that project.

According to present plans Governor L. G. Hardman and his official staff will go to Washington to attend the unveiling ceremonies. Plans are now being worked out to charter a special train to accommodate the crowd of Georgians who will be present at the exercises.

Addresses will be delivered at the unveiling by Governor Hardman, United States Senators William J. Harris and Walter F. George, and Dr. Quillian. The statue will be unveiled by little Miss Ida Stephens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stephens; great-grandniece of Alexander Stephens, and Sam Venable Mason, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mason, of Atlanta.

The banner of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be carried during the ceremonies by Mrs. Stafford Seidell, president of the Atlanta chapter of that organization. The United States flag will be carried by Mrs. John A. Perdue and Mrs. Frank Mason while Georgia flags will be carried by Mrs. J. M. High and Mrs. Charles Phillips. The United States senate chaplain will pronounce the invocation while the benediction will be offered by Dr. Sam W. Small.

Georgia is allowed two statues in Statuary hall. The Georgia legislature selected Alexander Stephens and Dr. Long as the two Georgians whose monuments should stand in "The Hall of Fame" as distinguished representatives of this state.

The statues of both Dr. Long and Alexander Stephens are carved out of Georgia marble which was furnished by Sam Tate, owner of the Tate quarries in Pickens county, who provided the marble at the actual cost of quarrying.

EDITOR OF MIAMI PAPER IS BEATEN

Miami, Fla., November 12.—(AP)—George R. K. Carter and Rudy Leavitt, of Miami Beach, today forfeited bonds of $150 each in police court on charges of attacking and beating Kent Watson, editor of the Miami Beach Beacon, a weekly publication, following an anti-gambling house editorial which appeared in Watson's paper yesterday.

After the men gave bail last night on the police court charges they were arrested again on county warrants sworn out by the editor. Carter gave bond of $5,500 on charges of operating a gambling house, assault and battery and threat to kill, while Leavitt posted $3,500 on charges of assault and battery and threat to kill.

Police raided the place at which Watson's editorial said the gambling house was operated. It was closed.

Police reports said eyewitnesses reported that Carter and Leavitt drove up alongside Watson as he stood near his newspaper office in the beach business section and attempted to force him into the machine. Failing in this, the reports said, Carter got down from the car and choked the editor while Leavitt held him.

Newsstand stocks of Watson's paper were bought out in full by persons who awaited their arrival, before the public had opportunity to purchase, Watson declared he had learned today.

STORY OF CAROL AIDE BRINGS TEARS

gathered from audiences with King Ferdinand that the sovereign regarded renunciation and the regency as only transitorial measures until Carol should mend his ways.

M. Manoilescu startled the court by declaring of his own knowledge as former assistant minister of finance that there was an enormous deficit in Rumanian finances, amounting to 3,500,000,000 lei (approximately $21,000,000) "of which nobody speaks." He charged that other great deficits existed in the public debt and that proper equilibrium could be restored only by a strong authoritative ruler.

Gasps of Surprise.

There were gasps of surprise when Manoilescu revealed that the government had tried to win him over to its side by offering him the post of minister at Rome or Berlin.

"Thinking I was dissatisfied with the price," he went on, "the government then offered me the ministership at London. I declined, and out of one prison I may enter another. I have chosen not the way to honors, but the way of honor."

He charged the government with being afraid to allow its members to testify before the court. The apparent sincerity and frankness of Manoilescu in his five-hour effort greatly impressed his auditors. Half of them at times were tearful. Protesting that he had been an engineer all his life and therefore constructive, he exclaimed: "That I am in revolt against the government is due to the tragic state of the country."

Denying that Carol's matrimonial differences were responsible for his renunciation Manoilescu declared that there was a document written in Carol's own hand to King Ferdinand containing the real reasons for his renunciation and showing that it was the outcome of political intrigues. Manoilescu accused Premier Bratiano and his administration with being tactless and blundering in their efforts to induce Carol to return.

Defends Use of Code.

Asserting his innocence of any revolutionary intention, the witness explained that the employment of a code was essential because the censors always stopped telegrams or eliminated the names of any of the opposition leaders, and he was ready to prove that the postoffice had opened his letters. Throughout, he emphasized that his deep attachment for the fatherland was the sole inspiration of all his acts, and he concluded with these words:

"Whether the court's verdict is guilty or innocent, I shall never cease to cry 'Long live Rumania, long live the army.'"

With these words, he sank into a chair utterly exhausted.

Several witnesses for the defense were called, including the leaders of the peasants party, Maniu, Madgearu and former Minister Popovici. They declared their disbelief that either Carol or Manoilescu was capable of subversive, illegal or unconstitutional acts, and they considered it perfectly feasible that Carol might become a member of the regency.

The court adjourned until Monday when it will probably render a verdict.

FALL BELIEVES DEATH IS NEAR

The Washington climate has never suited his health, Fall said.

"In ten years as senator, and two as a member of the cabinet, I spent only one Christmas here," he went on.

Reticent about talking for publication, the former interior secretary said: "It was always my custom never to say what I was going to do, but to do things. That is why I told nobody about the Teapot Dome leases. I was Harding's representative. And I will not now seek to try my case in the newspapers. What I will say, though, is that no person connected with my side of the case will stand on their constitutional rights of immunity."

Fall Undecided.

Fall declined to amplify the statement, in response to an inquiry whether it meant that he intended to take the stand in his own defense when the new trial is called. At that moment, Mrs. Fall entered the room bearing the last nourishment to be taken by her husband before train time.

"It remains to be seen what he will do," she said.

Fall nodded his head, flicked out a cigarette he had been smoking, and turned to eat.

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—The Chicago Association of Candy Jobbers is under federal investigation in connection with alleged violations of the Sherman anti-trust law, it was reported at the federal building today.

Special Assistant Attorney Generals Miss Mary G. Connor and William H. Benham have arrived from Washington to handle the matter, which embraces alleged violence and intimidations of non-members and members who have been forced into the association through these means.

One of the main charges against the association, it was disclosed, will be that they have conspired to create a monopoly to fix prices and to boycott non-members. The association is said to have especially set for its task to eliminate tobacco dealers from the candy industry.

PECANS GROWING IN FAVOR AS GIFTS MADE AT CHRISTMAS

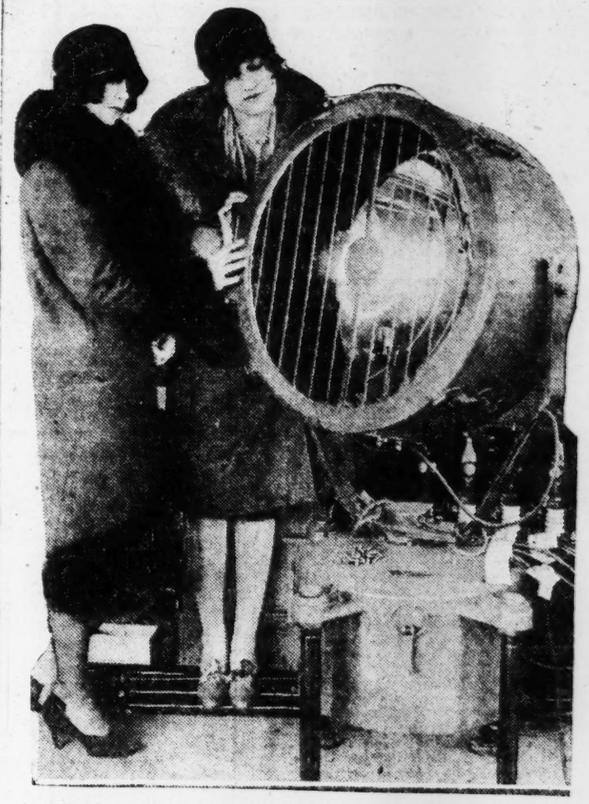

Waycross, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—One thousand pounds of famous Ware county paper shell pecans are being shipped to the New York offices of the J. C. Penney company by W. S. McClain, Waycross manager. It is understood that these pecans are to be used as Christmas presents among the employees in the New York offices of the company. The purchase was made through M. M. Monroe, president of the Pecan Products company, of this city.

The practice of giving pecans for Christmas presents is gaining in favor throughout the country. Officials of John Robinson's circus, here several weeks ago, bought many cartons of pecans for Christmas presents, shipping them to various sections of the United States.

Ground Work Completed

:: TO INSTALL GIANT BEACONS THIS MONTH ::

Now at Candler Field

Official sanction was given the giant beacon light which will be installed at Candler field, Atlanta's airport, Saturday when Miss Louise Hopkins, left, and Miss Evelyn Dewberry, right, inspected the guide to future night fliers. Miss Hopkins is connected with the office of Chief of Construction William A. Hansell, who will mount the light atop a 50-foot platform, and Miss Dewberry is secretary to Mayor I. N. Ragsdale.

All ground work at Candler field, Atlanta's air port, has been completed and installation of the lighting system for night flying and completion of the rest houses and other structures in connection with formal opening of the field only remains to be done, it was announced Saturday by Alderman William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the aviation committee of city council.

Preparations are being rapidly completed for the formal opening the week of December 1, when workmen will have finished the task of transforming the rugged field into one of the best and most modernly equipped in the entire country.

Included in the celebration will be demonstrations of emergency landings, with flares dropped from speeding planes, bombing demonstrations, blimp maneuvering and, last but not least, placing into operation for the time of the gigantic lighting system.

City Electrician Robert C. Turner and attaches of the department of construction will concentrate their forces on the field this week to assure completion of installation by December 1.

The new electrical equipment cost approximately $10,000 and is composed of a large beacon light, which will be placed on a revolving tower 50 feet above the field. The lamp will revolve one time every 10 seconds sending a ray of light of 2,000,000 candle power into the air to guide planes to the field.

As soon as a plane is heard, the boundary lamps will be lighted and when it is ready to make a landing a giant 30,000,000 candle-power flood lamp will roll the shades of night from the field and make it as bright as day.

Red boundary lamps will tell the pilots that they are mounted on obstructions, while green lamps will guide the plane to safe landings. As soon as the plane touches the field the operators will cut off the flood lamp, because it would blind the pilot and thus increase the hazard of taxing to hangars.

Mr. Hartsfield is completing plans for what probably will be the biggest aviation show ever staged in this section of the United States.

LINDY SMASHES FLIGHT RECORD

Mitchel Field, N. Y., November 12. (United News.)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh flew here alone today from Selfridge Field, Mich., in what was said to be record time for spanning the approximately 500 miles between the two points.

Lindbergh left the Michigan field at 9:55 a. m. and landed here at 1:17 p. m., three hours and 22 minutes later.

He stepped smiling from his plane and found no one to meet him because he was so far ahead of schedule. He said he had a favoring wind all the way from Mount Clemens. According to army fliers who greeted him at the operations office, Lindbergh's own estimate of the elapsed time led him to remark that he "had come through in 2 hours and 45 minutes."

VENICE WADING PARTY IS STAGED BY SHOP GIRLS

Venice, Italy, November 12.—(AP)—A community wading party was staged here about noon today, when home-going shop employees found the famous square of St. Mark's, in front of the cathedral, transformed into a little lagoon by a high tide and heavy rains of last night.

The spectacle of girls walking knee-deep in the water, their stockings draped over their shoulders, their shoes in their hands, appeared to delight the onlookers of the staid city of the doges. Finally a few wooden footbridges were improvised. These served for the older people, and the baggage porters from the near-by station reaped a harvest in transporting marooned persons in wheelbarrows and trucks.

INTERNAL REVENUE CHANGES OKAYED

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—The joint congressional committee on internal revenue taxation approved today with only a single exception upwards of two score recommendations submitted by its advisory board for simplification in administration of the nation's revenue statutes.

It ordered a favorable report on the proposed changes tendered to the house ways and means committee the first of the week along with the recommendation that they be enacted into law by congress.

The joint body, however, failed to agree on a proposal to modify section 220 of the revenue law, which deals with the taxing of corporations, and ordered this proposal submitted without recommendation.

Representative Green, of Iowa, who heads both committees, said that it was impossible to obtain unanimity of opinion on the proposed change, although he favored its revisions. He said he believed there was a large evasion of taxes by holding companies under this section.

"As the matter stands now," he added, "I think that section 220 should be made definite and certain and obligatory to enforcement."

Present Provisions.

This section imposes a tax of 50 per cent on the net income of a corporation which permits its gains and profits to accumulate for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the surtax upon its stockholders, and the joint committee's advisory board reported that enforcement of the section is "obscure and difficult of administration."

It suggested a provision which, it said, "will tend to give some incentive to corporations to make reasonable distributions without going to the extent of enforcing unwise distributions."

The principle was stated as follows: "Allow the corporation a deduction in computing net income equal to, say 20 per cent of the excess of dividends paid over dividends received, the deduction in no case to be more than, say, 25 per cent of the corporation's taxable net income before such deduction. In computation, no account should be taken of stock dividends."

Of all the recommendations only one, the proposal for revising the present method of computing the earned income credit, constituted any approach to a change in tax rates. The suggestions were of a technical nature and designed primarily to guide the confused taxpayer in making out his tax returns.

Simplicity Impossible.

It was reported that a simple income tax law for complex business appeared almost out of the question but that it was felt that some degree of simplification could be attained. One of the recommendations along this line was for consolidation of the 64 offices of the collector of internal revenue and the 36 offices of revenue agents into a total of approximately 60 offices.

The ways and means committee is expected to take up this report when it meets Monday to begin consideration in executive session of a new tax bill. Open hearings, at which a number of conflicting proposals for tax reduction were received, were closed two days ago.

WEEKLY MAGAZINE LEASES OFFICES; REYNOLDS CHIEF

Palmer, Inc., Saturday announced that it has leased to the American Weekly magazine offices at 517 in the 101 Marietta Street building, as southern headquarters for the publication.

Roger M. Reynolds, well-known Atlanta advertising man and former advertising director of the Atlanta Georgian-American, has become southern manager for the American Weekly magazine, it also was made known Saturday.

TO ASSIST MOTORISTS MAKING TAX RETURNS

Charles Cook, for several years an employee in the secretary of state's office, has been engaged by the Atlanta Motor club, at 336 West Peachtree street, to render free service to the general public regarding making out motor tax returns.

From January 1 until the sale of 1928 tags ends Mr. Cook can be reached at the motor club office, it was announced by Frank T. Reynolds, vice president.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for only 75 cents, all ready to use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.—(adv.)

Zachry Goes to Chicago To Make New Purchases

Front view of the attractive shop of Zachry, 116 Peachtree street, exclusive dealers in Hart Schaffner & Marx clothing, which is meeting with wide popularity among Atlanta men.

A. L. Zachry, head of the house of Zachry, 116 Peachtree street, exclusive dealers in Hart Shaffner & Marx clothing for men, left Saturday for Chicago on a special buying trip to bring back to Atlanta the latest in colors, styles and fabrics from the Hart Shaffner & Marx factory in order to replenish the stock of his two-months old company.

"During our two months of operation," Mr. Zachry said prior to his departure, "our business has far exceeded the most sanguine expectations and we are more than pleased with it despite adverse weather conditions. Heavy sales have depleted our stock despite the fact that we receive almost daily consignments of Hart- Shaffner & Marx clothes, and my trip to Chicago is to fill out the comprehensive stock which we intend to carry at all times as well as to assure our patrons of the latest and finest products of our house.

"I intend to make these buying trips several times every year, a fact which will insure a full stock of new goods. We feel that our success is largely due to the wonderful values we are offering in fresh merchandise of the highest type; to our constant receipt of new goods and to the concentrated advertising we are using in Atlanta."

With Mather Brothers

Ralph L. Jeffords, who for several years has been with Atlanta's leading furniture stores and is widely known to the furniture buying public, Mr. Jeffords is now with Mather Brothers in their new store, 229-31 Peachtree street, and invites all his friends and customers to call on him there.

MACHINISTS' HEAD WILL SPEAK HERE AT LABOR TEMPLE

P. J. Conlon, of Washington, D. C., vice president of the International Association of Machinists, will be in Atlanta on November 19, to address a meeting at the Labor temple that night, at 7:30 o'clock, it was announced Saturday by Paul Chipman, recording secretary for lodge No. 1, I. A. of M., under auspices of which Mr. Conlon will speak.

Mr. Conlon has been an officer of the machinists' organization for 20 years and is well-known in labor circles. He is now touring the southeast and comes here from Jacksonville, Fla. Leaving Atlanta Sunday morning, November 20, he will stop off at Charlotte, N. C., on his return to Washington. The public is invited to attend the meeting at the Labor temple.

THREE ARE HELD FOR GRAND JURY IN NARCOTIC CASE

Three alleged narcotic peddlers, seized last week in a general round-up conducted by federal narcotic agents, were held Saturday by United States Comissioner L. S. Ledbetter for the federal grand jury.

R. W. McCoy and Jimmie Cooksey were held under $500 bond each, while LeRoy McCoy was held under $1,000 bond, all on charges of possessing and selling morphine.

Maude Monk, Rosa Tyree Small and Lillie Rimsky were held Friday by Commissioner Ledbetter under $500 bond each for possessing and selling narcotics.

Rube Mitchell, Joe Smith and Henry Akeridge will be given preliminary hearings by Judge Ledbetter Monday on similar charges.

JOHN T. BOIFEUILLET WILL SPEAK TONIGHT

John T. Boifeuillet, well-known Georgian, will be the principal speaker at the annual home-coming celebration of the Inman Park Epworth league tonight at 7 o'clock in the Inman Park Methodist church, it was announced Saturday by A. O. Brewton, president of the league.

A special entertainment program has been prepared by Mrs. Edgar Good, first department superintendent, which will include songs, readings and instrumental music. The public is invited to attend.

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK TO BE OBSERVED HERE

Observance of "Children's Book" week, which begins today, will be participated in by the Carnegie library and public schools of Atlanta, with special plans for encouraging the reading of books among youth of the city. Prizes are to be awarded school children who prepare the best exhibits in connection with books they have read.

On the committee of judges on all entries are Mrs. Howard McCutcheon, representing the Carnegie library board; Mrs. Charles J. Foster, president of the Parent-Teacher council; Mrs. Tom Brooke, chairman of education, Atlanta Woman's club; Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, secretary Georgia library commission; Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president board of education, and Miss Ethel Massengale, supervisor of drawing Atlanta public schools.

Twelve prizes are to be donated by Miller's Book store, Georgia News company, Macmillan company, Cole Book company, H. R. Hutting company and Baker & Taylor company.

CAROLINIAN NAMED ON FEDERAL BODY

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Garland S. Ferguson, Jr., of Greensboro, N. C., was appointed a member of the federal trade commission today by President Coolidge.

In naming Mr. Ferguson the president followed out the recommendation of C. Bascom Slemp, his former private secretary, and other southern leaders to name a man from the south to this commission in view of the increasing importance of industry in the southern states.

SALVATION ARMY DONATIONS HELP ATLANTA'S POOR

Contributions of discarded articles from 182 families who telephoned the Salvation Army, Ivy 2224, last week, enabled distribution of 1,351 garments, 134 pairs of shoes and 35 pieces of furniture among Atlanta's poor during the week, it was reported Saturday by Staff Captain W. H. Range, commander of the social service and industrial department of the army.

Continued need for blankets and comforters, in excess of the number contributed in response to an appeal made last week, was noted in the report. Practically all overcoats which have been contributed to the army were distributed during the last cold spell, leaving the organization unprepared to meet the need that will arise when the next cold wave comes, he said.

FULTON ALUMNI TO PRESENT PLAY BY EDITH ELLIS

"Whose Little Bride Are You?," a comedy in three acts, by Edith Ellis, author of "Seven Sisters" and "The Man Higher Up," will be presented by the members of the Fulton High School Alumni association Thursday evening, November 17, at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium, corner Washington street and Woodward avenue.

The cast will include Mrs. Fay Tate Barrett, Robert Fulghum, Miss Elizabeth Hudson, J. S. Heard, Jr., J. T. Chambers, Miss Velma Jones, John Poole, Miss Dolly Walters, Paul D. West and Miss Katherine Tate.

GOVERNOR WILL SPEAK TODAY TO T. E. L. CLASS

Governor L. G. Hardman will address the T. E. L. class at the Druid Hills Baptist church at 9:30 o'clock this morning. An enthusiastic rally of active members and visitors is anticipated for the meeting, it is announced by Mrs. W. M. Perryman, class reporter.

Activities of the Week in Atlanta's Schools

EDITED by RICHARD CLARK

Armistice Day Program Impressive Feature Friday At Tenth Street School

Memorial Exercises Are Conducted By Students To Honor School Alumni Who Died In War.

An Armistice day program which excelled in simple dignity, and showed vividly the training being received by Atlanta students in the elementary schools, was that held Friday morning at Tenth Street school, where Mrs. E. D. Newport is principal. From start to finish the exercises were smoothly carried out, with all the details in the hands of the students themselves. The military band of the Boys' High school furnished the music for the occasion, and assisted the presentation of the program in no small degree.

Announcement of the program was made by two young ladies from the upper grades, Elizabeth Gillelsan, of low six one, and Elizabeth Nalley, of low six two. The exercises were opened by the singing of "America" by the entire school, followed by the Lord's prayer in unison.

Scott Poer, of low six one, was the first speaker. He briefly and clearly outlined the purpose of the day, and recalled the bravery of American youth, especially of the six Tenth street heroes. He was followed by Raymond Nelson, of low six two, who delivered the stirring poem, "The Red, White and Blue." Then came Ward Sims, of high five, whose subject was "In Memoriam." "Flanders' Field" and "America's Answer," were then given by Susan Falligant, of low five one, with "America for Me," by Milton Klein, of low five two, next.

One of the most attractive features of the program then followed, the acrostical representation of "America." Seven students of high four participated: Marvin Walker, Frances Holliman, Mary Nell McKain, Henrietta Collier, Cheney Robinson, Earl Dolive and Lucile Bartholomew.

"What Can a Little Chap Do?" delivered by Warren Howard Spear, of low four, was next in order, succeeded by a salute to "The Tenth Street Boys" who died in action during the world war. The men in honor of whom the memorial was erected are Robert Richmond Forrester, of the class of 1908; William Burch Hinman, class of 1909; Yoel Lyons Joel, of the class of 1910; Jack Meredith Donaldson, class of 1910; Beverly Daniel Evans, Jr., class of 1912, and Marcus Watland Beck, Jr., class of 1913. J. B. Bean, of low six two, led this salute, which was participated in by the whole school.

The final number on the program was the "Star-Spangled Banner," sung by the school, and followed by the "Pledge of Allegiance" to the American flag.

It is interesting to note that the Tenth street memorial, which was erected in 1922, is the only one of its sort that has been erected by a grammar school in the United States. Only one other exists in the world and that is in London, England. The memorial was erected by contributions of Tenth street pupils, and in the cornerstone of the monument are the names of over 800 children, each of whom earned $1 as a contribution toward the fund to erect it. The motto inscribed on it follows: "To the living dead—that company of shining souls who gave their youth that the world might grow old in peace"—a beautiful motto, a beautiful monument, and a beautiful ceremony to honor America's heroic doughboys.

HARRIS THIRD GRADE CONSTRUCTS BOOKLET

The low third class at Joel Chandler Harris school is at present very busy in the construction of a booklet called "Harris Happenings," which is to contain an account of every month's events at the school. This booklet will be a review of the year's work when the close of schools comes, and should prove very interesting to future classes.

One hundred per cent Red Cross membership has been the leading item in the school for some time, and a number of classes have already attained their goal. Low four-one was the first to reach 100 per cent. Other classes which have the perfect record are low six-one, low six-two, section one of low kindergarten, low one-two and high two.

Every pupil in high five is reading a book at present, on which they will report in the near future. Many booklets, posters and reports are to be made from this study.

Eighty-two books have been collected in low six-one, and the students now have a "Cozy Corner" in their room.

The low sixth graders are now studying farm and animal life. High six had a most interesting Armistice day program on Friday. This class' narcissus bulbs show promise of being in bloom next week.

High one pupils are making clay objects and painting them. This class is also making a book on the story of Mabel, which they have read.

Low five-two is contesting in a spelling race within the class. At present the S. Steamer is in the lead.

DREWRY TO SPEAK TO JOURNALISM BODY

Athens, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—For the fourth consecutive year, John E. Drewry, associate professor of journalism in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia, has been invited to appear on the annual convention program of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism. The convention this year is to be held at the University of Iowa.

The invitation to Drewry was extended this year by Professor Fred J. Lazell, of the school of journalism of the University of Iowa, who is president of the Journalism Teachers' association.

MACON MAN HEADS UNIVERSITY CLASS

Athens, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Robert Young, Macon, member of the University cross-country team, has been elected president of the sophomore class at the university. The office became vacant when John R. Gunnels, of Hull, did not return to the university this fall.

MORELAND SIXTH COLLECTS LEAVES

We have had a visit from Mr. Claude Ashley. He spoke to the low sixth grade about Egypt and the interesting life of King Tut and made it so interesting that we will continue to study about Egypt with new pleasure.

Mr. Ashley also spoke to the fifth and high fourth grades about the habits of the beavers. They enjoyed his talks so much that they hope he will come again soon.

Low-six-one is so proud of Mary Francis Bush for winning the 10 free music lessons offered by Mr. Wickersham to the winner in a music contest.

Low-six-one and low-six-two are having a contest between the most 100 per cent papers and fewest mistakes in spelling.

Low-six-two has a graph on which are recorded the weekly papers. They are studying dogwood and collecting leaves.

A group of high-six children visited the "Wren's Nest" with their teacher and found it very interesting.

The children of low-five-two who had certificates for perfect teeth were taken to the Cyclorama by their teacher, Miss Powell.

Low-three-two won the attendance banner last week. These children are studying history and cutting different animals of the early herdsmen.

The kindergarten children are modeling clay into big fat cows and pigs and bowls. They find it very much fun.

GEORGIA AVE. THIRD GIVES DUTCH PARTY

Georgia Avenue school is trying to celebrate educational week. On Tuesday we had the great pleasure of having open house day and all the parents were invited to come to school to see our work and meet our teachers. A great many mothers came and enjoyed the time spent with us. Dr. Gay spoke to all the mothers on the interesting subject of "Children's Diet."

Our grades are all trying to make our school 100 per cent in Red Cross as quickly as possible.

High one has 100 per cent Red Cross membership.

Low two planted some bulbs.

High three had a Dutch party. They invited Miss Fewer and their mothers to the party.

Low four pupils are studying South America and the tea plant. They had a play called "The Sled."

High four has 100 per cent Red Cross. They gave a program for the P.-T. A. meeting and won the prize.

High five has but four to get 100 per cent perfect teeth and is trying to reach its goal by Thanksgiving to get a holiday.

Low six has 100 per cent Red Cross membership and has but three to get 100 per cent perfect teeth. They had 100 per cent attendance all last week.

High six has 31 pupils out of 42 who are 100 per cent perfect in teeth.

Ungraded class had 100 per cent in banking.

KIRKWOOD CLASSES JOIN JR. RED CROSS

Miss Heiman's class, low one-four, and Miss McGehee's class, low three-two, have 100 per cent membership in the Red Cross. The school is very proud of these two classes and hopes that others will follow their example.

High two-one, Miss Robson's class, is very much interested just now in the study of Indians.

Miss Graves was with us last Tuesday, and, as usual, we were happy to see her.

Elizabeth Dollburg was elected president of the Audubon society in Miss Moore's room. Of course Elizabeth will make a fine president.

Our fifth and sixth grades visited Carnegia library last week and they feel deeply indebted to Carnegie instructors for all they heard and learned.

Mr. Ashley, whom every child in Kirkwood loves, was at our school last Friday and spoke to several classes. He spoke to fifth and sixth grades on "Egypt." How we did enjoy his talk and appreciate his visit.

ARMISTICE PROGRAM GIVEN AT COVINGTON

Covington, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Appropriate exercises were held in the school auditorium Friday morning in observance of Armistice day, the program being sponsored by American Legion auxiliary, Daughters of the American Revolution, United Daughters of the Confederacy and the American Legion.

Rev. J. L. Allgood, pastor of the First Methodist church of Covington, who gave several months service in France as chaplain in the World war, was the principal speaker, which was the outstanding feature of the program.

All places of business closed at 2 o'clock.

SCHOOL BONDS LOSE IN MONROE COUNTY

Forsyth, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—In the election held throughout Monroe county today voting on a $70,000 bond issue for school purposes, the issue lost by 34 votes.

Forsyth and Culloden voted almost solidly for the bonds but lack of interest in the county precincts caused the vote to fall short of the vote required, it being necessary that two-thirds of the votes cast be favorable to the issue.

Tech High School Elects President

Executives of the United States of Tech High were elected at the school last Wednesday, November 9. George "Droopy" Carnes, left, was named vice president, and Frank "Pap" Terrell, right, president. The winners defeated by a comfortable majority three other tickets.

O'KEEFE SCHOOL ELECTS PRESIDENT

Wednesday was a big day for O'Keefe. The day was set aside as the day on which the president and vice president of the student body were to be elected. The white party was victorious, winning by the small majority of 516 to 496 votes of the green party. Interest was very high and competition keen, as all the candidates were popular, as may be seen by thec lose vote. Billy Stern and Elizabeth Swinford were elected, winning over Eunice Duke and Alice Davis.

On Friday night O'Keefe kept open house to all parents and friends. The domestic science classes and boys' shops were busy as in regular school. A physical training class also went through the regular routine of a period in gym. The library was open and all class rooms had the work on exhibit. We were glad to welcome so many friends who are interested in us and our work. Both teachers and pupils are encouraged to go on with renewed energy.

At the assemblies on Thursday and Friday quite a clever play was given to illustrate book week. Different books were represented and told of their trials and tribulations. The play was directed by Miss Vaughn and presented by her pupils.

Every class is working hard to gain points for the "responsibility chart." Points are given for various activities. At the end of each semester the class having the largest number of points to its credit will be given a banquet.

To add to the excitement of election day, word was passed along the line, "Locker inspection!" Such a scurrying of feet, slamming of doors as everyone hastened to put his special property in order. Woe be unto him whose locker was not as neat as a pin.

MARCIA BAKER.

SPRING SCHOOL GIVES ARMISTICE PROGRAM

Six-one had an interesting Armistice day program. Turner Middlebrooks was the orator.

The children of six-eleven are sorry that Lether DuPree is sick and we hope she will be back soon.

The children of low-four-five have a terrarium of caterpillar. They are studying them very closely.

The children of low-two-three are drawing some leaves. Some of them are very pretty.

The children of low-one have made some pretty autumn pictures.

UNIVERSITY RIFLE TEAM BEGINS PRACTICE

Athens, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Strengthened by material from other institutions, the rifle team at the University of Georgia has bright prospects, Captain Ira C. Nicholas, coach of the team, has announced. Practice began this week.

Distinguishing numerals probably will be awarded to members of the team this year, Captain Nicholas said.

COAST LINE ROAD PLACES HEAVY RAILS

Waycross, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Two improvements made in the Waycross district of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad recently have been the laying of 100-pound rails from Waycross to Albany and the laying of heavier rails from Albany to Thomasville.

For one-half of the distance from Waycross to Albany the track has been ballasted with slag.

A Message From Supt. Sutton

To the boys and girls of Atlanta,

My dear boys and girls:

The board of education at its meeting last week ratified the proposal to give the holiday for perfect teeth, and commended the wonderful good which was being accomplished by our perfect teeth campaign. We have only two weeks in which to get ready for our Thanksgiving holiday, and those schools that reach 100 per cent by that time may have an added holiday and a regular little fall vacation. I cannot help but call to your attention what a wonderful thing it would be for you and for your teachers to have this period of rest and refreshment at Thanksgiving time, and I hope every boy and every girl in Atlanta will see his or her dentist, have what work is necessary to be done completed, and secure from them a dental certificate. If there is no work necessary, the securing of the certificate will take but just a few moments.

I cannot over-emphasize what it means to have perfect teeth. It means a bright and shining expression about the mouth and face. Everyone is attracted by beautiful teeth. To the girls it means that boys will think they are more beautiful and attractive. To the boys it means that the girls will think they are even more manly and handsome. But more than just our looks, means much to our success in life.

Men and women who employ boys and girls are anxious for those who have a clean appearance, and who will help their business by their personality. Nothing will contribute more to this desired result than that we should have beautiful teeth.

But in addition to these things, of course you know that good teeth contribute to good health. They save us from pain, anxiety, worry, sickness and bring to us many of the greatest blessings in life. I wish our boys and girls to thoroughly understand that while we offer the holiday for perfect teeth, that what we wish you to do is to fall in love with the idea of having good teeth and good health rather than simply earning a holiday. But I do believe that we should hold out some reward and incentive to you to secure what we call perfect teeth.

I cannot close this letter without reminding you that we must also take care of our teeth. No matter if all defects are remedied, if we do not clean and care for our mouths, they still become the center of disease germs and will be offensive to others and a great drawback to ourselves.

Trusting that every school in Atlanta will do its very best to get 100 per cent by Thanksgiving day and thus have an added blessing for which to be grateful, I am

Always your friend,

WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Seminary Magazine Assured By Large Oversubscription

"Fifteen rahs for the seminary!" Really 30 rahs wouldn't be too many to let the city know how proud the students and the faculty are over the last lap and finish of the "Missemma race."

When anyone puts on a drive to obtain a certain sum of money they are always very, very pleased when their goal is reached. But when they go beyond their expectations, their joy is usually unlimited. Thus, wild excitement stirred the study hall of Washington seminary when the magazine staff announced the results of the race which has held such a large place in the pupils' interest for the last week and a half. All the girls knew that the senior class had passed far beyond the finish several days before. Also they knew that the freshman class had run them a close second, while the juniors and sophomores were not far behind. Because of the large number and the large amount of the ads, which were being brought in by almost everyone, the girls felt that the seminary had reached the goal of $750, but no one dared to imagine that we had gone over the top. So the whole student body was overcome with delight when Hannah Sterne, the business manager, announced that the Missemma had not only $750 in ads and subscriptions, but $200 besides.

Now, by means of the wonderful work of the staff and by the remarkable but not unusual cooperation of the entire school, every issue of the Missemma is assured for the year. faculty adviser as Miss Ambler, an helpers will not have to worry about where the money for the next issue is coming from this term. Surely with such a financial start, with such an excellent staff, and last, but by no means least, with such a capable faculty adviser as Miss Ambler, an unusually successful year is on record for the 1927-28 Missemma! Just keep an eye on it!

After much meditation and competition on the part of the different classes they elected their officers. Certainly the students realized how much responsibility falls upon executives, for all of the officers are well adapted for their positions. The seniors announced that their officers are Boots Walker, president; Jane Tway, vice president; Phoebe Rhett, secretary; Linda Jernigan, treasurer. The juniors' election resulted in Ida Nevin, president; Louise Moore, vice president; Ruth Miller, secretary; Jacqulin Moore, treasurer. The sophomores have for their officers Mary Meador Goldsmith, president; Charlotte King, vice president; Liza Tway, secretary; May Latimer, treasurer. Freshman officers are Harriet Grant, president;, Judy King first vice president; Caroline Crumley, second vice president; Margaret King, third vice president; Jule McClatchey, secretary; Betty Watson, treasurer.

All who tuned in on the radio last Friday evening certainly heard a program that was one of the most enjoyable ever offered the public, for the music faculty of the seminary gave a recital then. The reports from the program are highly complimentary to the participants, and bring credit to the teachers and Washington seminary.

Many enjoyable events have taken place this past week at school. First among the entertainments was a party given by the four granddaughters of Hoke Smith. The attractive hostesses, Sarah Smith, Raymer Simps, Birdie and Olive Pratt, invited the fourth and fifth grades to a most attractive Halloween party at recess one day near Halloween. The guests evidently had a lively time for they ran about the yard getting much fun out of their huge noses, large spectacles and grotesque headgears.

Another amusing recess was furnished by the sophomore class. They invited everyone to come to their Halloween party and to bring their money with them. Most delicious looking cakes were raffled off; candy, drinks and ice cream were sold from beautifully decorated booths in the large gymnasium, while everyone from the first grade to the seniors enjoyed the fish pond and other games.

Surely some one realizes what a "sweet tooth" school girls have or the eighth grade would never have thought of having a candy pulling. It was such good candy! And what energy it caused to be exerted! Everyone wanted to win the price for having the whitest piece, so they labored vigorously until the bell called the big and the little to classes.

BASS OPEN HOUSE DRAWS VISITORS

An occasion of much interest to the patrons of William A. Bass Junior High school was the open house held at the school Friday evening. This demonstration showed in an interesting manner each phase of work covered by the courses of study at Bass.

Each department had a special rooms in which it presented specimens of work done by the pupils. In the English and mathematics class rooms note books and posters, work of the pupils, were attractively displayed.

The household and mechanical arts departments were especially interesting. Some of the articles displayed in the household arts exhibit included different garments made by the sewing classes, and foods which were put up in the cooking classes. To add to these, some of the articles that were made outside of school were displayed. The musical department had some of the pupils sing several selections.

Each exhibit showed the good work that is being done at Bass.

EGYPTIAN LIFE IS STUDIED AT FAITH

A record of 100 per cent in perfect teeth has been attained by the students in high-kindergarten and the children are very proud that they have reached this long-sought goal. The low-kindergarteners have planted bulbs and are watching daily the progress in growth of these plants.

Since Halloween week was also Apple week, the pupils of low-one had apples for refreshment at their recent party. They had great fun bobbing for them. In this class, Group 11 improved the most in reading.

All high-first-graders who have perfect teeth by November 18 will be entertained at a party by high-one-two.

Dental certificates were brought in by Henry Ward Cannon, Arthur Harris and Clifford Rose in high-three.

Low-five had a banking record of 86 per cent this week and the students are working hard for a perfect record next week.

Tech still holds the lead in high-five's spelling game. The score is now 29-26, and the opponents are pressing the leaders more closely every day.

Egypt and Egyptian customs have been the study of low-six. Red Cross pictures and posters are being used on their bulletin board.

In low-ungraded class individual health charts were made. Since they have just completed their study of Eskimos, they are planning to use their sand table to illustrate Eskimos, ogloos, sleds and weapons used in that clime.

A puppet show is being prepared by the boys in ungraded high-two, which is expected to be finished by next week. They are very much interested in creating characters for their little miniature theater.

Six students of high-six went to the Old Ladies' home Friday and told the ladies stories. The students were Voncyle Ivie, Evelyn Cochran, Margaret Clark, Vera Chandler, Corenlia Dial and Virginia Bradley.

CITIZENS DISCUSS JOE BROWN NEEDS

Members of the administration, members of the board and influential citizens in the Joe Brown district met on November 7 at Joe Brown to consider the needs of the school and to make plans of meeting these needs.

Those present were Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, Assistant Superintendent H. Reid Hunter, A. G. Martin, principal of Joe Brown; Dr. M. M. Burns, of the board of education; D. M. Therrell, Roy D. Warner and Dr. W. B. Duvall, E. F. Children, W. J. Laney, Rev. W. Lee Cutts, C. T. Baily, E. J. White and Dr. A. C. Ayers.

Dinner was served by the household arts department. The table was decorated with Halloween decorations.

Joe Brown now has a corridor patrol manned by the physical education department. The main purpose of this patrol is to care for the general condition of the corridors during class session and to keep watch over the lockers. Anyone breaking the rules made by this patrol is arrested and taken to the office.

CLAIM OF TRADE ADVANCE DENIED BY LLOYD GEORGE

South End-on-Sea, England, November 12.—(AP)—In a campaign speech, countering the recent claims of the chancellor of the exchequer, Winston Churchill, that British trade was improving, Former Premier Lloyd George today put the position of British trade as being in a very sad plight.

If the country were progressing, as Churchill claimed, it was the advance of a treadmill, said Lloyd George. "You walk without advancing, and if you slacken you are flung back and hit on the head," he said.

"Trade records of the last ten month," continued the former premier, "prove that Great Britain's trade balance has completely disappeared and I challenge anybody to deny it. Immense tracts of the world's populated territory are closed to British trade, including Russia and the greater part of China, and the cotton trade never was so bad probably since the American civil war."

Blaming the government policy for closing Russia, and contending that nations should not ask for a Sunday school certificate before trading with a country, Lloyd George exclaimed: "Why, Great Britain has been trading with cannibals. It was the empire that opened up cannibal traffic."

Zodiac Honorary Society Organizes at Boys' High

The Zodiac Honorary Society of Boys' High school recently held its first meeting of the year and elected the officers of the group. Emmett Rushin, president of the senior class, and prominent member of the Zodiac, was named president.

Consideration of members for the society was an important feature of the meeting. Membership in the Zodiac is one of the highest honors awarded at Boys' High, and as 12 members only are chosen from the school, its exclusiveness makes it an added honor to be included.

There are at present seven seniors in the group, and to reach its full quota, one senior and four juniors must be elected. The boys are chosen by a faculty and student committe, and must fulfill rigid requirements to be admitted. The present membership includes Emmett Rushin, Dick Clark, Ed Kane, Ben Read, Max Hall, Henry Kingdon and Jack Weems.

Debate and declamation programs are now a regular part of the class work at the school in accordance with the long-established custom of the Alciphronian Literary and Debating society, which has been identified with Boys' High ever since its founding. Jack Weems, as president of the school organization, is supervising the class debate work, which is conducted under the direction of individual class officers. A weekly debate program is given in each class, and declamations are delivered by the students, and a well-planned system of rotating schedules gives each boy his chance at debating and declamation once every two weeks. Last week's subject was, "Resolved: That for the best interests of the party and the country at large, the democratic party should nominate Governor Smith of New York as their candidate for president in 1928."

'Each One Take One' To Be Junior Red Cross Theme

Announcement of the results of the recently completed tinfoil contest of the Junior Red Cross shows that Spring Street school is winner of first prize. Faith school is second, giving the leaders a close race for their position. The prize is a large white box, lettered to indicate that it is a tinfoil receptacle, finished in excellent style.

Results in the contest were obtained by figuring the amount of tinfoil contributed by each school in proportion to the enrollment of the institution, thus enabling the smaller schools to successfully compete against the larger ones.

Saturday, November 19, has been designated as the day when the Junior Red Cross puts into practice its annual custom of "Each one take one." At that time the children of local nurseries and institutions will be the guests of members of the Junior Red Cross at the Howard theater matinee held on Saturday morning. Every school in the city is to assist in this work, and several hundred children will be entertained at the performance. The guests will be called for in buses, and delivered safely to the theater. After the program they will be further "treated" by their hosts and hostesses.

This custom was inaugurated by the Red Cross last year and proved so successful that it is being made an annual custom.

Central Night Literary Society Installs Officers

Time lost at fairs, circuses and food shows recently is being made up in hectic manner at Central night school, preparatory to receiving our first quarterly report cards, and of course everyone is looking forward to good marks.

Our first public debate was recently held between the two literary societies, the Jeffersonians and the Gradys. The Gradys won the decision, defending the negative side of the question: Resolved, that billboards should be prohibited in Georgia.

The Jeffersonian Literary society held its regular meeting last Wednesday night. The new president, H. V. Tuggle, was installed. David E. Ungar, president of our student council, presided. Mr. Ungar then presented the society with a handsomely framed portrait of Thomas Jefferson, after whom this society was named.

Concentration is being made difficult lately by sounds from the auditorium where our Central night school orchestra is practicing for our annual minstrel, which takes place Nobember 17 in our school auditorium, 232 Pryor street S. W. This promises to be a great success and tickets at only 25 cents each can be bought from any pupil of the school. The public is cordially invited. Come prepared for a good time.

WALTER E. LAFIMER.

Citizens To Vote on School Amendments in December

Ratification by a majority of voters in the December city elections of two important amendments to school bill No. 666, passed by the last state legislature, will be necessary before these amendments will take effect, it has been pointed out.

These amendments are of vital importance, and they merit the especial consideration and attention of all parents of city school children, it is stated.

Adoption of the first amendment will mean the designation of the chairman of the school committee of city council as an ex-officio member of the board of education during his term of office with the power and privilege of a regular member of the board.

The second proposed amendment provides that the budget of the board of education be submitted to the mayor for final approval. Veto of the budget by the mayor may be overruled by two-thirds vote of the board of education.

The proposed amendments in complete form follows:

Section 9.

Strike last paragraph of section 273 and add "The chairman of the school commission of the general council shall be an ex-officio member of the board of education during his term of office, and shall have all rights and powers of any other members of said board. Further, amending by increasing the number of members of board of education from 1 to each ward by adding to said number the chairman of school commission herein provided.

Section 10.

Add to section 377 of the city code of 1924 that the budget of the board of education shall be submitted not later than January 10, and receive the approval of the mayor before becoming final. The veto of the mayor is overcome by a two-thirds vote of the board of education. Failing to submit and approve a budget by January 15, the funds shall be administered by a committee composed of the finance committee, the city comptroller and the board of education until a budget is adopted. Until finally adopted the commission can administer funds set apart under budget of preceding year for said board.

The budget shall not exceed the amount set apart for the board of education for the operation of the public schools of the city of Atlanta from all sources. Members to be liable for amount of budget in excess of this amount. Budget made subject to reallocation in June and October of each year with the approval of the mayor. Section 9 and 10 not effective until ratified by majority of voters at city election in December, 1927, and if ratified becomes effective January 1, 1928.

Girls' High School Holds First of Assembly Series

On Friday, November 4, the first of a series of assemblies was held at Girls' high, and the experiment was certainly a success. The movement for assemblies during school hours was started several weeks ago, when all the students filled out questionnaires asking for suggestions that would be beneficial in working up school spirit. Foremost among the results of the questioning were countless requests for school assemblies, in which the classes could get together and become acquainted. The suggestion was pronounced a good one by the student government staff and the members of the faculty, and it was decided that each class might have one assembly a month in the music room during the seventh period on Friday. Therefore Friday saw the first assembly, given by the seniors, and the experiment was voted well worth the trying. Miss Evelyn Lovett and Miss Ardis Colby, both Girls' high graduates, gave a program of dances, readings and piano selections that was very charming. The assembly closed with the singing of the school song, led by Helen Garrison. The seniors were most fortunate to have two such able artists to launch their assemblies, and the other classes will do well to measure up to this standard.

An event that has been looked forward to breathlessly by all members of the senior class has finally come to pass. Monday marked an epoch in the life of each member of the class of '28, for on that day arrived the Girls' high rings and pins, the trademarks of the exalted members of that class. No longer need the senior feel the fear of that dreadful ignominy—being mistaken for lower classmen. The rings and pins, while exact duplicates of those used in the preceding years, are considered much more beautiful than ever before.

2 Atlantans in Cast Of University Club Play To Appear Here

Athens, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Two Atlanta men will appear in "The Old Soak," to be presented at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium December 8 by the Thalian Dramatic club of the University of Georgia.

Frank A. McMullan, president of the Thalians, will have the most prominent part in the cast, that of Clem Hawley, the "old soak." Mr. McMullan was one of the actors of the Boys' High Dramatic club in all of its presentations in 1923, 1924 and 1925. He was president of that club in 1925.

Joseph Brown, formerly of Tech High school, will take the part of a parrot with a humorous voice. Mr. Brown appeared with the University of Georgia Glee club in Atlanta last spring as the "heroine" of one of the comedy skits.

The Atlanta performance of the Thalians, immediately preceding the football game between Georgia and Tech, is expected to be the gathering place of the University of Georgia alumni and their friends.

The cast of "The Old Soak" will leave on the annual Thalian road trip immediately after Thanksgiving. Performances will be given in Georgia towns throughout the week, the final performance being given in Atlanta December 2.

The other members of the cast are William B. Withers, Moultrie; Lathrop Mitchell, Thomasville; James Hays, Montezuma; Harry Talmadge, Athens; Miss Mary Hart, Athens; Miss Rubye Eberhart, Athens; Miss Marjorie Denmark, Fitzgerald, and Miss Marie Tibbetts, Athens. Miss MaNita Bullock, Athens, is directing the cast.

Robert L. Patterson, Athens, business manager, and his assistant, John S. Candler, II, Atlanta, are expected to accompany the cast on the trip.

DROPS LOADED GUN IN COURT; JAILED

Oklahoma City, Okla., November 12.—(AP)—Because he dropped a loaded pistol on the court-room floor during the trial at which he was acquitted of murdering Bill Tilghman, noted frontier peace officer, Wiley Lynn, former federal prohibition agent, must spend 30 days in jail.

The Oklahoma criminal court of appeals today affirmed the sentence for contempt imposed by District Judge Frank Mathews more than two years ago. Lynn's chief counsel pleaded in vain at the time that he had instructed his client to bring the gun to court because it might be needed as evidence. The weapon was not discharged, but Judge Mathews severely arraigned the defendant for coming into court armed.

Lynn, a part-blood Indian, shot Tilghman to death late in 1924 in front of a dance hall at Cromwell, boom oil town, of which Tilghman was city marshal. Tilghman, a man of 70 years, was marshal of Dodge City, Kan., when it was a frontier "cow town," and later a United States marshal in Oklahoma. He was a celebrated gun shot. Lynn, who said Tilghman resisted an attempted raid on the dance hall, shot the old man with a pistol he had drawn from concealment after Tilghman had taken two guns from him. He was discharged from the prohibition service after the trial.

'Murder Farm' Provides Ideal Setting

For Dark and Gruesome Midnight Deeds

Gaping darkly at a moonlit sky, the grave on the "murder farm," in which the body of a dead negro was found, told mutely its story to the camera as pale rays illuminated the gaunt stalks of the cornfield. The farm, rented by Thomas Trollinger, is believed to be the burial ground of several other negro victims of a bootleg feud.

BY ELMO HAMBY.

All the imageries of fiction could not have created a more suggestive place for crimes, midnight trafficking in liquor and grisly murders than the hand of time and circumstance has done for the Trollinger home, alleged "key" to the so-called "death farm," a desolate, forbidding place completely buried from all signs of humanity in the heart of wooded hills a scarce two miles from the bustling life of Five Points.

From no human highway is the house visible. One must stumble half-blindly up a narrow and well-nigh concealed path that leads to a bare knoll. Moonlight, reflected below on the shimmering tops of crabgrass, which moans with a dull, muffled monotone as the stinging wind of early winter ploughs its way through the entwined tops, lends an unhallowed air to the place.

The house is visible from the top of the little knoll. Viewed down across the ghastly white plain of grassy moonlight, it stands just in front of a grove of giant oaks, resembling the entrance to some dread wood-ogre's den.

The covering is torn off the roof of the shed-like projection over the doorway and the shadow of the skeleton framework is thrown onto the side of the house. In the moonlight, the building, after the storms of many years, has an unholy and sickly whitish color.

Hordes of worms, with the aid of time, have eaten the edge of the house next to the ground into a row of ragged stalacmites and the only connection with the gnarled hut and the earth are several bare, short stumps, placed there of a necessity to keep the building from falling.

It sits there, blind and ugly, with no window at all on the front, and but a peep-hole of a glass frame on the side. In the front there are but two wooden doors—closed doors that sullenly frown at the intruder in this wilderness. There is no stoop.

Inclosed from the outside world and almost blanketed from the sky itself by the projecting limbs of the huge oak trees, the shack sits alone in the hollow, biting silence of the night.

NEW PLANE DEVICE BARS TAIL SPINS

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, November 12.—Major Lester D. Gardner, editor of Aviation and the first American to ride in a Handley-Page airplane equipped with the new automatic wing slot, described today what he terms the "most important development in aeronautical engineering in Europe."

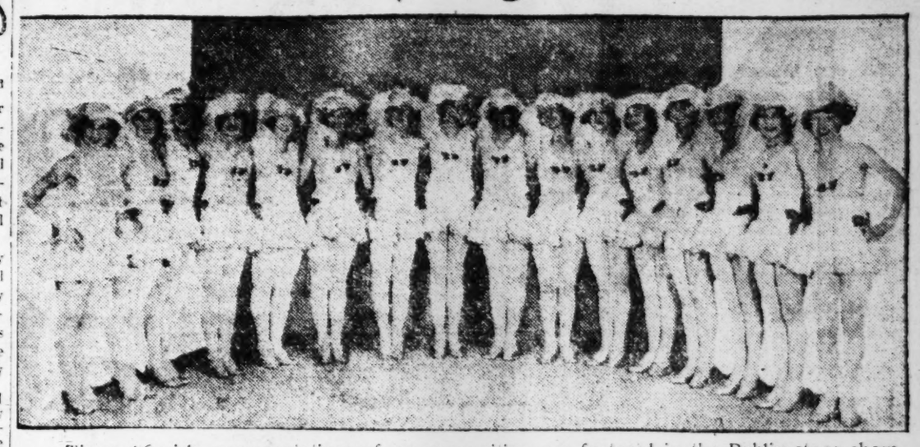

The new device is said to absolutely prevent tail spins, an airplane peril which has taken the lives of many of the world's best pilots. The apparatus, when not in operation, fits snugly in front of the tips of the main wing. Its operation is entirely automatic.

When the plane is stalled, and would normally slip into the possibly fatal tail spin, the action of air pressure causes this extension of the plane to move out with the result that a new grip is gained on the air and stability maintained.

"If the opinion of leading aeronautical engineers is given proper weight," said Major Gardner, "this new improvement for airplane wings will be used on every modern airplane within a few years."

Major Gardner was invited by the inventor to take a test flight at Cricketwood, England, while he was abroad as official representative of the department of commerce at the international aviation congress.

Miss Beulah Leavens, Atlanta Girl, Seen in Howard Stage Show This Week

These 16 girls, representatives of as many cities, are featured in the Publix stage show, "Young America," which plays at the Howard theater all this week. Miss Beulah Leavens, who is "Miss Atlanta," is shown second from the right.

Representing Atlanta in a group of girls from 16 of the nation's largest cities, and having been selected for th t honor in a contest conducted by The Constitution, Miss Beulah Leavens, talented local girl, will be seen in the Publix stage show, "Young America," which plays all this week at the Howard theater.

Elaborate entertainment has been given the 16 girls in every city where they have appeared. The girl who represents the city in which the show is playing acts as hostess for the week, and Miss Leavens will serve in that capacity here.

The Howard theater, in conjunction with the junior chamber of commerce and the Ansley hotel, will entertain the girls with a program which is expected to compare favorably with those of other cities.

The girls have received a royal welcome wherever they have appeared. Dances have been given in their honor; they have been given sightseeing trips to points of interest in the cities; they went aboard the U. S. S. Bridgeport in Boston harbor and had a few minutes practice as deckhands and in Indianapolis, Ind., the girls were guests of the Standard Oil company and were taken on a flight in a large all-metal plane.

The tentative program arranged for the "Young America" girls includes trips on Monday to Stone Mountain and East Lake; trips to Federal prison and Grant Park on Tuesday; a visit to The Constitution Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock and the girls will be guests of the junior chamber of commerce at their weekly luncheon Thursday at 12:15 o'clock.

On Thursday night at 10:30 o'clock the Howard theater in conjunction with the junior chamber of commerce and the Ansley hotel will honor the girls with a dance to be held on the Ansley hotel roof.

Miss Leavens will appear at Rich's hosiery department at 11:30 o'clock on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

MANUFACTURER SUED BY SPOUSE FOR MAINTENANCE

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—Hector B. Gillespie, vice president of Cluett, Peabody and company, collar manufacturers, was named defendant in a suit for enforcement of specific performance filed in superior court today in behalf of his wife, Mrs. Amy H. Gillespie, of Woodcliffe, N. J. The suit is to force him to abide by the terms of a contract of separate maintenance by which the wife said she was to receive $4,500 a year. She said he made only two monthly payments after the contract was made last June.

SHOCK OF SEEING WHIPPED SON KILLS FATHER; MAN HELD

New Orleans, November 12.—(AP)—With the death today of Felix Von Aspern, father of 17-year-old Clarence Von Aspern, after discovery of an alleged severe whipping of the boy, a capias was served by officers for the arrest of Sidney De Jean, night keeper at the municipal home for boys here. The school officer was charged with assault, beating and wounding.

The father, ill with tuberculosis for three years, collapsed and died three hours after he had viewed his son's bruised body. Clarence, an inmate of the institution, escaped after the alleged beating because he said "the home work was so hard."

An investigation was ordered.

UNIVERSITY STUDENT DIES IN AUTO WRECK

Charlottesville, Va., November 12.—(AP)—H. Styles Nuckols, 21-year-old Richmond student at the University of Virginia, was instantly killed when his automobile skidded on a slippery road near Cobham last night and turned over three times. Three other students in the car escaped injury.

Mute Enacts Girl's Murder He Witnessed

York, Pa., November 12.—(United News.)—A mute enacted the murder of a 16-year-old girl in pantomime today and gave the police a clue to the identity of the murderer, whose actions he watched in silent horror.

The mute, known as "Dummy" Long, is employed at a brick factory near where the body of Gertrude Rudy, of York, was found across the tracks of the Maryland and Pennsylvania railroad by a farm hand.

In telling the police what he saw, the mute assumed the part of the young girl, tripping across the tracks. He then became a man in hunter's garb, with bulging pockets and a gun slung across his arm. He showed how hunter and girl met on the tracks and exchanged glances, walking away in opposite directions. The mute became the hunter again, walked a few paces, turned and fired at the girl. Then he ran to her and beat her over the head with the imaginary gun. Then Long became himself, registering horror and helplessness.

The police held an earlier theory that the girl was killed at some more distant spot and carried to the tracks to mislead investigators, because they found no blod on the ground around the body.

W. Dutes, the farm hand who found the body, was held for further questioning despite the mute's "story."

COURTS MAY PASS ON SCHOOL STRIKE

Madison, Wis., November 12.—(AP)—A delegation of Cudahy business men and women and teachers were advised today to seek relief in the school strike situation through the district attorney or the courts by the state department of public instruction.

The delegation sought the aid of State Superintendent John J. Callahan, and was advised by C. A. Harper, legal representative of the department, that the department could do nothing.

The delegation advised the officials that the situation in the Milwaukee suburb, where 500 students went on strike Thursday morning after Superintendent E. C. Seifert was ousted, was "deplorable and needs a solution."

Superintendent Callahan agreed that the situation was as "bad as can be, but the department can do nothing."

Harold Wierke, president of the Cudahy Teachers' association, said neither the pupils nor the board will yield.

The students say they will continue on strike until Seifert is reinstated.

STOP GAMBLING OR RESIGN, CHIEF TELLS POLICEMEN

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—Declaring that he meant business, Michael Hughes, chief of police, today announced the transfer of six police captains and 100 lieutenants, sergeants and patrolmen in connection with his campaign against gambling.

He ordered all gambling places closed a week ago and told captains that he was dissatisfied and that they would either enforce laws against gambling or lose their jobs.

To Study Health.

Members of the Unity Center Study class, which meets each Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce building, will take up a systematic discussion of lessons on Christian healing next week, it was announced by Robert Bryan Harrison, director of the school of health.

Pitcairn's Visit.

With a mass of information gathered in Florida and Georgia relative to the Atlanta-Miami air mail route, Harold F. Pitcairn, president of the Pitcairn Aviation company, and G. S. Childs, vice president, left Atlanta Saturday afternoon for Philadelphia, while James G. Ray, operations manager, remains in Atlanta for several days to oversee the installation of Pitcairn's commercial flying service at Candler field.

Mr. Pitcairn and his associates conferred with Postmaster E. K. Large and other Atlantans Saturday and secured information on the volume of business done on the Atlanta-Miami route previously, and other facts of interest in connection with the service. Mr. Pitcairn will probably enter a bid on the Atlanta-Miami route, as he already holds the contract for the Atlanta-New York route.

Commercial flying operations of the Pitcairn company at Candler field are ready for inauguration at any time now, Mr. Ray announced Saturday, although the actual business of booking passengers and students will not begin until early in the week, due to the fact that a little work remains to be done on the hangar. The hangar floor is being leveled, and a stock room and locker room are being added to the building. Water has already been installed, but electric lights and telephone service will not be put in until some time this week.

The Pitcairn planes are ready for business and included is a Fleetwing, or four-passenger ship, and three Orowings, or two-passenger ships. All are Curtiss motored, the Fleetwing having an eight-cylinder motor capable of 160 horsepower, with a cruising speed of 85 miles an hour and a range of 450 miles, while the Orowings have six-cylindered motors capable of developing 90 horsepower and having a cruising speed of 75 miles an hour and a range of 250 miles.

Atlanta Girl Pilot.

Fired with enthusiasm by the example of Ruth Elder, an Atlanta girl has matriculated in Doug Davis' flying school at Candler field and is well on the way toward becoming a first-class pilot and securing a license, it was revealed Saturday. The young lady is Miss Gladys Poole, of 97 Lakewood terrace; and she is so entranced with aviation that she is making her plans to buy a Waco whirlwind biplane as soon as she is proficient enough to do solo flying.

Miss Poole was up in a Curtiss biplane Saturday afternoon at Candler field taking lessons from Pilot Davis, and has already become expert enough to relieve the pilot at the helm of the ship.

"I've been wanting to take aviation lessons for some time," Miss Poole said, "but had to wait until several days ago before I could realize my ambition. I hope that I may be able to follow in Ruth Elder's footsteps and cross the Atlantic by air, possibly trying for that prize offered by Hamilton, Bermuda, for the first hop by way of Bermuda and the Azores."

New Planes Delivered.

Waco biplanes, equipped with Curtiss motors, have been delivered to Arthur Vogel, of Atlanta; Frank Rushton, of Birmingham, and R. L. Rawls, of Charleston, by Doug Davis within the past two weeks. Vogel is now taking lessons in flying at Candler field. Orders for Waco biplanes filed by a Birmingham contractor named Curry, Dr. Garrison, of Birmingham, and Lieutenant M. A. C. Johnson, of Augusta, will be filled within the next few weeks, it was announced. Mr. Curry is planning to use his machine in flying to cities in the southeast to figure on bids for cement paving.

Airplane Drummers.

The salesman formerly, in the days when transportation was mostly a matter of mule power, used the buggy to go after business in the outlying districts. Then came the automobile, with its faster speed. And now comes two Atlanta men who are using the airplane to get business results.

T. F. Johnson, president of the Johnson Manufacturing company, electrical equipment, has an Eaglerock biplane at Candler field which he uses to entertain business associates on their visits to Atlanta, and also to beat his competitors in reaching nearby cities for orders. Mr. Johnson is a licensed pilot and has owned his own plane about three months. He became interested in aviation more than a year ago and nowadays frequently hops to other cities in the southeast on business trips.

W. H. Lee, of the Lee Brokerage and Storage company, has passed his pilot's examination and has applied for his license. Mr. Lee is now completing negotiations for an airplane he will use in his business whenever he has occasion to fly to cities in this section to visit customers.

As explained Saturday afternoon by Mr. Lee, aviation is now a practical thing just like automobile transportation, and as the business generally goes to the man who gets their first, business men more and more will take to flying to handle their deals in other cities.

Savannah's Flying Club.

At a recent meeting of the Savannah Flying club, announcement was made that funds are in hand sufficient to purchase a 90-horsepower airplane and that the plane will soon be in the possession of the club. An experienced instructor will be engaged to teach the members of the club to fly. A movement is now on foot to establish Savannah as one of a number of towns in the south having municipal airports.

Addition to Hangar.

Doug Davis is building a shop as an addition to his huge metal hangar at Candler field. The shop will be completely equipped with all machinery necessary to repair airplanes and will have expert mechanics in charge.

Airmail Bidders.

Three Atlanta men are figuring on entering bids for the Atlanta-Miami air mail contract, it became known Saturday. W. H. Vermiliza, of the Wynne-Claughton building, as attorney for Doug Davis' flying service; C. W. Jones, of 938 Highland avenue, N. E., and E. W. Romberger, of the Wynne-Claughton building, have applied to Postmaster E. K. Large for copies of the contract, application blanks and data on the route.

ALDEHOL RUINING ALCOHOL FOR USE OF BOOTLEGGERS

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Success in the use of disagreeable odors and flavors instead of poison in its new campaign to prevent the conversion of industrial alcohol into bootleg liquor is being claimed by the prohibition bureau.

By use of a petroleum substance known as aldehol, officials believe they have found the key to stop the heavy flow of alcohol into bootleg channels. So far, they say, chemists have been unable to remove traces of aldehol from alcohol and as a consequence alcohol withdrawals have decreased.

Although aldehol will not produce death it causes nausea and has an odor that makes it unpalatable. Through its substitution for the poisonous liquors that usually follow holiday orgies will be less this year than in the past.

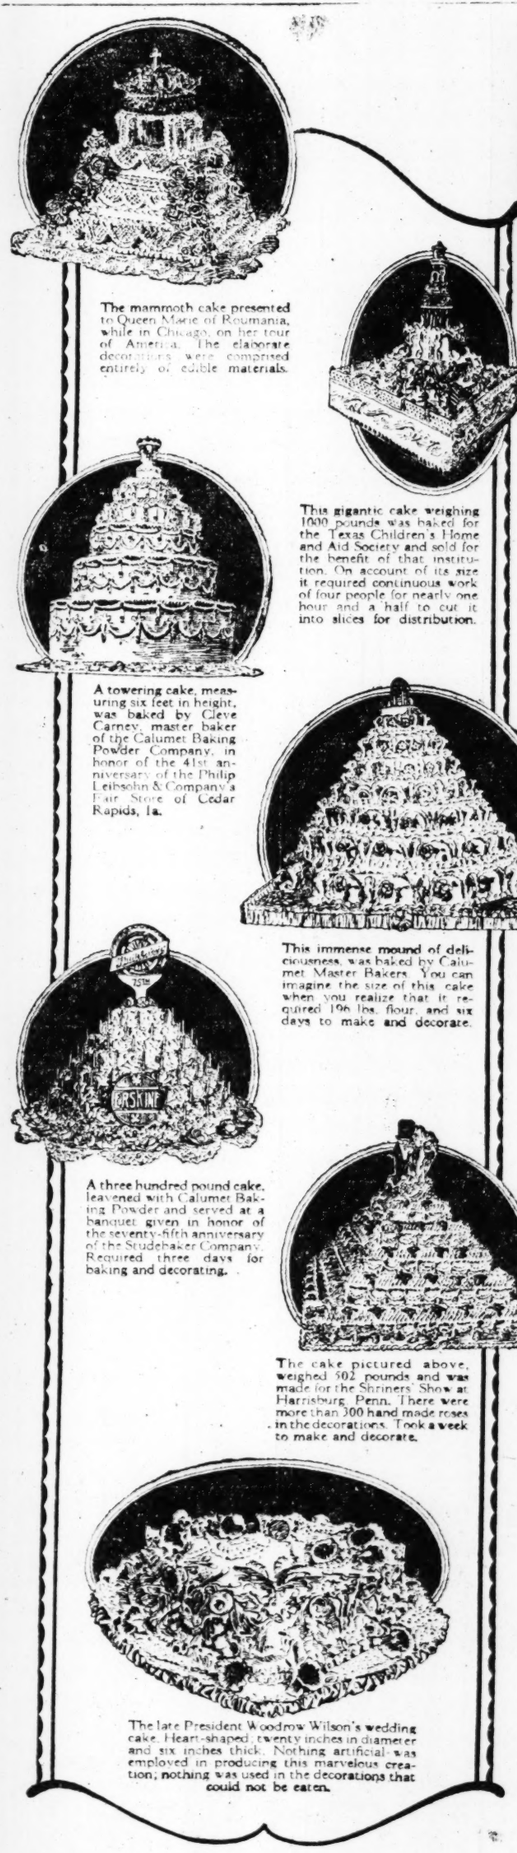

As a result, the main source of the Christmas supply of liquor, in the opinion of officials, will be the mountain moonshine distilleries, as rum smuggling has been greatly reduced during the last year.

Quentin Roosevelt Flare Gun Is Found In Battlefield Hut

Glenville, W. Va., November 12.—(AP)—An airman's flare gun bearing the name "Quentin Roosevelt," is being exhibited here by Charles Bass. Quentin Roosevelt was shot down and killed during the world war, and Bass says he found the gun while visiting the battlefields of France.

The gun, Bass said, was found in a hut on the outskirts of Belleau Wood. He said he was unaware of the name on the gun until he arrived home and the gun was cleaned of accumulated rust.

WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS CAKES

The mammoth cake presented to Queen Marie of Roumania, while in Chicago, on her tour of America. The elaborate decorations were comprised entirely of edible materials.

This gigantic cake, weighing 1000 pounds was baked for the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society and sold for the benefit of that institution. On account of its size it required continuous work of four people for nearly one hour and a half to cut it into slices for distribution.

A towering cake, measuring six feet in height, was baked by Cleve Carney, master baker of the Calumet Baking Powder Company, in honor of the 41st anniversary of the Philip Leibsohn & Company's Fair Store of Cedar Rapids, Ia.

This immense mound of deliciousness, was baked by Calumet Master Bakers. You can imagine the size of this cake when you realize that it required 196 lbs. flour, and six days to make and decorate.

A three hundred pound cake, leavened with Calumet Baking Powder and served at a banquet given in honor of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Studebaker Company. Required three days for baking and decorating.

The cake pictured above, weighed 902 pounds and was made for the Shriners' Show at Harrisburg, Penn. There were more than 300 hand made roses in the decorations. Took a week to make and decorate.

No wringing to do.. no water to empty

This new EASY WASHER saves you work in many amazing new ways

Also furnished with gasoline motor

For homes without electricity the New Easy is available with a built-in gasoline motor, interchangeable with the electric motor.

How much does it cost?

THE cash price is only a little more than that of old-fashioned washers. Small enough when it means clean clothes for the rest of your life; when it gives you washdays free from toil and weariness; when it keeps you fresh, youthful and happy. If you wish to purchase the Easy over a period of months, you can arrange the payments to suit your purse, with a nominal charge for time payments.

Here's how the Easy empties the water for you, electrically, without your using a bucket to lift or carry a single drop.

THE New Easy Washer does away with a wringer. No more danger of catching your fingers. No more danger of the children hurting themselves. No more broken buttons. No more deep wrinkles in the clothes. Think of the sewing time you'll save. Think how much easier the ironing will be.

No buckets of water to empty

Here's another great convenience. The New Easy empties all water into your sink or set tubs—electrically. You don't have to use a bucket to lift or carry a single drop of water throughout the washing.

Washes by the famous Easy Vacuum Cup System

Sixty times a minute the Easy's three gentle Vacuum Cups flush soap and water back and forth through the fabric by means of air pressure and suction. Every garment is washed clean. Every garment is washed as safely and as gently as by your own careful hands.

For small loads of clothes the capacity of the washtub is adjustable. Normally it holds the equal of eight double sheets.

The marvelous drying tub

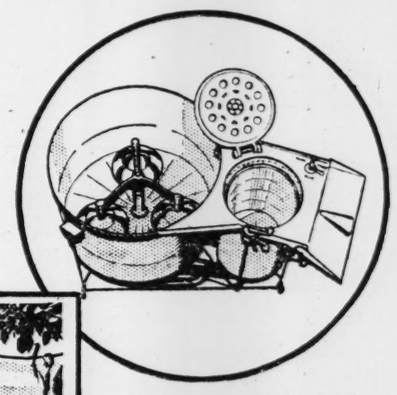

The excess water is whisked out of a whole batch of clothes at one time by the Easy's wonderful drying tub. All you do is move a lever and in three minutes the clothes are evenly damp, ready to hang in the sun and air. The new drying tub easily takes feather pillows, quilts, blankets, and similar bulky objects that will not go through a wringer. And best of all, you can now do two things at once.

While one eight-sheet batch is washing you can dampdry another eight-sheet batch at the same time. Think of it—sixteen double sheets handled at once in this washer! Time simply cut in half!

Many other convenient features

The New Easy even keeps its water hot by means of a special gas heater beneath the washtub. You can sterilize clothes with this heater right in the washer. And it's no trouble to oil the Easy, for a modern "one-point" oiling system automatically carries the oil to the working parts.

The New Easy is safe. Everything that moves is enclosed. There is no old-fashioned leather belt to cause trouble. Everything about the Easy is right up to the minute. There's even an automatic starting and stopping switch that prevents fuses from blowing.

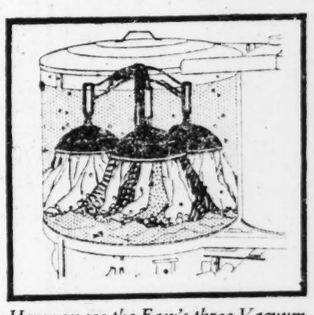

Above you can see how the Easy gets its speed. One tub for washing, another for drying, and they both work at once. The dryer basket in the small tub will hold a full eight-sheet load.

You can even wash and dry pillows in the New Easy, without removing the feathers.

Sixty times a minute the Easy's three famous Vacuum Cups move up and down. Here you see the cups flushing soap and water through the fabric by air pressure.

Here you see the Easy's three Vacuum Cups gently drawing the soap and water back through the fabric by means of suction. This washing action is world-famous for its efficiency and gentleness.

WASHING HINTS

How to wash Woolens

All kinds of woolens—from baby's tiny garments to your most cherished sweaters—can be washed quickly and easily in the EASY Washer.

Woolens are made from woolen threads, which, unlike cotton, come from an animal, whose coat is kept soft because it contains an animal fat. It is important in washing woolens to remove as little of this animal fat as possible. Therefore a very mild soap must be used, in solution. If you use bar soap, it must first be made into a jelly. Make a good live suds in lukewarm water (never hot) and immerse the garments.

Never rub woolens. If they are washed by hand, squeeze them back and forth until all the soil is removed. The EASY'S Vacuum Cups will do this quickly and more gently than human hands. Never wring woolens.

If you have an EASY it is a simple matter to extract the soapy water in the dryer. If you do not have an EASY, you must squeeze the water out gently by hand. Give woolens at least two rinses in water of exactly the same temperature as the wash water. This is important if shrinking is to be avoided.

If the water which you use is inclined to be at all hard, add a little soap, in solution, to each rinse water.

Use great care in drying. Never hang up garments, such as sweaters, that are inclined to lose their shape. These should be spread on a flat surface, on a clean sheet or towel.

Write for my booklet of washing helps and suggestions.

L. S. U. Bows to Tech, 23 to 0---Georgia Swamps Clemson

Smith, Horne, Parham Star For Jackets

Smith Boots Long Field Goal to Give Tornado Early Lead.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

An L. S. U. Tiger made a valiant stand on Grant field Saturday afternoon, but his vaunted defense went for naught against the crushing drive of Tech's first and second teams and the Tornado emerged from a critical game on the long end of a 23-to-0 score, compiled largely by the Jackets' second-stringers.

All the past week Coach Alex and his varsity kept to themselves during practice behind locked gates, cooking up something. Whatever was cooked up wasn't served Saturday afternoon, for Alex started the game with his second team and played it the entire first half. At that time the score stood 3 to 0, with Tech on the long end by virtue of Shorty Smith dropping back to the 30-yard line and drop-kicking a field goal.

The second-string line committed assault and battery on the Tiger forwards, trained by Mike Donahue, for two entire periods and the team had made but little headway, getting inside the 30-yard line on but two occasions. But it had succeeded at times in piercing the defense that held Alabama to a 0-to-0 tie earlier in the season, and what few times L. S. U. got the ball, the Jacket forwards had kept the Tiger more than a few yards from a score.

Smith at Throttle.

Shorty Smith was chauffeuring this Tech machine that was showing something like that absolute necessity in football—power.

Then came the second half and Coach Alex made a wholesale substitution, sending in his regulars—except Stumpy Thomason, who watched the game from the bench, gracefully attired in brown, collegiate trousers, white shirt—open at the throat—and a gold and white blazer, from which it would appear that all pre-game reports about Stumpy not playing were quite true.

Bo Read was acting in place of Thomason and showed more drive than an army truck, getting off fast and getting through the holes that the

Petrels Start Monday Prepping for Tornado

BY FRED M'EACHIN.

Coach Robertson's Stormy Petrels, of Oglethorpe, enter the second half of their schedule here next Saturday afternoon when they clash with the Golden Tornado of Georgia Tech in their annual grid battle at Grant field. This is the most difficult assignment on the Petrel card this year and they will begin a strenuous prepping program for the game Monday afternoon.

The Oglethorpe team has slipped away to a very poor start this season, losing four games in their five starts. The only Petrel win is the victory over Presbyterian college. In their game on Armistice day with the Mercer Bears the Birds were turned back by a two-touchdown margin, losing by the score of 2 to 6.

A glance at the impressive record made by Coach Alexander's Jackets for the '27 season and a comparison of it with that of the Petrel's, seems to favor an overwhelming victory for the Tornado. But the Oglethorpe boys, for some unknown reason, play a better game of football against the Georgia Tech outfit than any of their other rivals and the outcome of the game Saturday may not be as direful for the Birds as has been predicted.

In former years the Oglethorpe game has opened the season for Tech but this year it was booked near the end of the schedule following the 7-6 defeat handed them by the Stormy Petrels in the '26 game, the most surprising upset of the year.

Although the odds favor a triumph for the Jackets in Saturday's affray, the Petrels will enter the game with that same spirit of fight and determination for which they are noted and through which their victory of last season was accredited.

With three regulars out of the game, Shepherd, Wall and Bass, all of whom are backfield stars, the Birds will be severely handicapped but there is ample substitute material on hand whom Robertson can call into action to fill the gaps left vacant by the injuries of his ball toters.

The Tech-Oglethorpe games invariably result in spirited grid battles as there is a keen spirit of friendly rivalry existing between the two local institutions. This, the eighth annual meeting of the two teams, should prove to be one of the most interesting football games witnessed here this year.

Taylor Meets Canzoneri.

Bud Taylor, generally recognized as the world's bantamweight champion, will fight as a featherweight against Tony Canzoneri at New York, December 5. The two pugs have clashed on two previous occasions, the first ending in a draw and the second going to Taylor on points.

Dirty Grid Tactics Not Allowed By Roper

Harvard and Princeton parted mainly because Harvard insinuated that Bill Roper taught "dirty football." No proof was ever submitted, and many well-known Harvard players came out with sportsmanlike statements denying the truth of the allegation. Princeton players flatly denied that they had been taught anything but hard, straight football.

Here's an "inside story" that shows Roper's quality as a football coach.

Several years ago one of Princeton's greatest centers was being unnecessarily roughed and used up by his opponent in an early season game. With his patience finally exhausted, the Tiger pivot decided to retaliate and give the offending player a bit of his own rough stuff in the form of a few short jabs and uppercuts. The Tiger let go his first wallop when he believed he was being hidden by a bunch of players, but the group suddenly separated and the eagle eye of Roper, who was sizing up the action from the bench, detected what was going on. Roper pulled his center off the field in a jiffy and kept him out for the remainder of the season although his services were badly needed.

Horse Named After Star.

A race horse has been named after Bucky Moore, star quarterback at Loyola college of New Orleans, La. Moore, heraldoi as the "Dixie Flyer," also has a candy bar named after him.

ANOTHER QUESTION

BY DICK HAWKINS.

Ordinarily it is our policy to let the miller run his mill and not try to tell him how to grind his flour, but for once we "choose to change that policy" long enough to ask a question or two of the world at large—hoping for an answer but not particularly expecting to get one.

Before we burst into this spasm of questioning let us state without equivocation that our action is motivated only by a desire to answer a question asked us many times daily and which we have been unable to answer satisfactory to date. We do not desire to throw any alley apples at any university nor do we want to toss nosegays at any other, but our friend Mr. Football Fan has asked us a question, and we must at least try for an answer.

The question is as follows: IS THERE ANY POSSIBILITY OF THE GEORGIA-ALABAMA GAME BEING PLAYED IN THE BIRMINGHAM MUNICIPAL STADIUM ON THANKSGIVING DAY, AND IF NOT, WHY NOT? This question seems easy to answer, and perhaps it is for somebody, but the writer has had some very sad experiences in trying to get said answer for the few thousand fans who would like to see the game and who will not be able to if it is played at Rickwood field.

INFORMATION SOUGHT.

Our first move in trying to get some information on the matter was a conversation with University of Georgia authorities who proved to be all for the change of scene and wish very much to play in the new stadium.

Many rumors are afloat as to why the game is not to be played in the Municipal stadium.

The first of these is to the effect that Vanderbilt wants to be the first to play Alabama in the new bowl, according to an agreement made between the schools last year before the date of the Alabama-Vandy game was set back from October 1 to December 3.

We have traced this rumor to its source and have it from the president of Vanderbilt's Athletic association that Vandy is perfectly willing for Georgia to play Alabama in the new stadium on Thanksgiving day.

Some say that Vanderbilt waited so long to give their consent that it is now impossible to get the tickets printed for the stadium. There are 12 days left, and if there is not time for the printing of the tickets there should be ample time for the marking of the new stadium to conform with Rickwood field. In that case the tickets now sold could be used and more issued within a very few days.

'BAMA'S STAND.

A conversation with Alabama authorities brings a response which leads us to believe that they are afraid of offending Vanderbilt if they allow Georgia to enter the stadium before the Vandy-Tide clash. Unless Vandy has not clearly stated its position in the matter this reason is definitely out.

This leads us to believe that the University of Alabama and the city of Birmingham hold the key to the situation. It is within their power to change the game and bring at least 5,000 more fans to the progressive city of Birmingham on Thanksgiving day if they so choose.

From this distance it seems like a rather poor investment for a city to build a huge stadium and let it remain idle on a great football holiday for any reason at all when any alternative presents itself.

If the University of Alabama or the city authorities of Birmingham or anyone else can answer these questions let us beseech action for the sake of the poor downtrodden gridiron addicts who are crying for a chance to spend their money and time in Birmingham on Thanksgiving day.

Three New Wrestlers Appear Here Thursday

Three wrestlers, who are new to Atlanta fans, yet who come well recommended by Matchmaker John Contos, will make their debut at the city auditorium Thursday night in the second wrestling show of the season here. Three matches have been arranged by Matchmaker Contos, who expresses the belief that for sheer thrills and unadulterated excitement the Thursday night show will eclipse the preceding one.

Jack Washburn, rugged and vicious, meets Firpo Wilcox, an Indian, in one of the feature matches, while in another Jim Browning, an old favorite, will be pitted against no less a personage than "Scotty" McDougal, whom Matchmaker Contos calls the heavyweight wrestling champion of Scotland.

Londos on Card.

Jimmy Londos, another favorite with Atlanta fans, is also on the card, being pitted against Nick Gotch, who Contos recommends very highly as a pleasing wrestler and a grappler who is well equipped to give Londos all of the trouble necessary.

There is no question but what Browning is one of the most spectacular wrestlers ever to appear in Atlanta. He specializes in the use of a flying head scissors, which offers the ultimate in thrills and suspense. Browning leaps high into the air, with his legs extended and if his timing and aim is perfect he clamps his legs around his opponent's head and whirls him to the floor, with no more ado.

However, as it sometimes happens, Browning misses his mark and then he, instead of his opponent, takes the tumble and thereby gives his foe an excellent chance to finish him off then and there.

Washburn mixes rough tactics with his wrestling right frequently and that usually leads his opponent to retaliate. There is no question about Wilcox mixing it with Washburn if he oversteps the bounds of fair and legalized methods.

Big Crowd Expected.

Contos believes that the wrestling show Thursday night will draw a much larger house than the last one, as there were conflicting events on that night. Despite that fact more than 2,000 fans paid their way into the city auditorium and were repaid by witnessing three good matches.

1927 Football Season Full Of Kinks

The football season of 1927 is full of kinks. Yale, Harvard, Penn and Navy all beaten before the first of November. Yale beating Dartmouth with a walkover score of 19-0. Southern California, under Coach Jones, slaughtering the Golden Bears of California 13-0. Penn State slamming famous Lafayette 40-6.

Purdue, supposedly a pushover, goes to Cambridge and fairly gives old Harvard a lesson in how the game should be played. In intersectional games the west walks all over the respected east. Not that the western coaching is necessarily better, but because the corn-fed lads seem to have more snap and stamina than the beef and bean fed easterners. Not always though: Harvard trims Indiana 26-6, a baked bean knockout.

The new rules, planned to encourage more passing, especially lateral passing, have failed to produce the desired results. Coaches do not care much about taking chances with the lateral pass because it is hard to control.

As Chick Meehan, New York university coach, says: "When the ball is under a player's arm you at least know where it is."

Golf More Popular.

Golf is growing more popular in Australia and New Zealand with the result that a number of well-known stars have invaded the two countries, R. D. MacIntosh, who was runner-up to Bobby Cruickshank in the Scotch amateur tourney a few years ago, tops the list.

West Point Signs Depauw

The Cadets of West Point have a new opponent on their gridiron schedule for the season of 1928. DePauw university of Greencastle has been signed to play a game at West Point November 3.

Bulldogs Beat Tiger Eleven By 32-0 Count

Tiger Eleven Held on One-Foot Line by Stone Wall Defense.

BY WHITNER CARY.
Constitution Staff Correspondent.

Athens, Ga., November 12.—Georgia's Battalion of Death charged again today.

That assault delivered with the same power and fury and backed by the usual rythmn and deadly execution that has become a tradition of the Dream and Wonder team, proved too much for the Crimson Tiger. The result saw the Jungeleers go down to a 32-to-0 defeat and the Red and Black warriors creep one step higher in the road that leads to the conference heights.

So, tonight for the second time in 30 days the trail leading toward the Palmetto boundary is a pathway of woe and sorrow. Tonight for the seventh time in so many weeks the football world views an impressive Georgia victory. Tonight the Gold and Purple of old Clemson is added to the color scheme that salutes a great team. A kaleidoscopic display which numbers the colors of Virginia, Yale, Furman, Auburn, Tulane, Florida and Clemson in its list.

It was the same old story with a slightly different variation that unfolded itself this afternoon on Sanford field. A story that has become almost monotonous through many recitals.

McTigue Takes Hero Role.

A story that contains the chapters where that line-wrecking piece of human flesh, known as Herdis McCrary, ripped through the Tiger line for gain after gain. Chapters which tell of how this great back culminated two superb drives by bucking over for the score and once grabbing a pass from Johnson for another marker. A chapter devoted to how this same Johnson was on the receiving end of a pass from Estes and who galloped 51 yards for a touchdown. A chapter in which Bob McTigue in the first quarter takes the hero role by stepping around left end for 71 yards and the initial Georgia score. Other chapters in which could be told how the Scarlet line constantly outcharged the opposition and of the good blocking and splendid interference of the Bulldogs.

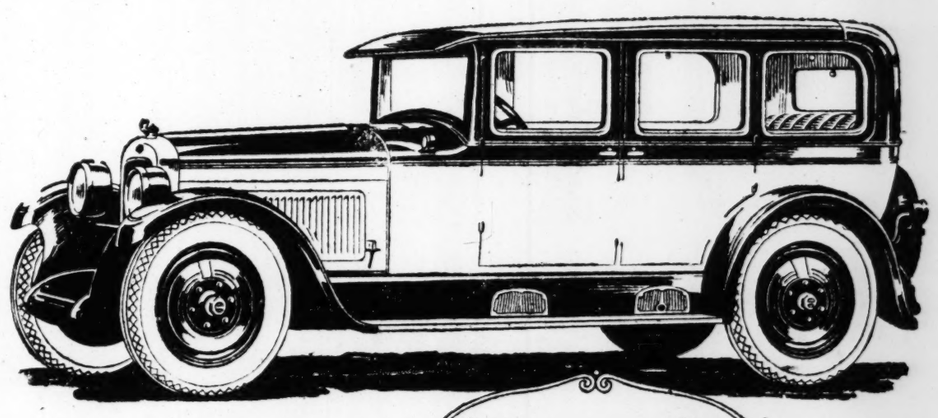

All this could be truthfully related.

TECH HIGH, CHARLOTTE MIX SATURDAY

Charlotte, N. C., November 12.—The eyes of the south, relative to high school football, will be focused on Charlotte Saturday when Tech High school, of Atlanta, comes here for the first North Carolina-Georgia high school game in history. But more will hinge on that game than the interstate standing—Charlotte and Tech High will battle for the southern championship.

Each, undefeated in a brilliant season, has all to win and all to lose in the Saturday fracas, for to the winner goes the title of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee, a wreath not to be scoffed at.

Each team has had its goal line crossed but twice, and Tech has defeated six high and prep schools, while Charlotte High has battered down ten consecutive opponents, through the strength of two teams—the varsity having won from six—a record equal to Tech's. Among the lot that the Georgians have walloped are McCalli school, Tennessee; Academy High, Erie (Pa.), G. M. A. (Atlanta) and Lanier High (Macon, Ga.). Charlotte's outstanding victories have been over Columbia (S. C.) High, Winston-Salem High, Blue Ridge Prep and Shelby High.

It was a powerful Golden Tornado that blew on Grant field Saturday afternoon. It blew with such force that the vaunted defense wall of L. S. U. was blown to pieces and Tech's first and second teams romped to a 23-to-0 victory. Pictured herewith are a few examples of how the Jackets turned the trick. At the top, on the left, Bob Parham, who started a comeback yesterday, has intercepted a Tiger pass and is being brought down by Haynes after a 17-yard canter. On the right, Marshall DeVaughn, the plunging sophomore who earned his spurs yesterday, is making one of his many driving thrusts at the line for considerable gain. The bottom strip shows Mason, Tiger field general, in action. Mr. Mason did pretty much of everything yesterday, and here he is being hit by more than several Jackets. Mr. Mason probably knew when he hit the ground, for those Jackets are swarming all over him.

Sheer Power Of Tech Won, Says Staton

Former Jacket Star Praises Tornado for Offensive Improvement.

BY JOHN STATON.

The L. S. U. game, now relegated to that shadowy midground of if and but and perhaps, brought into bold relief the most vital characteristic of the Tech machine—power. It was power, pure, unadulterated power, that enabled Tech to score three touchdowns, yesterday and kick one field goal.

The L. S. U. defense, Mike Donahue's only stock in trade, stood up wonderfully for two full quarters. In these two periods, defensively at least, L. S. U. was able to give and take on a fairly even basis. But Tech had a little edge in drive, a little superiority in the matter of charging. As a result before the end of the second quarter the L. S. U. men were calling on their reserve, while the Tech forwards were still in their prime.

That L. S. U had been noticeably weakened by the severe pounding of two quarters was evident right at the beginning of the third period. An entirely new Tech team took the field, while L. S. U. was compelled to send back into the game the eleven men who had started. The fresh Tech team gained 32 yards on short jabs before relinquishing the ball. L. S. U. could not gain, so punted on third down. Tech then gained 49 yards before a pass was intercepted. L. S. U., now in the very shadow of the goal, kicked on second down. Tech this time took the ball 36 yards for a touchdown.

Question of Time.

From this point on, it was merely a question of time. The L. S. U. team was so exhausted that it was physically unable to stop the fierce charging of fresh men. All their willingness and fight were of no avail, for Tech rose up in its might to score three times in the second half and thereby roll up the largest score of the season.

When the first half ended with Tech 3 and L. S. U. 0, it looked like the two teams would fight on even terms for the remainder of the afternoon. But the deadly work had been done, even if it did not appear so on the score board.

The most noticeable feature of the game was the absolute lack of offense which L. S. U. brought to Atlanta. Mike Donahue's clan was touted for its defense, but no one fully realized just how little attention had been devoted to offensive play. In four full quarters L. S. U. made only four first downs, two in the first, one in the second, none in the third and one in the fourth. In the fourth quarter L. S. U. gained only five yards from scrimmage. This gain, added to a penalty of five yards, gave the Louisiana boys their only first down in this period.

In the Tech play the most encouraging feature was the interference. Unquestionably this factor has been the weakest in the whole offensive system. The Tech runners all season have been compelled to rely almost wholly on the efforts of the line and their own to make gains. But there were two or three times Saturday when every man in the backfield was busy cutting someone down.

Great Run.

Horne made a beautiful return of a kick for 63 yards. His hip movement during this run was little short of marvelous, but he would have been stopped far up field had it not been for the excellent interfering of his running mates.

Parham, playing his first game since he received an injury some weeks ago, looked like the Bob of old. He swung onto the ball, picked his holes and was never thrown for a loss all afternoon. He was getting great distance on his punts, too.

All in all, the Tech team made a very creditable showing against a team by no means weak. The backfield play was crisp, decisive. The line opened up its holes accurately and well.

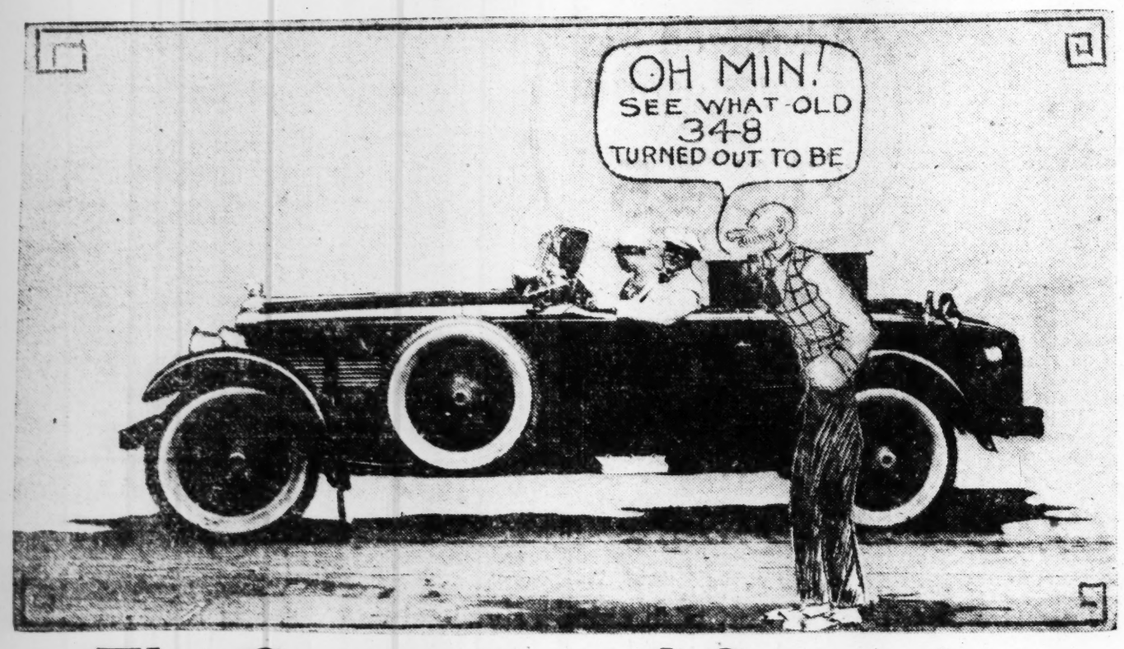

Tech, you might say, has emerged from its last severe test before December 3. There are no words which could too highly praise the Tech coaches and men for what they have accomplished this season. Beginning with the V. M. I. game, Tech has met a worthy team for six consecutive Saturdays. They have been defeated once, tied once. There has been no opportunity for rest, for slackening the pace. More power to a team which plays a hard one every Saturday, and plays each one to win. And, you may lay to it, the experience thus gained is invaluable.

:: TEAM PLAY FEATURES GRID THIS YEAR ::

WITHOUT ANY BIG STAR

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, November 13.—Unlike previous years when stars were responsible for certain football elevens being contenders for national or sectional honors, teams which are now striving to win the championships have gained their present positions through team balance, the dream of every successful gridiron coach.

The coach who develops an all-around team will be more successful than the one who depends upon one or two players for his victories. This has been shown on many occasions and was particularly emphasized when Illinois defeated Michigan. The Wolverines were without the services of Louis Gilbert, one of the keys to the attack. With this star out of the game, Michigan's offense lost its power while Illinois' well-balanced team kept going at a steady clip. Illinois never won a championship when Red Grange was a member of its teams and such has been the case of other teams which boasted of extraordinary players.

In fact most of the elevens which are in the race for championship honors may be called star-less teams. This is especially true of Illinois, which is leading the pack in the western conference. Coach Zuppke has developed an aggregation of team balance which is playing splendid football. The Orange and Blue cannot boast of a single star ball carrier although the team has made several sparkling marches for touchdowns. Mills, Timm, Humbert, Stewart and French are consistent, driving backs with plenty of fight and who do the necessary blocking in the interference.

Princeton, one of the best teams of the company, cannot boast of a star who can be considered the equal of players who wore the Orange and Black of Princeton in former years. Like Illinois, the Tigers are a fighting outfit which depends upon team play for its successes. Myles, Norman, Wittmer and Baruch are a fine quartet of backs, but none matches up with stars of former Princeton teams.

Missouri, which is now in the lead for honors in the Missouri valley conference, has no outstanding star. Coach Henry has four very consistent backs in Mehrie, Diemund, Swofford and Ryans. They are fast, hard drivers who follow an interference and know when to cut back through their own line. Howze, Gorman and Scoff are understudies, any one of whom can fit into the machine without slowing up the team play.

With the possible exception of Drury, of Southern California, none of the coast elevens has players who match with Kaer, Nevers or Muller, the three greatest warriors developed in the section. Southern California and Stanford are now tied for the Pacific coast conference but neither coach depends upon any one player. Drury, however, is just about the best quarterback in the country and is entitled to serious all-American consideration.

Although Caldwell, of Yale, was, before his ban, one of the leading backs in the east, Coach Tad Jones did not depend upon this player entirely for offensive work. Caldwell was ably supported by Decker, Cox and Hoben. In fact the Yale eleven resembles the Princeton team is many respects. It has team balance and an indomitable fighting spirit which will assert itself at all times in the Yale bowl at New Haven on Saturday afternoon.

Flanagan, of Notre Dame, is a great back, but the crafty Knute Rockne does not rely wholly upon this player. Rockne has always been a stickler for team play and this is the principal reason why his team is undefeated this season. Against Minnesota last Saturday, it was not Flanagan but Nieimec who scored the 7 points for Notre Dame. Aside from these two players, Coach Rockne balances his backfield with Wynne, Riley, Collins and Dahman.

Minnesota followers have placed supreme confidence in Captain Herb Joesting, and justly so. Still it was the all-round work of the Gopher backfield which brought about the tie game with Notre Dame. Coach Spears has been in the game too long to place too much assurance in any one player and for this reason has groomed Al Balmquist, Nydahl and Barnhart, to high points of efficiency.

Dartmouth has a fine quartet of backs in Marsters, McPhail, Lane and Black, but these players did not receive the necessary support from their line in the Yale game. Pittsburgh, one of the unbeaten elevens of the country, placed a trifle too much reliance in Captain Welch in the W. & J. game, which resulted in a tie. The same might be said of Amos, the W. & J. fullback, who is one of the best punters in the game.

In order to bring about this team balance, however, a lot depends upon the general play of the line. A strong forward wall has made many a great ball carrying back, but no back was ever responsible for the unsung praises of the lineman. Football fans are too eager to shower the praise upon the man who carries the ball. They will derive much more interest from the struggles if they will try to discern for themselves what made the run or plunge of the ball carrier possible.

If they watch carefully they will see opposing linemen blocked in various directions, they will see tacklers cut down at about the moment they lunged for their man, and they will see opposing linemen blocked in varied to take off the secondary defensive players. It is the forwards who make the gains of the backs possible and these linemen, who must stand by in the thick of the play, offensively and defensively, seldom receive their share of praise.

The team with the stronger line will defeat the eleven with the best backs in the majority of cases. Such victories will be brought about by team play in which the timing of formations is the key to success.

Quakers Stage 2nd 'Comeback'

Philadelphia, November 12.—(AP)—Pennsylvania staged a second "comeback" in as many weeks today to beat Columbia, 27 to 0.

The Lions were outplayed and Coach Lou Young thought so little of his opposition that he sent a full substitute team into the game at the end of the second and last quarters. Penn scored two touchdowns in each of these periods.

Incidentally the 50,000 persons who were in the stands at Franklin field today saw the Quakers give Columbia the worst drubbing since the first game of the series in 1900.

A smashing line attack, forward passing and the famed "hidden ball" play gave Penn its victory.

Haskell Indians Beat Loyola, 3-0

Lawrence, Kan., November 12.—(AP)—The Haskell Indians today turned back the Maroon Cyclone of Loyola university of New Orleans in a thrilling intersectional grid contest by a score of 3 to 0. A place kick by Captain Hawley from the 20-yard line in the final quarter gave the Braves their margin of victory. Although the southerners opened up a dazzling passing attack in the last minutes of play, they were unable to score.

Michigan Raps Navy 27-to-12 In Great Game

Midshipmen Helpless Against Powerful Wolverine Eleven in New Stadium.

BY J. PHILLIP BREWER.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Ann Arbor, Mich., November 12.—A slashing, fighting Michigan backfield tore through the Navy line and off ends to win its third intersectional clash with the Midshipmen, 27 to 12, here today.

Some 87,000 persons crowded into Michigan's new $1,000,000 stadium to witness the game, despite earlier predictions that a blizzard was due before game time.

A versatile line smashing attack which twice took the ball over the Navy goal line in the first period gave Michigan a lead which they did not relinquish, despite the brilliant passing and running attack of Lloyd and Ransford, Navy backs.

Lloyd, Navy's triple threat man, bore the burden of the Middlies' attack until late in the third period, when Ransford entered the game with Michigan leading, 27 to 6. After Michigan's second touchdown, Lloyd broke loose around Michigan's right end and ran 85 yards for a touchdown. The second Navy score came in the third, when Ransford slipped through the line for a touchdown. Both of Lloyd's tries for point after touchdown went wild.

The Michigan passing combination, Bennie Oosterbaan to Louie Gilbert, got under full headway. The Michigan captain grabbed a 40-yard pass from Gilbert late in the final period, which took the ball to Navy's 17-yard line, where the Wolverines lost the oval on downs. The second Michigan touchdown was the result of a pass from Oosterbaan, which Gilbert took on Navy's two-yard line, where two Navy tacklers dropped him.

Despite the overwhelming lead which Michigan ran up in the first two periods Navy continued to threaten. Lloyd and Ransford breaking away time and again for long gains, usually starting from a triple pass.

Michigan's most ancient of plays, the "old 83," paved the way for the first touchdown, when Gilbert tore around Navy's right end to go out of bounds on the 17-yard line. Rich and Oosterbaan combined to drive through the line to Navy's four-yard line, where Rich plunged over center for a touchdown.

Two minutes later Gilbert broke away on a triple pass to run 22 yards, aided by perfect interference, to Navy's eight-yard line. Here a lateral pass, Oosterbaan to Gilbert, put the ball on Navy's two-foot line, where Rich again dove high over the line for his second touchdown.

On the first play after the kickoff Lloyd sneaked off Michigan right tackle into an open field and outran Oosterbaan for Navy's first score. He crossed the goal line 15 yards ahead of the Michigan captain.

Madison, Wis., November 12.—(AP)—Iowa broke its string of western conference defeats by a surprise victory over Wisconsin, 16 to 0, before nearly 40,000 Badger home-coming fans at Camp Randall today.

A safety and a touchdown followed by the extra point drop kick gave Iowa nine points in the second period, and an intercepted pass in the fourth period, with a 90-yard run by Grimm, of Iowa, and another point by drop kick accounted for the Hawkeyes' score.

Vanderbilt and Tennessee Battle to 7-7 Deadlock

2 Undefeated Teams Stage Hard Battle

Both Elevens Match Wits in Exciting Game To Save Records.

Knoxville, Tenn., November 12.—(AP)—The air above Shields-Watkins field here literally rained footballs today as Billy Spears, ace of the Vandy football eleven, threw one pass after another, but the best his aerial onslaught could do was to get a 7-to-7 tie with an inspired Tennessee football team.

Fifteen thousand fans roared their plaudits of Dodson's 18-yard superhuman run in the opening minutes of the final period to knot the score. The Vol fullback, playing his last game with Tennessee, went through the entire Vandy team, standing straight up, to plant the oval back of the Gold and Black goal posts. He started on a straight line buck and never halted, brushing aside Spears, Sharp, Armistead and every Commodore within reach, without ever a halt. Elmore, stocky little half, also playing his last game before home fans, added the extra point, to tie the count.

Spears Starts.

Up to that touchdown capering of Dodson, the Commodores had been on the offensive most of the time. Spears had thrown one long, high pass after another in an effort to get one in the waiting hands of Jimmy Armistead, Creson, Owen or Abernathy. The Vol secondary was roving always to either bat them down or intercept one. Finally, late in the third period, the Commodore ace shoved a high one to Creson, who was standing back of the goal line waiting for it. It was the only slip of the afternoon the Vols made in not sticking with the pass receivers, Creson having caught them flatfooted and the margin proved sufficient to rob them of a victory that would have sent their Southern conference championship hopes to the highest pinnacle ever attained by a Tennessee football squad.

Spears either carried the ball or attempted a pass on most of the plays, while Armistead, Owen and McIlwaine tried occasionally through the line. Their success, however, was negative, the Vol forwards crashing through or meeting them at the line of scrimmage.

In the second period it looked as if Spears had scored when on the fourth down and with 12 yards to go he "pulled" a fake kick that caught the Vols napping. He had a Commodore down holding the ball as if for a placement kick when he suddenly grasped the oval and sidewheeled through the Tennessee tacklers and across the goal line. The play was called back, however, as he had stepped out of bounds, although few of the players even knew it.

On the line, Butcher, Tennessee center, slipped through several times to either stop a runner or halt him long enough for a mate to catch him. McKeen and Alley, Vol ends, also played an important role in stopping plays around their flanks.

Razorbacks Win Over Oklahoma

Fayetteville, Ark., November 12—The University of Arkansas celebrated its ninth annual home-coming day here today by defeating Oklahoma A. and M., Missouri valley champions, 33 to 20. A dazzling air game with Cole throwing with unerring aim was responsible for the victory.

Within five minutes after the game was started the Razorbacks scored when Beavers smashed over left tackle after the ball had been worked to within six yards of the line on a series of passes. Twice again in the same quarter the Porkers scored, Cowger and Donothan going over after passes had played the ball within scoring distance.

A pass, Wright to Radnick, resulted in the first Aggie touchdown late in the second quarter. They scored twice in the third period on plunges by Poole and Bowman. Cole scored Arkansas' last two touchdowns late in the second period and in the last period. He was successful three times in kicking for extra points. Schacher kicked twice for extra points for Oklahoma.

Wins Points, Not Dollars

Pete De Paolo, who has just been proclaimed champion race driver for the past season, won the most points during the year but finished only third in money ranking. DePaolo won $28,080 while Lockhart annexed $43,110 and George Souders won $31,800.

AGGIES BREAK JINX TO BEAT AUBURN, 7 TO 6

Birmingham, Ala., November 12.—(AP)—The Maroons of Mississippi A. & M. brushed precedent aside here this afternoon and defeated Auburn, 7 to 6.

The passing combination of Allen to Wells for the one-point margin after the Aggies' touchdown broke through the Auburn jinx of years' standing and earned for the Mississippians a tough and stubbornly-contested victory.

Auburn launched a terrific drive in the second period of the game to draw up on the Maroon 10-yard line. McElveen, Aggie center, exploded dynamite in the midst of the Plainsmen, however, when he jerked down Ellis' pass and dashed 95 yards for a touchdown.

Not until the third period did the Tigers get their scoring chance. Auburn recovered a fumble on the A. & M. 32-yard line, and Sellers and Crawford squirmed and dived up to the 1-yard mark. Crawford went over, but Ingram's kick was wide.

Gregory, Mississippi left end, received a broken leg in the third period of the game.

V. P. I. BEATS W.-L. ELEVEN By 21-0 COUNT

Blacksburg, Va., November 12.—(AP)—Displaying a versatile attack and a sturdy defense, Virginia Polytechnic's football warriors defeated Washington and Lee here today 21 to 0. The Gobblers scored in each of the last three quarters. An offside penalty and a cleat mark on the sideline, which called Peake back after a thrilling 60-yard run, kept the victors from scoring two more touchdowns in the last half.

Peake played sensationally behind a line which outfought the heavier Washington and Lee forwards and he received fine interference from the remainder of the backfield.

The first score came in the second quarter when Gray, Tech left tackle, blocked Spotts' punt on the visitors' 10-yard line and Nutter downed White back of the line for a safety.

Lott, W. & L. back, fumbled Peake's punt a moment later and V. P. I. recovered on the Generals' 28-yard line. McArthur, sub for McEver, ran off tackle to the four-yard line and Peake followed through the same sector of the line for a touchdown.

In the third quarter Spotts got off a short punt which gave V. P. I. the ball deep in Washington and Lee territory. Peake and Tompko drove through the line to within one yard from the goal where Peake crashed off tackle to score.

A pass intercepted by McEver on his own 60-yard mark was converted into a touchdown when he raced through a Washington and Lee team for the final score.

Turnesa Shoots 64 at Pinehurst To Lead Field

Pinehurst, N. C., November 12—(AP)—Clipping three strokes off the record of the difficult No. 2 course in this afternoon's round, Joe Turnesa, of the Elmsford club, New York, turned in a 64 to forge ahead in the second round of the midsouth open championship tournament here today with a total of 138 for 36 holes.

The record-breaking afternoon round was barely sufficient to win, however, a 74 in the morning holding Turnesa down to a one-stroke advantage over Willie Burke, of Port Chester, N. Y., and Leo Diegel, of Fenimore, N. Y., who finished with a total of 139 each.

Eight birdies fell under the capable stroking of Turnesa on incoming 18 holes. He was never over par on any hole. Four were made on the first nine and four on the second. Long putts sunk from the edge of the green and long shots from the tee enabled him to establish the new record of 64.

Jackets Beat L. S. U. Tigers By 23-0 Count

Last Half Sees Tech Score Three Touchdowns.

Shortly after the varsity went to work there came a touchdown. It didn't come from any long, spectacular run. The Jackets used straight football, hitting first right tackle, then left, and occasionally trying center. But this attack brought first down after first down and advanced the ball down the field.

Shortly after the fourth quarter opened, the field was again swarming with golden jersied football players and Alex had sent in the second team, presumably to hold the 10-0 margin that Tech held at that time. The reserves went Alex one better. They held the margin, but just to make it safe, added a couple more touchdowns.

Looked Good.

Tech looked good Saturday. L. S. U. had no offense to speak of, but it had a heavy line that put up a stubborn defense. Twice it held when failure to hold meant a score for Tech.

But the bright spot of that cloudy afternoon was Tech's improvement on the offensive. Yesterday the backs had something like good interference. They were on edge, holding the ball, and getting away fast, enabling them to make good use of the holes opened by the line.

Bob Horne and Bob Parham, two outstanding backs of last year, who fell down at the beginning of the current season, are back in the fold. Horne by virtue of a beautiful, weaving, shifting 63-yard return of a punt that brought Tech a touchdown and Parham by his smashing drives off-tackle and his punting.

Horne's long run was one of the prettiest that the fans have seen in some time. And good interference helped greatly.

Parham was like the Parham of last year. There was one occasion, in the first quarter, when he pulled off a heady bit of work. He was back to punt and Rusk's pass was bad. Parham juggled the ball, saw he didn't have time to get his kick, and hot-footed it around left end. Both Tiger ends were charging to block the kick, and Parham caught them flat-footed. When the safety man finally brought him down, this long-legged halfback had made 35 yards and put the ball on L. S. U.'s 17-yard line.

Tech Receives.

The game started with Tech receiving. Mason kicked off 40 yards to Bullard, who returned it 12. DeVaughn, who showed plenty of drive Saturday, drove center for three yards and Parham added six more in two drives at tackle. Then Parham got off a 58-yard punt. After this boot, giving L. S. U. the ball on its own 20-yard line, the fans settled back to see what kind of offense Mike Donahue had for his Tigers. There wasn't much to see. Bullard threw Mason for a loss of one yard at right end. Godfrey got a yard at right tackle. Then Mason punted.

That's a good sample of the game at any time during the first half. Once or twice Tech got within the 30-yard line. It was seldom that L. S. U. got past mid-field, and it was also seldom that L. S. U. had the ball to play with.

Shortly after Parham made his uncalled-for but very good dash around left end for 35 yards, Haynes of the Tiger backfield retaliated in kind with a 40-yard gallop through left tackle. But after that outburst of yardage, the Tigers' offensive claws were sheathed in effective fashion and the purple team settled down to holding the Jackets as well as it could. It made a pretty good job of holding the second team.

Along toward the end of the first quarter Tech worked the ball down to L. S. U.'s 21-yard line and Shorty Smith tried a field goal, but it went wide.

Goal Kicked.

Tech marched 44 yards to the Tigers' 13-yard line where the visitors held and Smith resorted to a drop-kick that gave Tech three points.

Tech got the ball when a pass, thrown by Godfrey and intended for Haynes, fell into Parham's arms, who returned it 17 yards before coming to earth on L. S. U.'s 43-yard line. In two first downs DeVaughn and Parham between them took the ball to the 13-yard line, from whence Smith made his kick. Smith dropped back to the vicinity of the 30-yard line for his attempt and the actual distance which the ball traversed must have been about 40 yards.

The half ended with Tech leading 3-to-0. Wop Roman and his band paraded. The general opinion was that "Oh, well, the second team'll come back and maybe make a touchdown and Tech'll win."

But while Wop's musicians were scrimmaging on the 30-yard line, the first team was running signals up behind the temporary stands.

And the first team trotted on the field, picked up its helmet and went out to see just what kind of an animal had come from the lowlands of Louisiana.

The varsity touchdown march began when Mason punted 36 yards to Durant, who returned it six to L. S. U.'s 37-yard line.

Tech had just tried a pass, Durant to Crowley, which was intercepted by Haynes on his own four-yard line. Crowley downed Haynes in his tracks. And after Godfrey lost a yard at center, the only thing Mason could do was punt.

Read Started.

Mizell and Randolph hit the line for two and four yards, respectively. Then Bo Read slashed off left tackle for 12 yards and a first down. That put the ball on the visitors' 19-yard line.

Mizell tried a run at right end. For once Tech's interference took out the end and Mizell made nine yards. Then three yards at left tackle and another first down by Bo Read. With seven yards to go, Randolph hit left tackle, cut inside and went over for a score. Smith kicked goal.

The varsity didn't score any more and shortly after the fourth quarter opened Alex sent in the second team again.

The boys made another score in a hurry. Mason—L. S. U. having made a great stand and held Tech for downs inside the 10-yard line—punted 27 yards out of bounds, standing behind his own goal, and it was Tech's ball on the visitors' 31-yard line. DeVaughn made two yards at center, and on two plays Parham made four and five yards, putting the ball on the 20-yard marker. Parham and DeVaughn, between them, made seven yards, and Horne added seven more and first down at right tackle. DeVaughn got two yards at center, Parham failed to gain, and DeVaughn made two more yards. Then Parham took the ball, executed a perfect swan dive over the line and landed on the other side with a touchdown. Smith's try for goal was blocked by Freeman.

Horne, shortly thereafter, made his 63-yard tour of the field and put the ball on L. S. U.'s 17-yard line. Oltz and Faist—who had been subbed a few minutes before—in three plays put the ball within five yards of the goal-line. Faist made it with a five-yard sneak off left tackle. Smith kicked goal.

The game ended with Faist, Oltz and Fitzgerald, under the direction of Izzy Shulman, hot-footing it for another score.

It was a good game. The Jackets seemed to be in the right shape in every department. When Mason, directing the L. S. U. attack—and doing a capable job—found that the Tiger backs couldn't get through the Jacket line or do much at the ends, he and Captain Godfrey, another Tiger who played well Saturday, went to the mound and started pitching. But Haynes, who was the catcher on most occasions, was effectually smothered and the Jackets had L. S. U.'s aerial attack well in hand at all times.

Auburn and Oglethorpe—in reverse order—are left for the Jackets before the Georgia game. If the Jackets show the power and cooperation they showed Saturday, then these next two tilts will put the Tech team in the right shape for the hard battle that will come on December 3.

PICKED SANDLOT TEAM PLAYS LEADING AUGUSTA ELEVEN

The 125-pound football stars of Atlanta's sandlot league will have an opportunity next Saturday to test their strength against the best boys of that class that can be found in Augusta.

A team picked from the Atlanta sandlot outfits in that class will leave Friday at 2 o'clock for Augusta and will meet the Augusta picked team Saturday.

The Atlanta outfit will be selected by Coach Edwards, of the Grant park team and the Augusta team will be picked by President John J. Wilson, of the Augusta community service.

The city of Atlanta will furnish cars for the trip to Augusta and L. L. Wallis, manager of parks, will accompany the sandlotters as representative of the city.

Display Winner Of Pimlico Cup

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Walter J. Salmon's Display, odds-on favorite at 4 to 5, annexed the Pimlico cup, feature of the closing day's program of the Maryland Jockey club at the Pimlico race track today. Handy Mandy was second in front of Edith Cavell. Bay Sari was the only one starter. Display finished a length ahead of Handy Mandy. The race carried a net value of $8,825 which included a gold cup valued at $500. The time for the two miles and one quarter was 3:56 1-5.

At Latonia, E. B. McLean's Toro which paid $27.80 for a $2 stub was victor in the Queen City handicap, a mile sprint for two-year olds carrying $10,000 in added money. Blackwood was second, a length from Toro while the heavily played favorite, Misstep, took third money. The time was 1:40 1-5.

N. C. U. DOWNS WILDCATS BY 27-TO-0 SCORE

Chapel Hill, N. C., November 12.—(AP)—The Tarheel football team today took a new lease on life and smothered the scrapping Davidson Wildcats 27 to 0 in the first game in the new Kenan Memorial stadium.

Carolina showed complete reversal of form from its earlier games and started in the first period to tame the Cats.

The first score came after a pass, Gresham to Young, for 10 yards, with Young running 40 yards to place the ball on the Davidson five-yard line. On the fourth play Foard carried the ball over. Gresham added the extra point from placement.

After an exchange of punts in the same period Carolina took the ball on Davidson's 42-yard line. On four plays Carolina made a first down, and a pass, Gresham to Young, placed the ball on the Wildcat's 16-yard line. After gains of two and three yards through the line Young carried the ball over for the second pointer and Gresham again place-kicked for the extra point.

The other Carolina scores came in the last period when a melee of fumbles gave the Tarheels the ball on the Davidson 21-yard line. On two plays Foard made it first down and the ball was on the Wildcat's 11-yard line. Foard placed the ball on the one-yard line in four plays and Lassiter carried the ball over. Whisnant drop-kicked for the extra point.

Carolina's last touchdown came after Swartz had intercepted a Davidson pass in midfield. Jackson passed to Spalding for 20 yards and on the next play Spalding shot a pass to Jackson, who raced over the goal line. Spalding failed to make the extra point.

FurmanScores Easy Victory OnGamecocks

Purple Hurricane Scores at Will With Tricky Plays.

Greenville, S. C., November 12.—(AP)—The Furman Purple Hurricane, blowing with intense velocity, rather easily swept out of its path this afternoon the South Carolina Gamecock, and won the annual football game between the two institutions by a score of 34 to 0. The outcome of the game was never in doubt, Furman taking the offensive almost at the very beginning and being master of the situation throughout. The only question was as to how large a score would be run up.

It was the most crushing defeat that Carolina has sustained since the two institutions resumed relations in 1919. While the Gamecocks battled desperately they were unable to hold the Baptists in check and when they got the ball were absolutely unable to make any headway. Only one time did they menace the Furman goal line, this being early in the first period when they got the ball in Furman's territory on a fumble. Furman on the other hand gained almost at will at times running up a total of 31 first downs to Carolina's one.

A triple pass, Pipkins to Capps to Rawl, brought the first downfall of Carolina, netting 35 yards the first time it was worked. Capps ran eleven yards around the end, the triple pass then netted seven more. Furman was penalized five yards for offside but the triple pass was worked again for four yards and Blount then went through the line for the first touchdown.

In the second period Laney and Rawls staged a march down the field making five first downs in successions, and Laney carrying the ball over.

Furman literally ran wild in the third quarter, Laney ran 60 yards for a touchdown in returning a punt.

A few minutes later Blount, Laney and Rawl staged another march down the field and across the goal line. Late in the third period, Capps got away for a 45-yard run which netted another touchdown. Coach Laval, of Furman, finished the game with his reserves. Rawl, Laney and Blount were the chief ground gainers for Furman, while Capps got away for one long run and two or there short ones. The whole Furman team played a good defensive game. Keels, for Carolina, played well, while Wingfield's punting was a feature.

Stanford Beaten By Santa Clara

Palo Alto, Calif., November 12.—(AP)—The kicking toe of Guido Simoni and the forward pass ability of Captain Bud Cummings turned what was expected to be an easy game for Stanford into a 13-6 defeat at the hand of Santa Clara university here today. Stanford leads the Pacific coast conference, tied with Southern California.

While Coach Pop Warner and Captain Hal McCreery were at Berkeley watching California and Washington, Assistant Coach Tiny Thornhill tried to stem the Santa Clarans with the second eleven. Santa Clara held them to a 6-6 tie during the first half. Then, Thornhill sent the regulars in, but Santa Clara was not to be denied, outplaying the conquerors of Washington and putting over the winning score early in the fourth period when Falk passed a neat lob over the goal line to McCormick.

AERIAL GAME OFDARTMOUTH BEATSCORNELL

Hanover, N. H., November 12.—(AP)—A flood of elusive bodies shrouded in the green of Dartmouth swirled through the hills of Hanover today to devastate a dazed and battered Cornell eleven as completely as the waters that so recently swept this countryside.

With forward passes, Dartmouth swept the Cornellians into a 53-to-7 defeat. It was a defeat almost as crushing as that meted out by the master eleven of 1925 and ended in a final blaze of triumph the career of an eleven that has bowed only to Yale.

Headed by a pair of bare-legged phantoms, Al Marsters and Myles Lane, Dartmouth, was well nigh unstoppable. In every period,

Tech and Oglethorpe Meet Saturday in Annual Clash

Petrels Face Tough Time With Jackets

Marks First Season Oglethorpe Has Not Opened Grid Season With Tech.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Next Saturday at Grant field will be local talent day with Oglethorpe and Tech offering the weekly football attraction.

This is the first time, in a long period of years, that Oglethorpe hasn't opened Tech's schedule.

The Petrels opened the season for the Jackets last season by scoring a 7-to-6 victory over the Tornado. And the Petrels haven't forgotten. Neither, for that matter, has Tech.

With Tech making the showing it has this year and the Oglethorpe record to date, it would hardly seem possible that the team from Peachtree road could turn in another victory. But still, Tech has Auburn and Georgia to come after this bird-killing attempt and it would behoove the Techmen to pay considerable attention to the bird in the hand next Saturday afternoon, and not think about the other two roosting on the schedule.

For Oglethorpe will be set to take another fall out of the Jackets and will use every trick it has to accomplish the feat.

The Petrels got off to a bad start this year, losing the first three games on the schedule. Then Saturday a week ago, P. C. was met and downed by a 14-to-6 count. Last Friday, in an Armistice day battle, the Mercer Bears rolled the Petrel in the dust at the short end of a very effective 21-to-7 score.

However, Mercer has a particularly strong team this year, was playing before a home-coming day crowd and celebrating "Phoney" Smith day. And if that isn't sufficient cause to beat any man's team then Tech had no cause to beat Alabama.

But it ought to be a pretty good scrap that the Petrels will put up Saturday. And after that's over, there's just two more games left—Auburn and Georgia.

MOREHOUSE IS DEFEATED BY 20-13 SCORE

Zip Gales and his Tennessee aggregation downed the Maroon of Morehouse college in a spectacular battle by a score of 20 to 13, Saturday, making the fourth consecutive conference defeat of the Tigers.

Tennessee cleanly outclassed the Tigers as the backfield combination of Saunders, Gadsen and Brown ran wild. Zip Gales, former all-American end, coached by B. T. Harvey met the man that coached him and sent his own colors down to defeat.

Tennessee scored in the second quarter when Mosely, quarterback for the Tigers, was attempting to kick behind the goal line. Trice broke through the Morehouse line and tackled Mosely behind the goal for a safety, as the first half ended.

A pass and several line plunges and end runs by Gadsen and Saunders carried the ball 37 yards and placed it on Morehouse's 11-yard line, where Gadsen carried it over.

The next score came in the fourth quarter, when Saunders, of Tennessee State, ran around end for 16 yards and touchdown. Saunders missed the extra point.

The last touchdown came when Gadsen made a brilliant run through the Tigers' line for 20 yards and a touchdown. Tennessee passed for the extra point and missed.

Morehouse outplayed Tennessee in the final quarter with a baffling aerial attack, the brilliant running of Blackburn, Robinson and Saunders bringing two touchdowns.

Chattanooga Beats Southern College

Chattanooga, Tenn., November 12.—(AP)—University of Chattanooga Moccasins proved more poisonous than Southern college Mocosins here today, the home eleven winning by 5 to 6. Lautzenheiser and Barrett ran the ends, and Omelia took forward passes for most of scoring. Spring recovered a fumble and ran 75 yards for the visitors' touchdown.

In the second half, the varsity trotted on the field and in the third period, Omelia, Chattanooga end, twice crossed Southern's goal line, then in the final period, the varsity offense swept Southern aside and rolled up three additional touchdowns.

Spring's alertness in the final three minutes of play brought Southern's only touchdown. The guard, scooping up a fumble, on his own 25-yard mark, raced 75 yards to Chattanooga's goal. It was a thrilling finale to Southern's desperate but futile defense against a smoother machine.

Cub Batterymen Begin Work Feb. 15

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs' spring training schedule was moved backward another week when Manager Joe McCarthy sent out word to his pitchers and catchers to be ready to leave for Catalina Island on February 15. This will give the battery men nearly two months of preparation for the opening games of the season and ought to eliminate, McCarthy figures, some of those lame and brittle arms from which many of the Cub flingers suffered at the start of the 1927 campaign.

'Red-Headed Luck' Costs Walt Hagen A Favorite Club

Dallis, Texas, November 12.—(AP)—Luck and protection which Walter Hagen considered necessary in winning his fifth national professional golf title, cost him his favorite club and his famous dun-colored sweater.

The club went to Billy Walker, 14, because his red hair brought luck. The sweater was claimed by Homer Seeley, burly policeman, who kept the fans out of the way.

Shortly after the tournament opened here last week Hagen spotted Billy's glowing thatch. He promptly called the boy to him and rubbed the red hair. On the promise of any club in the bag if the champion repeated, the boy furnished "the luck" while Hagen beat Tommy Armour, Al Espinosa and Joe Turnesa.

After the Turnesa match Billy followed Hagen to the Cedar Crest clubhouse, somewhat abashed by the assembly of links stars.

"Which one will you have, Billy," asked Hagen.

"That club you knocked the ball over the trees with on No. 11 today—if you will part with it," hazarded Billy.

Joe Glick Meets Bernstein Nov. 14

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Joe Glick, the Brooklyn buttonhole maker, must wait a bit for his second shot at the junior lightweight championship of Tod Morgan, Seattle sharpshooter.

Although Tod took Joey rather decisively in their first title mixup at Madison Square Garden last December, a return match was arranged for the same arena, late this month.

Now Glick and Jack Bernstein will fight ten rounds on the garden card November 14 to decide who shall face Morgan December 16 in a 15-round match for the 130-pound title.

SMITH'S LONG DROP-KICK

When Shorty Smith, master-minding Tech's second team in the affair with L. S. U. Saturday, drop-kicked a field goal in the second quarter, he made one of the longest kicks that has been made this year. Standing on the 30-yard line, Shorty received a high pass from center, which necessitated his hurrying the kick. He made it, however, and with the goal posts 10 yards behind the goal line, made a total distance of 40 yards that the ball traveled after leaving Smith's toe.—Photo by George Cornett.

GIRLS' CHURCH LOOP BEGINS PLAY MONDAY

The girls' basketball league of the "Y" Church Athletic association will open Monday when three games will be played on the Taft Hall court. The boys' division is also ready. Any church expecting to enter a team this season should by all means have a representative present at the business meeting Tuesday at 7:30 at the Y. M. C. A.

It is planned to open the boys' leagues about the first week in December, therefore, it is urgent that every one have a representative present. A schedule will be brought up for all the teams that have entered. The boys' games will be played on the Y. M. C. A. court.

Mr. Cunningham, physicial director of the "Y," is planning to organize a young boys' basketball league. The young players will be classified both as to age and weight. These games will be played each Saturday afternoon at the "Y."

Miss Evans is in charge of the girls' division which is composed of six teams, but plans are under way whereby some form of athletics might be played the year round. The girls' league is the first to be formed this year and will be the first to open its season. The games will be played according to the boys' rules and four rounds are scheduled.

Football Is Great Training for Young Men Says Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Football is great training. It develops courage, endurance, quick decision and sportsmanship. Probably there's nothing finer than the development of that idea of applying the standard of sportsmanship to everything in life.

I remember many instances of what football training brings out. There was one day on the training field at Yale, many years ago when Jim Hogan was captain of one of the greatest teams in Yale history. Morse, who later captained Yale, slid on his face in one of the scrimmages, got a cut across the cheek bone, and went on playing with the blood running down his neck. After the practice Hogan and Morse stood together, laughing while an attendant swabbed Morse off with a wet sponge.

"You Yale men seem to think it's a joke to get hurt," I remarked to Hogan. Jim grinned widely. So did Morse.

Never "Hurt" at Yale.

"Oh," said Hogan, "a scratch like that is nothing. We never get 'hurt' at Yale."

If Hogan was ever hurt he didn't admit it. He has a record of playing four years without once being taken off the field.

I was coming back from Chicago to Princeton with the Tiger team that won the last game in Chicago, pulling victory out of defeat with two touchdowns in the last seven minutes of play. In the car were two players using crutches, one with an arm in a sling, others more or less bandaged up.

"They gave you a fight didn't they?" I remarked to one of the bandaged players.

"Oh, yes," he said, laughing. "They played good hard football, but perfectly fair. They're fine sportsmen. I hope we'll play them again. I never had so much fun before. They nearly whipped us, didn't they? We were luckly to pull out at the finish. We sure had the breaks. I guess we were just as rough as they were, but we both played the game. You can't give everything you've got without being bandaged up a little."

1 Killed, 1 Hurt In Track Crash

Phoenix, Ariz., November 12.—(United News.)—Frankie Boyle, race driver of Los Angeles, was killed, and Bob Brazee, of Phoenix, was seriously injured in an accident at the automobile races at the state fair here today.

Boyle, driving a Peoria special, owned by Sam Palmer, was crushed to death and Brazee was hurt when their cars left the track simultaneously.

COACHES SHOULD ROTATE ON ORDER OF BISHOPS

:: Pegler Says Rockne Could Be Proven As Coach Then ::

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune)

New York, November 12.—The fluctuating fortunes of the prominent football coaches, such as Mr. Stagg, Tad Jones and Dr. John Wilce, suggest the notion that it might protect them from the slings and arrows of outrageous alumni to ordain them into a sort of priesthood, subject to arbitrary assignments at the discretion of a high priest having the authority of a bishop and removable only at the discretion of the same superior. In view of the fact that many of the coaches actually do exert a heavy spiritual influence over their athletes, the idea of organizing the craft along such lines is neither so far fetched nor so radical as it might seem on first inspection.

There are several hell-fire exhorters among the coaches who can make the boys to whinny and cry by their revivals in the locker rooms between halves, and I once met one of Mr. Stagg's old football players while watching a practice ruckus on Stagg field who said the old gentleman's spiritual example and teachings had been his constant ideal in 20 years of private and commercial life subsequent to his graduation.

Pastoral Sense.

There has developed among the more mature coaches a distinct pastoral sense, so lively that they believe they must exemplify chivalry, chastity and temperateness to their players, above and beyond the fundamental job of teaching them to play football. They refer to their players in a soft, fatherly way as the kids and in some cases they become the confidantes, consolers and counsellors of the boys in matters far remote from football technique. Moreover, they have drawn together, the coaches have, to warn themselves against the bumptious gusts of criticism or misunderstanding around the fire of their common purpose and mutual something or other, so that you might say that they constitute a priesthood even now, lacking only the form and authority of organization.

You may recollect that last year, after 30 years at the University of Chicago, Mr. Stagg was rudely yelled at because his team, which went over to Philadelphia to play Penn, not only lost the game but displayed a knowledge of only five plays and couldn't execute more than three of the five. The response to this criticism was that Mr. Stagg himself knew lots of plays, but that the football team was incapable of learning more than five or executing more than three. The reproaches resumed this fall to be silenced only when Mr. Stagg's team in the third game of the season, defeated Purdue, which had defeated Harvard the week before.

There have been resounding complaints against Dr. Wilce, of Ohio State, this fall, and there were significant sighs from New Haven when Yale dropped a game to Georgia, the week Yale was out, proving that the coach, under the present system, is a good and worthy coach in the opinion of a highly talkative element only so long as his team wins football games.

There Are Coaches and—Coaches.

Of course, there are coaches and then there are coaches, some being downright incompetent or spiritually unfit for their calling. There was one coach at a little intellectual general store at a Texas crossroad who took his team several hundred miles to play a cherished rival and, when his center began passing the ball over the heads of the backfield, dashed onto the lot, reporting himself as a sub for the rattled athlete who was throwing the game away, and when he stooped over the ball for the first play he gazed back between his stout legs to see his assistant coach crouching there at quarterback, having declared himself into the game and the varsity quarterback out under the evil inspiration of his chief.

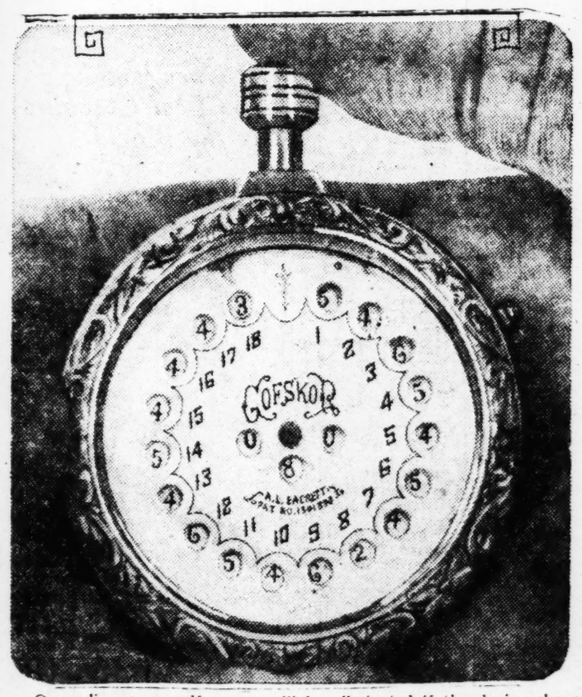

I have noticed that the more reputable coaches constitute a sort of clergy, for I see their teams in terrific onslaughts in the afternoon, but in the evening after the kids have had the black stains of the tape swabbed off their hides and have been sent to the moving pictures, I see the coaches gabbing together over cigars and what-not, recalling the breaks of the game like amiable rivals of the cloth who have spent an earnest Sunday telling their people why the other man's religion was a dead-end street instead of the official route to salvation.

Arbitrary Assignments.

Under a system of arbitrary assignments, copied from the ecclesiastical method, the coach would be secure in his job as long as he satisfied a superior with a strictly professional and sympathetic understanding of the work. And, in the occasional rotation of pastorates, you might eventually discover how much of K. K. Rockne's success is due to his coaching and how much is due to the abundance of talent at Notre Dame. It would be illuminating to watch Mr. Rockne through a season at Lowell Textile institute, Hampden-Sydney, or Wofford college.

I can anticipate objections, but I can't forefend them. For one thing the organization might never really get organized because everybody would want to be the bishop.

CHECK THE SCORE

Quarreling over golf scores will be eliminated if the device above, the invention of Max Zimmon, a former Boston boy, becomes popular. It automatically records the number of strokes for each individual hole and simultaneously totals on a three-center dial the score as the game progresses. It is enclosed in a 16-size watch case and can be carried in the vest pocket.

SLOAN LEADS U. OF VIRGINIA TO 21-0 WIN

University, Va., November 12.—(AP)—The University of Virginia's football team battled to a brilliant 21-to-0 victory over the University of Maryland here today and thereby scored its first victory over an out-of-the state team of the season. Conspicuous in-and-outers this year, the Cavaliers, led by the flashy halfback, Sloan, played their best game thus far in 1927 and aside from the first quarter the Marylanders never threatened.

Sloan, Flippin and Kaminer scored the touchdowns for Virginia as a result of a diversified attack in which the Cavaliers gained through the line with the forwards opening great gaps, around the ends and by the use of a short passing attack which was extremely successful. All the scoring came in the second and third quarters.

SPORT SHOTS

BY ALAN J. GOULD.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Even a past master of the well-known art of the "ballyhoo" can be "fed up" on it. For that reason Tex Rickard wishes there was some means of "debunking" the boxing game, just at present.

Rickard has done his full share of denying in the course of a checkered and colorful career, but the promoter has shattered some of his own records within the past few weeks in connection with such stories as his reported split with Madison Square directors, rumors of his resignation, intimations that the pending Dempsey-Kearns-Rickard suit would "blow the lid off the boxing racket," charges that Rickard is Dempsey's real manager, and, finally, Gene Tunney's assertion that he will fight three times next year, possibly under auspices other than Rickard's.

Of them all, the most difficult for Rickard, as well as the boxing fraternity generally, to swallow is the idea that Tunney will battle more than once in defense of his title or that he will fight under the promotion of any other individual than the master of Madison Square Garden.

"Tunney has a contract with me that gives my corporation an exclusive option on the champion's services next year, up to October 1," declared Rickard today. "It is as ironclad as any contract can be. There are no ifs, and or buts about that.

"Actually it is a continuation of the contract under which he fought for me at Chicago last September. It covers every contingency. It calls for advance payments of $100,000 to Tunney by February 1, 1928, and another $100,000 by June 1, just as his arrangement with me this year."

Even the mention of a possibility that Jim Mullen, Chicago promoter, would offer Gene Tunney inducements for another battle with Dempsey at Soldier field gives Tex Rickard an acute species of annoyance.

The suggestion, however, is that Mullen's week-end visit to New York is more in the interests of giving a cheer for Notre Dame in the gridiron game with the Army at the Yankee stadium tomorrow than it is with offering any fight terms for Tunney.

Even though Tunney personally may prefer to fight more than once a year, while he is champion, the proportions to which heavyweight championship battles have developed offer a distinct obstacle.

"I would be willing to match Tunney as often as he liked," declared Rickard, "if it could be arranged and done, but it isn't as simple as that. So much is involved nowadays that one big battle a year is about all that can be handled.

City Basketball News

Basketball in the City and Trammell Scott leagues will open the first week in December. Each league is almost organized and all rules and regulations have been discussed and voted upon. The Trammell Scott league has seven teams lined up and will open Wednesday, December 7. The City league with six teams will open Thursday, December 8. The Athletic club court will be used by each league.

There have been a few changes in the teams that make up these leagues and they will definitely be settled at the next business meeting. The City league meeting will be held Monday at Trammell Scott's, 66 N. Broad street, and the Trammell Scott league will hold its meeting at the same place and time on Thursday. After these two business meetings the schedule will be worked out.

SEWANEE WINS OVER TULANE WAVE, 12 TO 6

New Orleans, La., November 12.—(AP)—Two thrilling runs by Schoolfield and Esdorn carried Sewanee to a 12-to-6 victory in the annual football game with Tulane here today.

Schoolfield raced 25 yards for a counter in the second quarter after receiving a pass from Autin, left halfback, and in the third quarter Esdorn recovered a fumble and ran 30 yards for the second touchdown. Schoolfield missed goal each time.

Tulane scored in the second period on a triple pass, Menville to Banker to Stoessel, who was standing behind Sewanee's goal line. O'Pry's place kick was blocked by Esdorn.

Mrs. Harry P. Williams, formerly Marguerite Clark, of motion picture fame, was a sponsor for Sewanee.

Elon To Take Northern Trip

Elon College, November 12.—A northern trip into Ohio has been arranged for the Elon College basketbill team this coming season, the graduate manager of athletics announced today, which will be the longest and most extended trip any Elon College team has ever taken.

The trip will begin at Hampden-Sidney college in Virginia and go to Defiance college, at Defiance, in the northwestern corner of Ohio, and return by Muskingum college, at New Concord, in the eastern part of Ohio.

The team will leave Elon college on January 18, and will be away 10 days on this trip before reaching home again, playing six engagements. The individual colleges to be met on this trip are Hampden Sidney, at Hampden Sidney, Va.; Roanoke College, at Salem, Va.; Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio; State Normal College, Bowling Green, Ohio, and Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio. There will be a one day lay-off between playing dates after the Roanoke engagement and also a Sunday lay-off following the Morris Harvey game.

The trip in detail as follows:

January 19—Roanoke College at Salem, Va.

January 20—No game.

January 22—Sunday.

January 23—Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio.

January 24—State Normal, Bowling Green, Ohio.

January 25—Muskingum, New Concord, Ohio.

BRENAU PLANS BIG 'PLAY DAY' NOVEMBER 19

Gainesville, Ga., November 12.—The Athletic Association of Brenau college will be hostess to representatives from thirty or more women's colleges on Saturday, November 19. This gathering will be a college "play day" and will be unique in many ways. The Athletic association has invited five representatives and a teacher from all colleges for women within a radius of 300 miles. The guests have been asked to arrive by 10:30 in the morning and spend the day in play. All the facilities of the Brenau College School of Physical Education will be available to the guests. All games and sports played by women's colleges will be played during the day: hockey, soccer, baseball, basketball, volley ball, tennis, horseshoes, archery, swimming, folk dancing and horseback riding. There will be no formal meeting and no business transacted. There will be no spectators, no competition, no prizes and no winners. The whole purpose is to further physical education and recreation in the south and to promote goodfellowship among the many southern colleges for women by means of play.

In the evening the guests will participate in a "kid party" and dance at the gymnasium. Later the Brenau Physical Education association will entertain them at a midnight feast at Camp Takeda.

Brenau college has always been a pioneer and is doing a great work in promoting this first southern play day. Leaders in physical education all over the country are urging play days to take the place of interscholastic competitions for women and girls. These people are watching with interest the play day movement in the south as sponsored by Brenau college. Besides the students and teachers from the various colleges, prominent physical educators from all over the south have been invited to attend this first southern play day for women.

Illinois Nears Big Ten Title, Beats Chicago

Powerful Zuppke Machine Has But One More Game for Title.

BY CLARK B. KELSEY.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Champaign, Ill., November 12.—(United News.)—Coach Bob Zuppke wound up his automatic football team and the Illinois mechanism clicked off first down—first down—first down, to defeat Chicago, 15 to 6, here today.

The Illinois victory practically clinched the "Big Ten" championship for the Zuppke team. Only one game remains on the schedule, the Ohio game, at Columbus next Saturday.

Beginning on an ebb tide, the Illini began to surge at the start of the second quarter and went full speed until the end of the period. Timm and Walker ran amuck in the second period and in two brilliant bursts of speed accounted for the first Illinois touchdown. In the final period Walker cut loose again, and with aid from D'Ambrosio put the Illini well ahead with another touchdown. Then Chicago took advantage of Illinois' fumble by Humbert, captured the ball, and scored a touchdown.

Illinois made three more drives on the Maroon goal but was halted in each attempt.

In the first period the Illini had scored on a safety.

Attendance was estimated at 50,000.

The Illinois victory was more decisive than the score indicated. The Illini made 19 first downs to Chicago's one. No Maroon was able to gain consistently, while the Illinois backfield reeled off heavy yardage.

Chicago was at a great disadvantage because of the injury which kept Captain Ken Rouse, star center, from the game.

The Lineup.

ILLINOIS		CHICAGO

Caldwell Cheers From Sidelines As Bulldogs Win

New Haven, Conn., November 12.—(AP)—From his seat on the Yale bench, Bruce Caldwell leaped to his feet with an unrestrained yell of joy this afternoon as Fishwick broke clear of the Princeton protective screen and flashed over the Tiger line for the tying score.

Up to Tuesday night, Caldwell had been justified in modestly picturing himself in Fishwick's role, but any regret he may have felt that the eleventh-hour imposition of the ineligibility rule had benched him, was completely submerged in pulling for his team.

Cox kicked the point which broke the tie and again Caldwell joined most of the 80,000 spectators in unmelodious but appreciative acclaim, which billowed and surged above the bowl again as Hemmersley marched to the second touchdown. After the game Caldwell refused numerous offers to write a description of the game as viewed from the bench. He also refused all attempts at interviews.

Judge a Dodo.

Anderson, S. C., November 12.—(AP) Federal Judge H. H. Watkins, of the western district of South Carolina, became a member of the local hole-in-one club this afternoon on the golf course of the Anderson Country club when his fine mashie shot from the tee of the 145-yard fifth hole bounded up onto the green and into the cup. Judge Watkins was playing with Dr. W. H. Corbett, local physician.

General Leads "Orces."

Subordinate officials at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., followed their general, Edward L. King, commandant of the fort, even in a golf tournament. General King, leading a team of officers against a team of civilians, scored a hole in one and turned in the lowest card of the day, leading his team to a 64-to32 victory.

Irish Fall Before Big Guns of Army Attack, 18 to 0

Chris Cagle Leads March To Victory

Crowd of 67,000 Sees Notre Dame Held Scoreless by Smashing Army Eleven.

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY.

New York, November 12.—(United News.)—Equipped with every offensive weapon known to modern football, Army stormed the heights to trample Notre Dame underwent a 10-to-0 score today before 76,000 spectators—the largest crowd that ever saw a football game in New York city.

Expected to lose, Army bore down on Notre Dame with a driving attack that left the Irish stunned and dazed. Not since 1926, when another great Army team crashed Notre Dame, 28-to-0, has Rockne's team been humiliated as it was today.

The Army had too many guns for the Irishmen. Chris Cagle, a driving halfback, who came to West Point from Southwestern Louisiana institute, started the Army on its triumph with a sensational 48-yard dash for a touchdown in the first five minutes of the opening period.

Inspired Football.

Leading, 6 to 0, Army played inspired football and turned back charge after charge of Rockne's legions. Rockne started his second team, but after Cagle's brilliant run around Notre Dame's right end, he immediately sent his first team into the game.

The Notre Dame regulars carried the ball down to Army's eight-yard line in the second period, but the old Army line rose up to stop the Irish within a few paces of the goal line.

Only once more during the game was Notre Dame within striking distance of the goal. That was in the final period after Army had rolled up three touchdowns and had almost a complete team of substitutes in the game.

Notre Dame was completely smothered by a fierce charging Army line. The great Christy Flanagan was checked time and again before he reached the line of scrimmage and Army forwards were constantly breaking through to stop the Notre Dame attack.

Sprague Stars.

Sprague was the giant who rampaged up and down the lines, tearing into the heart of every Notre Dame play. The Irish could not get him out of the way.

History repeated itself to a certain extent when Cagle staged his long run for Army's first touchdown. Just one year ago today Christy Flanagan shot through a gap in the Army line and ran 62 yards for the touchdown that gave Notre Dame a 7-to-0 victory.

Cagle's run was not quite so long, but it was every bit as spectacular. The last 20 yards he raced parallel with the sidelines and his flying feet were only an inch or two inside the gridiron boundary mark.

But Army charged on and scored two more touchdowns in the final half to make its triumph complete.

The third period was not very old when little Bill Nave, who did not win a regular berth in the Army backfield until after the Yale game, got his chance. Notre Dame had the ball on Army's 44-yard line and Dahman, Irish half, dropped back to pass.

Intercepts Pass.

Nave seemed to sense the play and came rushing up from his safety position to intercept the pass on Army's 40-yard line. There was not a Notre Dame player in sight and Nave sprinted 60 yards down a clear field for Army's second touchdown.

Later in the third period Nave, who piloted the Army machine like a veteran, was carried from the field with a painfully injured leg.

Another wild Notre Dame pass came near proving costly at the start of the fourth period. Meehan, who had replaced Nave, snared Niemiec's pass and ran 33 yards before he was forced out of bounds on Notre Dame's 7-yard line. Two plunges by Hutchinson, substitute Army back, gained three yards. Then Cagle swung around right end and was pulled down only a foot shy of the goal line.

Punting from behind his own goal line, Niemiec drove Army back to midfield with a long 10-yard spiral, but it was only minutes until the Army was storming at Notre Dame's citadel again.

This time they did not fail. Notre Dame started Army down the field by drawing a 5-yard penalty. Murrell picked up three yards, but Hutchinson lost two on the next play.

Then Hutchinson completed a running pass to Cagle, who caught the ball on the 15-yard line and sprinted over the Notre Dame goal line for Army's third touchdown. The pass covered 32 yards.

Irish Start Passing.

Notre Dame began to pass on every play, wildly and at random. A pass, Niemiec to Polisky, Notre Dame tackle, made a first down on Army's 20-yard line but the Irish lost the ball a moment later when Piper, substitute Army back, intercepted a pass on the 10-yard line.

Army kicked to the 35-yard line but Notre Dame worked the Niemiec to Polisky combination again for 26 yards and a first down on Army's nine-yard line. Another pass gained five yards but the final shot ended the game.

ALL JR. HIGH SCHOOLS HAVE GRID SQUADS

Every Junior High school in the city now has a football team in the field. Last week Hoke Smith came out with its 1927 outfit, tying the East Point High school, 6 to 6.

Coach Hal Webster has been working with his squad for the past two weeks and as a result has a balanced team.

The first eleven is composed of some husky lads that have plenty of beef and bone. The line will average 160 pounds, but the backfield is light with plenty of speed and fight. Bennie Jordan has been elected captain and is fullback. Dwoskin is the field general. Rosen and Levin are at the halfback positions, Shast and Doyal are at the flanks. Otwell and Hayes have been doing some good work at tackle. Cohen and Worley are two good guards, and Bradley has been doing well at center.

Bass Junior High has not had such a good season this year. Last week it received a trimming at the hands of the strong G. M. A. reserves. This was a hard game for the youngsters as their opponents were much older and stronger.

Students Taught Game.

Every student in the boys' division of the physical department at Bass is now receiving instructions in the game of football. Each week Coach Holt has about 900 boys report to him for physical training, and the program now calls for football.

Last week they were taught how to punt, drop-kick, place-kick, snap the ball from center, receive pass and punts, and throw passes.

Next week instruction will be given in blocking, charging and position of linemen and backs.

The O'Keefe eleven has not been active for the past week as there was no scheduled game and the boys took only enough work to keep them in shape. Coach Langston has been devoting most of his time getting his class football tournament organized.

Next week will find a game in progress every period of the day. Last season there were some very good games with numerous 0 to 0 ties.

Indiana Defeats Wildcats, 18 to 7

Evanston, Ill., November 12.—(AP)—Indiana spoiled Northwestern's homecoming by taming the Wildcats, 18 to 7, in a hard-fought football game at Dyche stadium this afternoon.

Runs of 42 and 74 yards by Rheinhardt and Harrell and the lighter but fighting Hoosier line forged the punch that handed Northwestern its fourth straight defeat.

Johnny Farrell Signs as Pro In Fla.

St. Augustine, Fla., November 12.—(AP)—Johnny Farrell, of New York, one of the nation's leading professional golfers, has been secured as professional at the St. Augustine links this winter, according to announcement made today by Thomas E. Byron, manager of the local course.

Farrell will commence his duties January 1.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY · DICK · HAWKINS ·

An Improved Tornado.

Finally and at last the Golden Tornado, of Georgia Tech, has pulled off one of "these here massacures" and the alleged second and third teams did all but one small bit of the "massacuring."

We say "alleged" for the very good and sufficient reason that these substitute outfits seemed to do about as well on the defense and offense as their big brothers of the "first varsity."

This is not a treatise, however, on the respective merits of the several prima donas of the Tornado and their several understudies. What we mean to do is burst forth with a bunch of flowers for the Jackets as they appeared at Grant field Saturday.

The great Stumpy was lolling on the bench all dressed up in a gold and white blazer which is not even remotely related to a football uniform but his actual presence in the fray was not needed. The snarling of Mike Donahue's huge Tiger was just a purr in the face of the Jackets' hum. Where Stumpy would have slipped through their line for gains, Bo Read was slipping Saturday. Where Randolph crashed the big blue line in one quarter, DeVaughn, the fighting sophomore, and Oltz, his running mate, crashed it in the other three periods.

In short words, the much touted defense of the Louisiana Tigers crumbled like papier mache before the first and second lines of the Tech machine and for the first time this season the terrible Tornado sang a song of powerful offense.

And Tech scores its first sweeping victory of the season without the use of any number of trick plays. It crossed the Tiger goal three times and kicked one field goal without resorting to anything but the pound, pound of a line attack with a very occasional end run and a few scattered passes. It was DeVaughn and Parham through the line and Randolph, Read, Faisst and Mizell through the same place.

It was a wilting, withering attack against the heavy Tiger forward wall that would have crumbled many a greater line—an attack which could not be stemmed with fresh troops and which ran almost at will toward the last part of the game.

Despite the fact that the Tech score was compiled almost entirely by the plugging system, there were moments of supreme thrill when the Tornado backs got away for long gains. Once, too, Haynes, of L. S. U., ripped off 40 yards through the line.

The two brightest spots in the Tech offensive in a day filled with offensive play were the long runs by Bob Horne and the dash around end by Bob Parham in the first quarter.

The 63-yard return of a punt by Horne was as beautiful an exhibition of open field running as Atlanta fans have seen this year and Parham's run was as fine a piece of headwork as has been seen.

Parham was back to punt. It was fourth down with the ball in Tech territory, so the lanky kicker was forced to punt—it could not be an intentional fake. The pass from "Cedartown" Rusk was too low and far to one side. Bob found that he was unable to get the ball off but in a fraction of a second he saw the enemy flank unprotected and dashed around that end for 35 yards. It was a fine example of thinking football.

Looking over the statistics of the game it is not hard to discover why the game ended as it did.

Just for instance. Tech ran the ball from scrimmage 90 times for a net gain of 378 yards, scoring 17 first downs while L. S. U. snapped the ball for line smashes just 21 times in the four periods and gained but four first downs, two of these being accounted for by a pass and a Tech penalty. Their net gain from scrimmage was 59 yards.

L. S. U. tried 13 passes and completed two for a net gain of 15 yards. Three of their heaves were intercepted. Tech tried six passes and completed one for 18 yards. One was intercepted.

Tech punted six times for an average distance of 36.5 yards, while 11 Tiger boots averaged 35 yards. Tech punts were returned 33 yards by L. S. U. backs and Tech sprinters—aided materially by Mr. Horne and his 63-yard gallop—returned L. S. U. punts 78 yards.

Tech suffered a total loss of 35 yards on penalties while L. S. U. was penalized four times for five yards each.

LACK OF FIGHTING SPIRIT

:: ATHLETICS CLAIM PITCHERS "LAY DOWN" ::

RUINATION OF MACKMEN

BY GORDON MACKAY.

Why?

That monosyllable pops up in every conversation where two or three rooters for the Athletics are gathered together these days. The question is directed toward one issue—the complete fiasco and bust that Connie Mack's club proved to be in the 1927 pennant race.

Many replies are given, but none of them authentic. Ty Cobb, however, in talks with his friends, has pointed out the underlying cause he found for the trouble. It was lack of spirit, according to the Royston Rajah. By that Cobb doesn't mean that the team lacked abdominal investiture. He does not mean that the men were sans valor, and sans courage.

The great Georgian simply means that the spirit to win was not present, the undying, adamant spirit to conquer and to prevail was not numbered among the assets of the club. His observations are backed to the limit by Eddie Collins. Eddie was not only astounded but taken aback by the lack of spirit which is imbedded in the club. The Laird of Lansdowne could not believe he was on the club which once won championships, league and world alike, with racy abandon, fine pitching, inside stuff, lots of batting and great base running.

Pitchers "Lay Down."

While these battle-scarred veterans point to this spirit, or lack of it, as the boll weevil that has cankered, corroded, and captured the Mackmen, the players declared without reserve that two pitchers, both veterans, "laid down" on the club. So poignant was this feeling among the men that the players virtually ostracized one of the suspects. He rode alone, a pariah from the fellowship and camaraderie always shared in a ball club.

Tragedy stalked in the fortunes of the Mackmen. Connie Mack has come to the end of the trail. Second place did not assuage the grief and poultice the wounds of the fans, for they had set 1927 as the year when a pennant would be won. Nothing save a flag would have satisfied them. They refused to be comforted by the inevitable cry of "wait till next year." Unless the Mackmen came through, and there wasn't a Chinaman's chance that this would happen, Connie Mack and his Mackmen were dead with paying patrons in the Quaker City.

It is true the vast majority of experts picked the Mackmen. For a number of reasons, too. One of these was a superb pitching staff. This supremacy on the hill would turn the trick. It was a valuable adjunct to the Mackmen that they carried so many pitchers—they needed most of them every afternoon. A glance at the training season in Florida will reveal—as it would have then if the writers had bothered about such a little detail—that the Mackmen showed no marked superiority over major league foes.

Great Hurlers Not So Good.

The great pitching staff could humble and subdue minor leaguers, but it was no great shucks against the Giants, Braves and the Cardinals. When the major season opened it was proven that the willow was mightier than the hook, the wallop greater than the fast one. The Yankees took their bludgeons in hand and went out and hacked their way to the front, and battered the race into a walk-away before Independence day.

Two months served to show the fans that Mack was through and so were his henchmen. It brought balm to the feelings of one local prophet who was almost boiled in oil before the season opened when he declared he expected to see the Athletics in fifth place by July 4.

Real followers of the Mackmen shouted for his blood. Loyal fans craved his head on a silver salver, like a lot of Salomes in breeches. But he laughs last who retains his smile for the finish. On the fifth of July—the fatal date—the fans rubbed their eyes and found alas it was all too true—the Athletics were in fifth place.

Cobb came to the Mackmen determined to give everything he had, all he owned in his last fling at the game he loves and has adorned. It is true that he really burned himself out in his first month of duty. Imagine his surprise when he found his new playmates could whistle, hum, dance and sing when they had lost a tough game. Not for them were regrets and grouches over the game that had been lost. This attitude on the part of the Athletics almost knocked Cobb from his props.

"How Come?"

Finally he approached Jimmy Dykes, and asked him why the boys took everything in such good grace. Ty pointed out they had lost the afternoon's game by a single run, and nobody seemed to feel abashed, downhearted nor disgusted.

"I hate to lose just as badly as the other fellow," said Jimmy, with an infectious smile, "but I don't like to show it. That's the reason I smile and sing after we boot away a hard one."

Then T. R. Cobb, the psychologist, saw a great light. This was the attitude the Macks were assuming, and this was the stuff that wouldn't give them any pennants.

"Well, Jimmy," said the Nestor of the team, "you want to cut that right out. When you take it on the chin in a tough one, you want to kick, growl and grouch and show that you wanted that one. That's the only way to build up a winning spirit, and that's the only way a ball player can get going great."

Whether or not this gospel of growling was spread abroad in the club has not come to the surface. But the enmity of the bulk of the players towards the pitchers in question has risen upward where it is fully revealed. One of the twirlers was said to want a transfer to another club, which would mean that he could motor home every night when that club was playing at home.

The other pitcher and his mates did not jibe well. This was due to the peculiar disposition of the twirler, it is said, which gives his teammates the idea he is trying to high-hat them always. Neither of these hurlers was worth a farthing to the club. Both were expected to be the keystones of a great pitching staff.

Ruined Rookie.

Cobb, so say the scribes who traveled with the Macks, believed that this lackadaisical spirit on the part of the Athletics worked havoc with Dudley Branom, the first baseman obtained by Mack from Kansas City. The "Peach," so it is said, felt that Branom came to the Mackmen from the minors with ambition keyed high and a desire to toil sweeping him.

South Watches Football Stars For Squad to Carry Hopes West

One Dixie football player has been selected and another is virtually a certain choice for the Southern team that will play an all-California eleven in Los Angeles Christmas day. They are Freddie Pickhard (upper right), Alabama captain and tackle, whose playing against Stanford last year caused his selection to head the invaders this season, and Billy Spears (left), Vanderbilt's flashy quarterback. Dan McGugin (lower right), Vanderbilt mentor, will aid in coaching the Southerners.

Birmingham, Ala., November 12.—(AP)—With the football season running into the home stretch, speculation is plentiful as to the Dixie stars who will meet an all-California team in Los Angeles on Christmas day, but only two players to date appear certain of berths.

These are Freddie Pickhard, captain and tackle of Alabama's Crimson Tide, whose fine playing against Stanford in the Tournament of Roses a year ago, caused him to be selected to head the new invading team, and Billy Spears, Vanderbilt's all-American backfield nominee.

For Charity.

The game is sponsored by five Los Angeles newspapers and the southern and Pacific coast conferences. The proceeds will go to charity. The southern conference in approving the contest, specified the Dixie players should be selected from seniors on the several teams.

In the south, Wallace Wade, Alabama; W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech, and Dan McGugin, Vanderbilt, all coaches, will make the selections, while the California team will be picked by "Pop Warner," Stanford; Howard Jones, University of Southern California, and William Spaulding, U. C. L. A.

Pickhard's selection to captain the team is definite, while Spears' sensational playing at quarterback has caused him to be regarded as a certainty.

Elmore, of Tennessee, is another quarterback receiving mention. For halfback honors, Brown, of Alabama, and Howe, of Washington & Lee; McDowall, of North Carolina State; Thomas, of Maryland; Barnes, of Virginia Military institute, and Mattox, of Virginia Poly, have shown much, while Menville, of Tulane; Godfrey, of Louisiana; Snyder, of Auburn, and Hartness, of Mississippi A. & M., also are strong players. Middlekauff, of Florida; Cohen, of Mississippi; Shuford, of North Carolina, and Linkous, of Maryland, are fullbacks who have given good accounts of themselves. Middlekauff is one of the hardest line plungers in the south.

Shivers, Nash Mentioned.

For ends, Georgia presents Nash and Shivers, regarded as two of the greatest players in their positions the south has ever developed. Sharp, of Vanderbilt; Patterson, of Auburn, and Butcher, of Tennessee, are a trio of centers who have played consistently well three years.

Barnhill, Tennessee guard, who won all-southern honors last season; Maier, of Tulane, and Smith, of Mississippi, are three likely guards. Cardwell, of Virginia; Brunson, of Mississippi A. & M., and Kimbrough, of Sewanee, are among the hardy tackles who will receive consideration.

Immediately after the southern conference season closes December 3, the selection of approximately 24 men will be announced. The squad will assemble in Tuscaloosa December 17, and leave immediately for the coast, working out at stopovers en route and taking final drills at Los Angeles.

HOOPER PLANS BOXING SHOW HERE TUESDAY

Billy Hooper has enjoyed so much success with his negro boxing shows that he has lined up another for Tuesday night in the auditorium annex, to which he cordially invites all white fans of the city. A special section to accommodate as many white people as will be present has been set aside, he says.

In his chief event he has Eddie Cox, 175-pounder of Atlanta, against Texas King for ten rounds and in his semi-final he will send Cowboy Kid into the ring against Kid Miller. Battling Kelly vs. Kid Macon and Tiger Brown vs. Black Panther in addition to a battle royal are the other interesting attractions on the program.

Hooper, an old-time middleweight fighter himself, was always a crowd-pleaser and he believes that the trouble with the fight game today is that the boys don't like to "put out," as he expresses it. Hence, he insists upon all boxers on his card traveling at their very best pace and the last show he staged was one of those slam-bang affairs.

V. M. I. ROUTED BY KENTUCKY 'CATS,' 25 TO 0

Charleston, W. Va., November 12.—(AP)—The University of Kentucky Wildcats tore through the Virginia Military institute defenses today to pile up a 25-to-0 victory in which Kentucky demonstrated superior offensive and defensive power.

Warner Ford, sophomore substitute who replaced Mohney at right half for the Kentuckians after the midgame rest, outshone the brightest stellar lights of both teams by constant gains through the line, off the tackles and around the ends. Although he scored but one of the Kentucky touchdowns, his feat of tearing off 248 yards in 35 plays of which only one failed to show a gain was the main factor of the big score. During the second half, the Cadets were weakened by the loss of three stars, but put up peppy opposition to the Wildcats. Three times in the second half the Virginians were within a few yards of the Kentucky goal only to have the Kentuckians take the ball on downs.

Kentucky's first score came early in the game after Mohney and Portwood had ripped through or around the line on a steady march from midfield. Ford started things in the third period by a 39-yard run back of the kickoff and a moment later Portwood broke through for a 22-yard run for a touchdown before the period ended.

Ford and Portwood alternated to take the ball down for another touchdown in the last period.

Picked Team For Bowl Game Is Announced

Alabama Paper Learns Names of Leading Stars to Make Trip.

Knoxville, Tenn., November 12.—(AP)—The Knoxville Journal will say tomorrow that it has learned the names of 21 players who have been nominated by Southern conference coaches to represent the south on the all-senior football team which will play a picked Pacific coast eleven Christmas day at Los Angeles. The Journal says its information is from a reliable source but one that it is not privileged to disclose.

The story says the following have been nominated by southern conference coaches for the coast trip:

Butcher, Tennessee, and Sharp, Vanderbilt, centers.

Bowdoin, Alabama; Smith, Georgia; Smith, Ole Miss; Barnhill, Tennessee, guards.

Hood Named.

Hood, Georgia Tech, and Pickhard, Alabama, tackles.

Shiver, Georgia; Nash, Georgia; Crowley, Georgia Tech; Browne, Tulane; Creson, Vanderbilt, ends.

Dodson, Tennessee; Brown, Alabama; Spears, Vanderbilt; Middlekauff, Florida; Cohen, Ole Miss; Barnes, V. M. I.; Godfrey, Louisiana States, and Menville, Tulane, backs.

The story adds that Coaches W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech; Wallace Wade, Alabama, and Dan McGugin, Vanderbilt, will meet at Birmingham, November 20, to officially pass upon the entire squad. These are the three coaches named by the Southern conference executive committee to train the team for the game.

Pitt Leader Makes Gains.

Gilby Welch, captain of the Pittsburgh university eleven, last year gained more ground against Carnegie Tech than the whole Notre Dame team made in the Irish game with the Plaid.

FREEZING WAVE TO HIT ATLANTA

The first cold wave of the season is rapidly sweeping toward Atlanta and is expected to drop the mercury to freezing point late Sunday night, according to Meteorologist C. F. von Herrmann, of the Weather Bureau.

Beginning at 2 degrees below zero in North Dakota, the frigid southbound winds are gradually becoming more moderate, but will register a minimum temperature of about 31 or 32 degrees when it reaches here, the forecaster said.

Georgia Backs Have Big Time With Tigers

Red and Black Warriors Continue to Conference Honors With Clean Slate.

But at the end it is doubtful if there would be much thrill. Such stories have become part of Georgia history. It is what the football fans are beginning to expect.

But there are other chapters that vary slightly and which carry at least a semblance of drama. Those were those hectic moments in the last dying gasps of the third quarter and the first part of the concluding stanza when the Georgia goal line was in danger, when at one time the oval rested but one foot from the chalk mark that no southern team has yet crossed. Those occasions, coming as they did when Georgia was leading 26 to 0, a score that was made in the first two periods, furnished enough excitement for the afternoon.

Clemson Nears Goal.

The first of these situations took place near the close of the third quarter. With a 26-to-0 count run up in the first half Coach Woodruff had yanked his first-stringers and sent in his reserves. The new recruits fought valiantly, but this Clemson bunch is no soft meat for first-stringers, much less reserves. So tough did the assignment get that Clemson, after starting a drive on Georgia's 36-yard line, had the oval resting on the Bulldog's eight-yard mark.

With Bud Eskew, the Tiger captain and star, tearing off repeated gains and with the score-hungry Clemson team drunk with ambition to do that which no other Dixie outfit had done this year, the situation from a Bulldog standpoint looked very bad.

The Georgia supporters were in an uproar in which the call of "Hold, Georgia" was mingled with the exultant chant from the Tiger section of "Touchdown Clemson." Just as that Gold and Purple wall was about to make another charge a stir was seen on the Georgia bench. Off came 11 blankets. On the field galloped 11 scarlet-shirted demons. The first team to a man was going in to save the Georgia goal line.

It was a dramatic moment as those Red and Black warriors jumped to position. It was glorious the way they halted and smeared the next few plays. It was heartbreaking from a Clemson angle to see the promised land suddenly fenced by eleven furiously charging demons in the shape of inspered Georgia players. Not a yard was gained, the drive was halted, the ball went over, and the frenzied shrieks of the Georgians played a joyous accompaniment to the sighs of the Tiger supporters.

Tigers Threaten Again.

But drama still lurked. Shortly after the fourth quarter and after the Bulldogs had taken the ball out from the shadow of the goal posts, Estes' punt was blocked and recovered by Clemson on the Bulldogs' five-yard mark. Like a mighty pile driver McMill on the first play got four yards through the line. Three more downs! Would the Georgians hold? Could that scarlet wall keep its sacred territory free from hostile feet? Again a mighty thrust and this time it was Pressley who made the drive. Two feet rewarded his efforts and the oval was on the six-inch line. Eskew, the same hard playing, brilliant Eskew, who had so gallantly led his force in their mad charge, was next threat. He hit the line and was hurled back by that surging red wall that seemed to rise like some angry monster to meet the attack. A half yard loss was recorded when the mighty Landzenhiser went through and nailed he Tiger captain. McMillan was the next weapon and again that wall of scarlet was like Georgia granite. The ball went over, a touchdown was prevented and the Bulldogs at once got out of danger.

Later in this quarter Shiver, from his own 14-yard line and from punt formation, skirted left end for a brilliant 30-yard run. From this point the Bulldogs started another drive that finished with McCrary going over for his third and Georgia's fifth touchdown.

The start of the game found Clemson appearing a particularly hard nut to crack. The Tiger line was holding well and the Georgia backs were having a hard time in making any headway at all. In fact, for the first five minutes of play not a first down was recorded.

Then, after the Georgians had received a Clemson punt on their 28-yard line, McTigue, on the first play, shot around left end in a mad canter that took him 71 yards and the first touchdown.

A few minutes later, with the ball in midfield, fourth down and about five yards to go, Estes, from punt formation, hurled a beautiful pass to Johnson, who scampered the remaining distance for a touchdown. It was a magnificent gallop and showed Johnson doing some neat broken-field running.

McCrary Goes In.

Shortly after the opening of the second period McCrary and Dudley went in. The arrival of this pair of backs saw the start of a drive from Georgia's 43-yard mark that resulted in McCrary taking a pass from Johnson for the final 6 yards. The drive that led to this pass found McCrary at his best. The great Georgia fullback was hitting the center of the line with a regularity and fury that swept all before it. He was aided in this by the fact that the Clemson center was shifting with the Georgia backfield and leaving the center of the line unprotected.

The Bulldogs' fourth touchdown came near the close of the second quarter. Ashil fumbled and Palmer recovered for Georgia on the Tigers' 35-yard line. Again the mighty thrusts of McCrary through the center of the line bore rich results and with Dudley contributing some neat work the ball was worked to Clemson's four-yard line. From this point McCrary bucked it over.

Clemson could do little sustained gaining. The Tiger backs led by Eskew, would tear off a few yards at a time. But as a rule they were generally stopped with little gain. The Georgia line was working very fast and outcharging the opposition on practically every play. Besides the two occasions already mentioned, the Tigers had one other opportunity to score. That came in the first quarter when Estes' punt was blocked and the ball recovered by Clemson on Georgia's 22-yard line. But only a three-yard gain could be made from this point.

Eskew Shines.

Captain Eskew was decidedly the outstanding player for the Tigers. Not alone did he contribute most of the offense, but his defensive play was of a very high order. Pressley, at center, was a tower of strength in the line during the time he was in action. Ashil also contributed some good defensive play.

The entire Clemson team showed a world of fight. Especially was this true in the last quarter when, hopelessly beaten, it played with a courage and determination that came very near holding in check Georgia's strongest lineup of the afternoon.

As mentioned before, McCrary, Dudley, Johnson and McTigue were the outstanding offensive weapons of the afternoon for the Bulldogs. Shiver and Nash played a great game at the ends as did Palmer and Martin, who relieved them. The work of the Georgia wingmen can best be appreciated when it is known that not a yard was gained around the Bulldog flanks during the afternoon.

Two particularly brilliant pieces of Georgia work came in the last minutes of the second quarter, although not resulting in touchdowns, the drive being halted by the whistle three yards from the goal line. These were a lateral pass, Estes to McCrary, that saw the later get 24 yards around right end and was followed by another lateral, Dudley to McCrary, that enabled the fleet Herdis to gallop 23 yards around the left side of the line.

When mentioning stars, it might not be amiss to speak of the work of Jacobson and Boland. Both played a great game, the latter exerting himself so much that he lost six pounds during the engagement.

Figures show that Georgia made 17 first downs to four for Clemson. Georgia gained 186 yards through the line to 55 for Clemson. Georgia gained 207 yards at the ends for a zero gain for the Tigers. The Bulldogs tried four passes completing two for 51 and six yards respectively. The Tigers attempted 11 passes completing four for seven, twenty, four and twenty-one yards respectively and having one intercepted. Georgia was penalized 30 yards to five for Clemson.

SANDLOT GAMES

O'Keefe Panthers sent the Altar boys down to defeat Saturday morning 7 and 0 in a hard fought contest. After the first quarter neither team could push across a counter. Billy Glenn crossed the Altar boys' goal line for the only touchdown after the Panthers had pulled a series of end runs and line plunges. Gillebeau kicked the extra point.

Score by quarters:

Panthers	7	0	0	0	—7
Altar boys	0	0	0	0	—0

Peachtree Road Tigers succeeded in winning over the Maddox Park Juniors after a hard struggle, 14 to 7. The victors scored a touchdown in each of the initial periods, but were halted thereafter by the splendid defense of the losers. Maddox Park pulled a rally in the last period that brought its only counter.

IS HEENEY ANOTHER FITZSIMMONS?

Tom Heeney Fights Sharkey Thursday

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Is Tom Heeney, the sensational heavy from "Down Under," destined to be another champion like his compatriot, Old Bob Fitzsimmons?

Heeney developed in New Zealand in much the same way that Bob Fitzsimmons, still regarded as the greatest fighter of the past century, did years ago. There are many points of similarity between Heeney and Fitzsimmons. Both were of Irish parentage. Both were workers at the forge, Fitzsimmons as a horseshoer and Heeney as a blacksmith. These workers in iron usually pack a punch. Both Fitzsimmons and Heeney were noted football players. Both began boxing as amateurs and quickly developed into professionals. Heeney is a heavier man by 40 pounds than Bob was when he won the heavyweight championship and knocked out most of the best heavyweights in America, for Tom weighs 195 stripped. Perhaps he's no bigger in the shoulders. Jim Jeffries says that he once picked up Lanky Bob's coat while training with Fitz at Harbin Springs, put it on and didn't notice the difference. From the waist up Bob was a real heavyweight.

Heeney has the record of a fighting man. He played cricket and football at school and was offered a berth on the "All Blacks," the leading football team of Australia. That means that he was something of a star.

Liked Boxing.

But he liked boxing better than football. While working as a blacksmith he began boxing with his brother, Jack, who was amateur welterweight champion of New Zealand. After boxing a while as an amateur Heeney applied for a permit to fight professionally. In New Zealand professional boxing was handled by a committee of well-known business men of which Ray Nolan, prosecuting attorney of Wellington, New Zealand, was chairman.

Just as he was starting as a professional boxer the war came along and Heeney enlisted. He was then 19 years old. He is now 28—just about the age of Fitzsimmons when Fitz began knocking them all out.

Started After the War.

After the war a personal friend of Heeney's, Mick Stewart, official referee in New Zealand, cabled Heeney to come to England. On arriving, Heeney began fighting under the management of John Mortimer and fought several English heavyweights with a fair average of success, winning three of four fights. Phil Scott outpointed him in a 20-round bout. Then he went to South Africa, where he twice defeated Johnny Squires, winning the heavyweight championship of South Africa. In the second contest Heeney knocked Squires out. This wasn't the old-time Australian champion, Bill Squires, who decorated the canvas in rings all over the world a few years ago.

On returning to England Heeney visited Dublin and took a 20-round decision over Bartley Madden, which gave him the right to call himself champion of Ireland. This was a proud title in the days of Peter Maher and Tom Sharkey, but has rather fallen off in class since the good old days when Ireland furnished most of the world's best fighting heavyweights. However, Heeney, with Irish parents, hopes to put Ireland back on the fighting map.

Tom chased Paolino all over Europe without being able to persuade the cagy Descamps to give him a match with the Woodchopper. Then he left for America.

Develops Steadily.

Since arriving in this country Heeney has developed steadily. Charlie Harvey, his manager, has a fad of picking up English and Irish and Australian fighters, and to date he never had a "sour one." Harvey coached Heeney in the latest tricks of the American ring. Tom stopped Charlie Anderson in nine rounds in Madison Square Garden to introduce himself to this country. He boxed Paolino 10 rounds and lost the decision. He boxed Paolino again at Madison Square Garden 15 rounds to a draw. The decision was quite freely criticized and it was said that Paolino was being "built up" as a colorful challenger and was given a bit the best of it in being allowed a draw, when Heeney had outpunched him for 15 rounds and shown superiority in everything but punch-taking ability. As a shock-absorber the Spaniard is in a class by himself.

In later fights here Heeney won from Bud Gorman on a foul, three rounds, and knocked out Jim Maloney in the first minute of the first round. His real start in this country came with the Maloney knockout. There has been quite a bit of rivalry among our blue-ribbon heavies in this matter of knocking Maloney out. When the Boston Strong Boy, second, was being built up by Tex Richard as a challenger for Gene Tunney he was flattened in five rounds by Jack Sharkey. Then George Godfrey came along and rolled Maloney out in less than half the time. But Heeney turned the trick in 20 seconds, making all other knockers-out of Maloney look like pikers. Heeney gave the public a laugh and hopped right into quite a bit of popularity. A couple of weeks ago Tom beat Johnny Risko, that tough trial horse of the heavyweight division, who defeated Paul Berlenbach and has made several of them, including our champion, Gene Tunney, look like a lot of hams on various occasions.

Heeney will get his real tryout November 18, at the Garden when he fights Jack Sharkey. As Sharkey gave Dempsey a tough time for several rounds and is still considered very much in the competition for championship honors, this fight means a lot to the New Zealander. If he beats Sharkey, he may become the next challenger for the title if Dempsey drops out.

Charlie Harvey says that he thinks Heeney the best fighter from the other side of the earth in a long time, and classes him with Dan Creedon, Jim Hall and all the others with a single exception. He doesn't claim that Tom is another Bob Fitzsimmons. He knows that if Heeney were a Fitzsimmons the heavyweight championship would be easy picking. It surely would be easy for Fitzsimmons in these days. Nobody could ever run fast enough to get away from Old Bob. But Harvey has hopes that Heeney will pick up a knockout punch, which is apparently all he needs. Before coming to this country Heeney had 24 fights, won 8 with knockouts, 12 on decisions, lost one decision, had two draws and lost one on a foul. That might be considered a fair knockout average—but not quite good enough to cause Heeney's name to be linked with those of Fitzsimmons and Dempsey.

Caldwell Sees Yale Win 14-6 Over Tigers

Late Pass of 47 Yards Gives Eli Touchdown.

BY FRANK GETTY.
(United News Sports Editor.)

Yale Bowl, New Haven, Conn., November 12.—Out of the shadows of impending defeat, Yale snatched a dramatic football victory over Princeton today.

The final score was 14 to 6, but the drama of the combat never can be conveyed by the bald figures.

One moment, as the game drew to a close, the Yale stands were silent and downcast. The blue team was trailing by the margin of a touchdown, and no touchdown ever loomed as large and menacingly as that which Bill Roper's Tigers held over Yale this afternoon.

The next instant, Johnny Hoben, Eli quarterback, had flung what seemed like one last, desperate forward pass to Stew Scott, a fleet Yale end, who showed up from nowhere to grab the ball out of the twilight.

In fewer seconds than it takes to tell about, Scott had sprinted 30 yards for a Yale touchdown, sweeping over the last white line on a blast of frantic, almost incredulous Yale cheers.

While pandemonium replaced the gloom of despair in the Blue cheering sections, and some 80,000 spectators who crowded the Yale bowl thrilled to the drama of the unexpected, Duncan Cox, Bulldog fullback, converted the touchdown with a neatly executed placement kick, and victory was Yale's.

It mattered not that Eddie Wittmer, who had starred for the rampagious Tiger team all afternoon, was to fumble a moment later and pave the way for a second and totally unnecessary Eli touchdown.

What mattered to the thousands who witnessed this fifty-first football meeting of the Bulldog and the Tiger was that out of apparent defeat had come that altogether amazing victory.

Up until the moment when Hoben hurled that fateful pass, Yale had been outclassed and outplayed through three periods of hard fought football.

A consistent Princeton march of 75 yards in the first quarter and the first few minutes of the second had ended with Wittmer prone across the last white line with the ball hugged to his black jersey.

Dwight Fishwick, Yale end, got through to block Baruch's attempted dropkick, and held the Tiger total to six.

From then on, until the middle of the last period, Yale was fought to a standstill and it seemed as though the Bulldogs never would make up those six points, which loomed larger and larger as the afternoon waned.

Twice, inside the Princeton five-yard line, Yale backs hit a stone wall and the Tiger took the ball on downs.

The very play on which Yale's first touchdown was achieved came on a fourth down, when the stalwart Princeton forward line had held the charging blue backs without gain.

Yale had been penalized 20 yards for holding and delay, and it seemed as though the Bulldog, in midfield, had no choice but to kick. But Johnny Hoben decided differently, and thereby joins the group of Eli football heroes.

Twice the Yale team became confused as to the play Hoben wanted to try, and once the umpire put them back five yards for getting the signals muddled and delaying too long in the huddle.

And then Johnny dropped back and hurled the pass which no Yale men who saw it ever can forget. Stew Scott, sprinting desperately from his position at left end, gained a vantage point where none of the outwitted Princeton backs could reach him.

Hoben's pass plunked into his arms, and Scott was off, dodging and twisting towards the Tiger goal. He had to sidestep Baruch and Wittmer to get there, but so unexpected was the play that neither of these able Tigers could intercept him.

Florida Puts Up Hard Fight To Down Tide

Wade Eleven Given Second Setback of Season When 'Gators Win Out.

Montgomery, Ala., November 12.—(AP)—The University of Florida outplayed and outgeneraled Alabama here today and defeated the Crimson Tide, 13 to 6.

It was the first time a Florida team has triumphed over Coach Wade's machine since 1922, when the Alligator spoiled championship plans of the Crimson by setting Alabama back in its only defeat of the year.

Florida started the scoring early in the second period when Crabtree took a punt on his own 10-yard line and ran the length of the field for a touchdown. Bishop kicked goal.

Runs 50 Yards To Score.

Late in the last period Smith intercepted a Florida pass and raced 50 yards for Alabama's only touchdown. The Crimson's chance to tie was lost when Bowdoin failed to kick goal.

In the final minutes of play a succession of passes put the ball on Alabama's one-foot line and Brumbaugh went over for the final marker. Bishop failed to kick goal.

The game was marked by the stellar work of Brumbaugh at left half for Florida and by the line plunging of Holm, Crimson fullback.

Phillies' New Manager Has Varied Experience

Bert Shotton, newly-appointed manager of the Phillies, comes back to the majors with varied experience as both player and manager.

Preceding his days at Syracuse, where he managed that International league club for two years, is a long career as a big league player and coach.

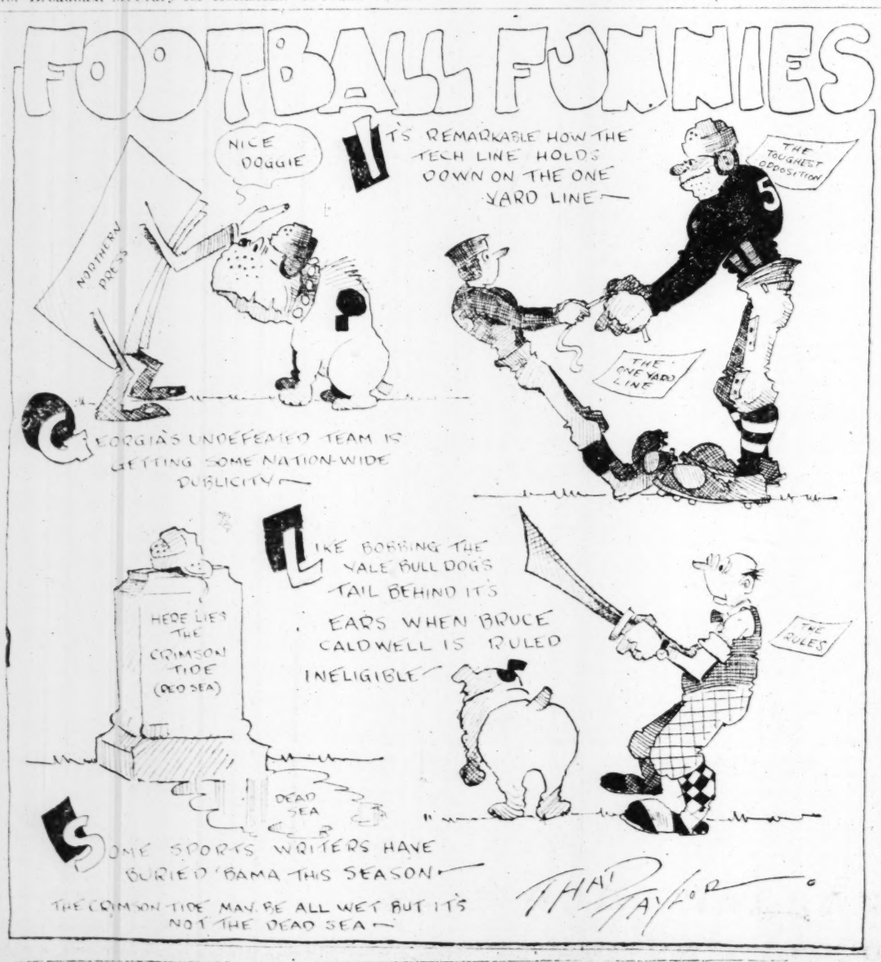

In 1909 he began his big league career in the outfield with the St. Louis Browns, coming from the old O. and P. league. Though farmed out in 1910, he came back as a regular outfielder in 1911 and demonstrated his fly-chasing abilities and rabbit-like speed on the bases until 1918 when he went to Washington.

In 1919 he moved to the Cardinals and remained there until the Hornsby regime. Shotton's playing slipped after a couple of years with the Cardinals, but Branch Rickey saw in him a great aid and made him his assistant manager. He is credited with developing such men as Thevenow, Holm and Reinhart.

When Hornsby became manager, Shotton took over the reins of the Syracuse club and this season put up a great battle with the pennant-winning Buffalo team.

Shotton's home is in Amherst, Ohio, and in succeeding Stuffy McInnis, makes the ninth manager the Phillies have had since 1914. Only Pat Moran and Art Fletcher were able to stay for a reasonable length of time, each serving four years.

FIND THE TWO AIRPLANES THAT ARE EXACTLY ALIKE

No, they are not all alike! Two and only two are identical and are the TWO AIRPLANES you are asked to find. Can you? To be sure, the 18 Airplanes all look alike, but look closer. How about their propellers? Some are black and some white. There are other differences, too. Only TWO airplanes are exact duplicates. Can you find them?

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

offers an opportunity at this tremendous fortune to every man, woman and child—Join in the fascinating airplane Treasure Hunt—

Share In $7,500.00 Cash Prizes

Find the TWO airplanes that are exact duplicates. At first glance they all look alike; but upon closer examination you will see that almost every one differs in some way from all the others. The difference may be in the stripes on the tail, while some have white radiators and others black. How about their propellers? They aren't all alike, are they? And the stars on the wings are arranged in different ways, too—a black with a white, two whites, or two black ones, and so on.

Make sure you have found the TWO airplanes that are exact duplicates, then send in your answer. Someone who finds the right airplanes is going to win a lot of money. Make that "someone" be YOU!

The contest closes December 1st, and all prizes will be awarded in time to reach the winners by Christmas day. There will be 50 winners and the First Prize, the golden opportunity, is $3,000.00 plus $500.00, making a grand total of $3,500.00—IF YOU ACT QUICKLY.

If there is a tie for any prize, the full amount of the prize will be paid to each person so tied.

500 POINTS wins First Prize. We will give you 450 points for finding the TWO airplanes that are exactly alike. Promptly upon receipt of your answer, we will send you particulars of a magic word game, in which, if successful, you earn the final 50 points to win a $3,500.00 Cash Prize or one of the 49 other Cash Prizes.

Easy Rules

Any man, woman, boy or girl living in Georgia or adjoining states, who is not an employee of the Atlanta Constitution or a member of an employee's family, may submit an answer.

When you have made your selection of the TWO airplanes that are exactly alike send in your answer. Study the pictures—Remember there are only two airplane pictures that are duplicates.

When you have found them, write the numbers in the coupon opposite, fill in your name and complete address and mail at once to the Puzzle Manager, The Atlanta Constitution. Promptness will mean a lot to you in this puzzle game.

If there is a tie for any prize, the full amount of the prize will be paid to each person so tied.

The whole family may cooperate in this competition, but only one prize will be awarded to any one household; nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group outside the family, where two or more have been working together.

There will be three independent judges having no connection with The Constitution, who will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes in this competition. Participants by sending in their answer agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.

Unequaled Advantages Presented in the Newly Remodeled

THROWER BUILDING

The new Thrower building which by its location and recent remodeling has been recognized as one of the most modern and accessible buildings in Atlanta, presents distinct advantages in rental service. No other building offers such marked conveniences for so little cost. And even after all remodeling, rearranging and installation of a new elevator to facilitate transportation, the rental has been reduced to nearly half the former price. This alone, notwithstanding every other element that the business or professional man desires when locating offices, is a decided point in favor of the Thrower building.

The location on North Forsyth street is ideal from every standpoint, for it is in the very heart of downtown business activity and in direct commutation of trolley service and traffic to all points—north, south, east and west. It is but a 2 minutes' walk from Five Points and within easy distance of all public buildings, shopping and centrally located between the north and south business districts.

Every detail pertaining to service and proper management has been carefully fulfilled. Mr. R. L. Lyon, well known Atlanta custodian, has been appointed superintendent of the building. Not only are complaints quickly handled, but suggestions for the convenience of tenants are welcomed cordially. Daily inspection of each office is personally conducted by Mrs. M. L. Davis, whose efforts have won the favor of every occupant.

The management of the building has also provided a storage garage in the basement which offers a most convenient, time-saving and economical service to motorist-tenants. $6.00 per month.

From every angle—you, Mr. Seeker of Office Space, can find no more distinct advantages for so little cost as are available in the New Thrower Building. Only a limited number of single offices and suites are open, but the opportunity is open for a few who act NOW!

ALUMNI SECRETARY TO LEAVE MERCER

BY GEORGE CLARK, JR.

Macon, Ga., November 12.—Announcement was made here tonight that J. K. Williams, executive secretary of the alumni association of Mercer university, had resigned and will leave Macon on December 1 to accept the presidency of the Mountain View institute, North Wilkesboro, N. C., a Baptist secondary school of approximately 150 students.

Mr. Williams has served in the capacity of Mercer alumni secretary for the past four and one-half years. He graduated from Mercer in 1922 and spent his first year teaching in Mountain Park, N. C. At the end of the year he returned to Macon, where he has lived since.

A secretary will be named at the next meeting of the alumni next June, it has been announced.

The Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity has been declared the winner of the attendance trophy offered by the Mercer Pan-Hellenic council, according to figures released by the council here this week.

The cup is offered each year to the fraternity which returns the largest per cent of its members. The Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity won second place with the Alpha Tau Omegas winning third.

The Mercer Pan-Hellenic council has decided to award a scholarship cup at the end of the year to the fraternity whose members have maintained the highest scholastic average.

The first issue of the Commerce Bulletin of the Mercer university school of commerce will be off the press by November 25, according to Dr. C. B. Wray, dean of the school of commerce.

Jones Brown, Lavonia, has been chosen editor-in-chief and each class in the commerce school is represented on the staff by an assistant editor. The following represent the different classes: E. M. Turlington, Macon, senior class; Alton Bartlett, Molena, junior class; Telford Bowen, Americus, sophomore class; Matthew Myers, Albany, freshman class. Dean C. B. Wray and Professor C. W. Williams are the faculty advisers.

A ten-day tour for the Mercer University Glee club throughout south Georgia and Florida has been announced by Logan Bloodworth, vice president and business manager of the club. The cities in Florida to be visited are Tallahassee, Gainesville, St. Augustine and Jacksonville. The club of 1927 will be composed of 40 members, including a chorus of 28 men, a 10-piece orchestra, three end men and the director, Dr. B. P. Richardson.

The end men for this season have been announced as Riley McCoy, Rome; Hardman Jones, Atlanta, and Dick Wiggins, Wadley.

SCION OF POLISH WARRIOR MONARCH DIES IN AMERICA

Los Angeles, November 12.—(AP)—Colonel John Sobieski, descendant of Poland's warrior king, John II, who in the seventh century rescued Europe from a Turkish conqueror, died here yesterday at the home of his daughter. He was 85 years old.

He was one of the most romantic figures of modern times—an exile with his widowed mother at the age of 6, a stowaway to the United States at 12, an Indian fighter at 16, a soldier of the Union army when 22, and a colonel in the Mexican army at 26.

For many years of his later life the aged Polish nobleman attracted nation-wide attention through his lectures for women's suffrage and national prohibition.

"Roving Solicitors" Of Red Cross Barred In U. S. Navy Yard

New York, November 12.—(AP)—The American Red Cross society announced today that Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett had provided quarters in the Brooklyn navy yard for representatives of the society during the annual Red Cross roll call, which started yesterday.

Three weeks ago Admiral Plunkett refused to permit the society to solicit memberships in the navy yard, asserting that solicitations by Red Cross agents circulating among navy yard workmen would be "an imposition" on the 3,000 low-paid civilian workers there.

The new order, Red Cross officials said, was issued after conferences between Admiral Plunkett and leaders of the society, at which it was agreed that solicitations would be made from a fixed headquarters and that no "roving solicitors" would be permitted to operate in the navy yard. The same procedure has been followed in the navy department at Washington and in pricipal navy posts elsewhere in previous years.

KAISER'S SISTER, 61, PLANS MARRIAGE TO RUSSIAN YOUTH

Bonn, Germany, November 12.—(United News.)—Six-one-year-old Princess Victoria of Schaumberg-Lippe will be the blushing bride of her 20-some-year-old Russian fiance, Alexander Zoubkoff on either November 19 or November 21, it was announced today.

Completely happy, the elderly sister of the former kaiser has completed all her plans.

The marriage will occur at the city hall. Church authorities refused a permit for it to occur in a church. They held that such a union, because of the disparity in ages between bride and bridegroom, would be immoral.

FUNERAL RITES FOR CRASH VICTIM, A. D. POLK, TODAY

Final rites for A. D. Polk, 25, of 478 Luckie street, who met instant death Wednesday in a street car-automobile crash on Hollywood road, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the chapel of Blanchard Brothers, funeral directors, at 1083 Peachtree street.

Young Polk occupied the automobile with Dr. John F. Beck, 71, who died at a local hospital shortly after the accident.

Rev. W. M. Albert will officiate and interment will be in Magnolia cemetery.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Polk; three sisters, Mrs. J. J. Bailes, and Miss Goldie Polk, both of Atlanta, and Mrs. H. P. Mott, of Charlotte, and a brother, J. J. Polk, of Needles, Cal.

CARDINAL LUALDI DIES IN PALERMO

Palermo, Italy, November 12.—(United News.)—Cardinal Alessandro Lualdi, archbishop of Palermo, died today. He was born in 1858 and was consecrated in 1907.

Cardinal Lualdi was a close friend of the pope, with whom he was a seminary classmate.

RITES AT BAINBRIDGE FOR MRS. A. PYLE

WHO'S WHO IN THE MORRIS ORGANIZATION

Presenting herewith the likeness of Franklin Paul Morris, of the firm of F. P. and Geo. J. Morris, who by the way, is using this method of introducing this column as a regular feature of their advertising. Each week this space will be used for pictures of sales contest winners.

Mr. Morris, more intimately known to his friends as Paul, first saw the light of day in the thriving community known as Austell, Ga. He has lived in Atlanta for the past 28 years, and is a thorough Atlantan.

Paul is in direct charge of the building activities of the firm and has made an enviable record in this line of busness, having built and completed more than 60 homes during the past twelve months.

Oh, yes, he has one hobby and that is work.

ATLANTA TITLE & TRUST COMPANY
ESTABLISHED 1897
15 EAST ALABAMA STREET
ATLANTA, GA.
November 10th, 1927.

Messrs. F. P. and Geo. J. Morris,
104 North Pryor St.
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:

It gives me great pleasure to write you and state how pleasant, profitable and satisfactory our business relations were in reference to your handling our thirty-five lots on Stokes Avenue on which we gave you exclusive sale.

We expected you to be several months in selling these lots, but you sold the entire number of thirty-five in less than forty days, which is quite a record and shows what a wonderful organization you have, and you should compliment your efficient salesmen for their wonderful efforts, etc.

With best regards, I am,

Yours very truly,

President.

WEST END PARK COMPANY.

"If It's Worth the Money--We Can Sell It"

F. P. and Geo. J. Morris have fulfilled the demands of a distinguished clientele and can point to hundreds of satisfied and delighted customers. The organization was founded upon service and integrity and the growth of each department bespeaks the public's faith in our efforts.

The present organization of 15 salesmen is ever at your command with courteous, prompt and efficient service, as likewise is our experienced and comprehensive departments for loans, insurance and building.

Each of these departments offers every facility, and evidence of our ability to function in a most workmanlike manner will be found in the letter reproduced at the left. What other company can show you such marked results? And this is but one of the many testimonials that have come in from every section.

If you are contemplating the sale of your property, or anxious to build, or find a safe, satisfactory means of financing---you can find no more conscientious, experienced, or capable means of handling your transaction than through this organization.

We will gladly consult with you on any realty problem without cost or obligation. You will find our advice worth real dollars and cents.

DRUID HILLS HOME

THIS house has nine rooms in all; it has four bedrooms and two baths and is suitable for a full size family where there are grown people needing separate accommodations. It has the advantage of having all rooms on one floor, but the bedrooms are ten to twelve feet off the ground, furnishing that feeling of protection which nearly everyone likes. This is a modern house in every detail, with fine plumbing, heating equipment, laundry, servants' rooms, garage, driveway, fenced off with lawn and shrubbery. We believe this house would appeal to some one who does not wish to go through the worry of house building. The price would appeal to the judicious buyer who analyzes values.

FOR THE INVESTOR

Spring Street Building

IN an active portion of this noted thoroughfare, a good two-story brick building. The entire property priced at land value alone. Something worth while. A fair income with rapidly rising value.

Brick and Concrete Building

CONTAINS 17,000 square feet; ask a contractor what this construction costs, allowing only $2.00 a foot, making $34,000 for the building alone. Central location; two street fronts, a place for someone to use as a business location. Price $25,000; long terms.

Ponce de Leon Ave. Lot

ONE of the best of six lot values; fronts 100 feet with a depth of 300 feet; a beautiful lot, well shaded, in a neighborhood of fine homes. Price, $4,200.

Roswell Road Tract

OPPOSITE the dense Couch place; a section coming in for fine suburbs homes; adjoins the Latimer tract; fronts 420 feet, immense depth; has spring on the property. Price $25 a front foot.

Corner Pays 12%

ON the north side, junction of two thoroughfares; lot 120 feet square; three buildings; rental income $2,800 a year; 12% gross return now, but suited for business purposes; property well financed, with long term loans. Little cash required. $22,500.

Large Corner Lot

A FAVORITE with money makers; an immense corner lot, 300 feet street frontage; a big, fine home occupies portion of property; suitable for subdivision; by judicious handling can be retailed for about $40,000. We have marked it down to attract a cash buyer. $26,000.

High Net Income

A TWO-STORY brick building; choice location on main street; leased for two years; now bringing $3,000 a year; rate soon goes to $3,600 a year. Can make price to yield high net income, close to 10%.

Tardy Police Witnesses Face Suspension Term

Following Judge C. H. Howard's action Friday in fining several tardy witnesses and his verbal attack on policemen who failed to answer subpoenas, Police Chief James L. Beavers announced that any member of his department who was subpoenaed and ignored the summons would be suspended.

This decision on the part of Chief Beavers came at the conclusion of a conference Saturday morning with Judge Howard, at which the judge told the official that the courts were not to be "played with" and that several members of the police department on numerous occasions refrained from answering the summons.

"The administration of justice has been delayed long enough in our courts by the stardiness of delinquent witnesses," Judge Howard declared.

After the conference, judges of superior court directed Sheriff James L. Lowry that future service of summons upon members of the Atlanta police department should be made upon the person of the witness, or in case the latter cannot be found, upon the chief or assistant officer, who shall give a receipt for the summons, which becomes an office record.

Azores Feature Atlantan's Trans-Atlantic Plane Route

O sr. William P. M[illegible] assist[illegible] «Comm[illegible]

Hearline in the "Diario del Azore," Spanish newspaper of Ponta Delgada, endorsing the idea of a South Atlantic air route to Europe, first suggested by Henderson Hallman, of Atlanta.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Despite the fact that Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlin, Elder and other trans-Atlantic or near trans-Atlantic fliers of 1927 all hopped off for their epocial adventures from Roosevelt field; despite the fact that the worst enemy historic flight-makers had to contend with was the weather of the Northern Atlantic wastes, recent developments in trans-ocean aviation all point to the South Atlantic as the aerial highway of the future between Europe and the Americas.

Only Wednesday the finance committee of the French chamber of deputies voted 120,000,000 francs subsidy to foster regular air mail service between France and South America by way of the warm regions of the South Atlantic, with stops at the Azores and Bermudas.

And this week a Spanish newspaper from Ponta Delgada, principal city of the Azores, reached Atlanta containing a featured story indorsing the South Atlantic air route to Europe first advocated by Henderson Hallman, of Atlanta, president of the Georgia state chapter of the National Aeronautical association.

Mr. Hallman, who has taken a leading part of aviation progress in the southeast, was the first man to publicly draw attention to the evident error of inviting disaster in the ice-laden air of the north when the southern route, hopping off from any convenient point on the South Atlantic coast and making stops at the Bermudas and the Azores, was the only logical air route to Europe.

No Danger of Winter.

No danger, by this passage, of sleet and ice weighting the wings of the speeding plane until the load became so heavy she was, perforce, driven down to the waters. No danger of fogs blinding the aviator until he could tell only by his instruments whether he was flying north, south, east or west, upside down or on an even keel.

Mr. Hallman started talking about his idea—the Atlanta-Bermuda-Azores air road to Europe. Newspapers in America immediately saw the logic of the proposal and in news columns and on editorial pages spread the suggestion.

Los Angeles picked up the suggestion from a story in The Constitution. The California city wanted to join in the idea, so suggested that the route be made a continuous one from the City of Angels across the southwest and southeastern states by Atlanta and on over the South Atlantic.

It began to look more probable that the plan would be accepted. In fact air experts declared that, eventually, it must be accepted. The advantages over the northern route are too self-evident to be ignored.

Translated Entire Story.

And now comes the daily newspaper at Ponta Delgada, thinking the suggestion so valuable that they translated the entire story as sent them from Atlanta into Spanish and featured it in their pages. The copy of the Diario del Azore, in which the article appears, it is as prominently displayed as the story of the arrival of Ruth Elder, who only the day previously had landed there.

It was a copy of "The Week," published by the utilities information committee of Georgia, of which Willard Cope is executive secretary, that drew the attention of Ponta Delgada to the Hallman suggestion.

Fernando d'Alcandara, prominent business man of Ponta Delgada, writes Mr. Hallman pointing out the advantages of that city as a stopping point for the ocean planes of the future. He tells of equipment already installed there, of the most powerful radio station in the Azores and the best harbor, the best equipped weather bureau and the only port of call for liners between the Mediterranean and America.

"Ponta Delgada will certainly not spare any efforts to do all that is necessary in the way of facilities to support the great aerial route—America-Bermudas - Azores - Europe," he writes.

In a few years great fleets of trans-Atlantic planes, carrying hundreds of passengers and making the trip in less than 36 hours, are going to stream across the skies from the New World to the Old. When they do, it will be by way of the South Atlantic—probably via Atlanta—and Atlantans today will then tell of the time when the project was first launched, when it spread and gripped the imaginations of man and appealed to their common sense. This issue of the Ponta Delgada daily paper, with the name mispelled, of course—of "Henderson Haliman" in its headlines, will be a historic link between Atlanta and her friend across the seas, the sunny isles of the Azores.

CITY SALESMEN MEET SATURDAY

One of the largest gatherings of city salesmen in many years was held in Taft hall Saturday by the City Salesmen's association of Atlanta in conjunction with the food show, which the city salesmen are helping to stage.

Spirited talks by various members of the organization enlivened the meeting, which was followed by a buffet luncheon served by the demonstrators just prior to the regular opening hour of the food show.

"The City Salesmen's Association of Yesterday" was the topic of an address by J. A. Massey, followed by addresses on the organization of today and of the future, made by J. C. Harrison and W. W. Moore, respectively.

Ben H. Messer spoke on "Fellowship" and R. V. Bergen talked on the need for closer affiliation with similar organizations in the commercial world of Atlanta.

Many of Atlanta's oldest city salesmen were present and participated in the meeting.

Fifteen new members were admitted into the organization and were introduced to the membership.

Reports were heard from several of the committee chairmen which showed the association to be in a thriving condition and stronger in numbers than ever before in its history of 31 years.

W. W. Moore, president of the association, presided at the meeting and all officers were present.

ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED BRITISH MINERS MARCH

Swindon, England, November 12.—(AP)—A. J. Cook, himself, secretary of the miners' federation and organizer of the valiant band of unemployed, known as "Coxey's army," led the marchers tonight into this little old town which King Charles I. helped to get on its feet by granting it the right to hold a great fair. Mrs. Cook also was in the ranks, and she trampled as bravely as any of them.

The army left Chippenham this morning for Swindon, and the Cooks joined the procession at Wootton Bassett, where the men left the train after a ten-mile ride, which made it possible for the hikers to reach Swindon by nightfall.

The men slept tonight in buildings adjoining the municipal swimming pool. They will remain here for two nights, and Mr. and Mrs. Cook will remain over Sunday, but the miners' secretary must hurry back to London by the next day. He will therefore march no more.

MRS. RUTH SNYDER IS NOW ENJOYING RADIO PROGRAMS

Ossining, N. Y., November 12.—(United News.)—After waiting many months for it, Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder today was permitted to have a radio set in her cell at the Sing Sing death house, where she is awaiting execution for the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder.

Henry Judd Gray, her one-time lover, who is in the men's death house awaiting the same fate as Mrs. Snyder, has enjoyed the use of a radio every night until 9:45 o'clock. Mrs. Snyder repeatedly asked for the same privilege.

Current events, she said, interest her most on the radio programs.

SALARY INCREASES GIVEN SIGNALMEN OF L. & N. RAILROAD

Louisville, November 12.—(AP)—Salary increases ranging from $10 to $15 a month were granted to Louisville and Nashville signalmen by a board of arbitration today. Approximately 325 employees of the company are benefited. The move follows unsuccessful efforts on the part of the railroad and representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway Signalmen of America to agree in a wage controversy, and the resulting formation of the board. A hearing of argument from both sides wah held here October 3 to 8.

Dobson Succeeds Jameson As Boy Scout Executive

W. A. Dobson, for six years connected with the scouting profession in Georgia, has been appointed as acting scout executive of the Atlanta council to succeed Chief Scout Executive A. A. Jameson, whose resignation becomes effective on January 1 next, it was announced Saturday through local headquarters.

This action followed a meeting Wednesday of the board of directors of the Atlanta council, at which Mr. Jameson's retirement was officially sanctioned. A resolution was drawn expressing regret at his action, and the new appointment officially confirmed.

For the past 19 months Mr. Dobson has been field executive of the Atlanta council. Prior to taking up professional scouting, Mr. Dobston was a voluntary leader for more than a year.

Born In Decatur.

Mr. Dobson, whose present residence is 1125 Briarcliff place, previously served as a scoutmaster at Lindale, in Bartow county, and later as an executive with posts at Rome and LaGrange.

The new executive here was born and spent his early boyhood at Decatur. Following his graduation from the Berry school, at Rome, Mr. Dobson served as an ensign in the navy during the world war.

As a field executive he worked primarily with volunteer leaders, and for the past six years has maintained a wide contact with scoutmasters throughout Georgia. Mr. Dobson is credited with outstanding work in training and graduating 108 scout leaders from a standard course of instructions approved by the national council, Boy Scouts of America.

In Charge at Camp.

Mr. Dobson also specialized in camp activities and is one of the few executives in the south who has a regular commission as camp director. He has been in charge of six Boy Scout council camps, among which was the first Atlanta council camp, held last summer at the Bert Adams scout reservation, near Vinings, and attended by 953 boys.

The scout division which Mr. Dobson will direct, included under management of the Atlanta council, is composed of 92 troops of Atlanta, Marietta, Decatur, East Point, College Park, Hapeville, Clarkston, Stone Mountain, Buckhead and Bolton. Membership of the Atlanta troops alone is over 900 boys.

Hal H. Hentz is chairman of the local board of directors, membership of which includes Willis A. Sutton, Thomas H. Daniel, Eugene Harrington and T. G. Woolford.

Tribute to Mr. Jameson was paid in the resolution indorsed by the board as follows:

Tribute To Jameson.

"To live a clean, upright and manly life is in itself a noble achievement; but to successfully set an example of these virtues for thousands of others is a master stroke of genius. To be both exacting and fair in bringing out the best in every boy, and yet remain sympathetic with the faults of each—these are virtues that make for character.

"These have been the qualities of A. A. Jameson, whose resignation the board of directors accepts with profound regret, while at the same time expressing the appreciation of the board for the 17 years of faithful service which Mr. Jameson has rendered. They desire to make a public expression of the remarkable service which Mr. Jameson has given the Atlanta council, the board of directors, the Scout organization and the city as a whole.

"Just how much of integrity, uprightness and citizenship he has woven into the fiber of the young manhood of Atlanta through his connection with the Y. M. C. A. and the Boy Scout movement may never be determined, but we attribute much of the sterling character exhibited by the city's youth directly to Mr. Jameson's influence. We wish him success in his new field of work, and ask his cooperation and assistance in our own."

BUICK DISPLAY OPENED SATURDAY

Formally introducing the new Buick de luxe models, Buick dealers in Atlanta and outlying communities Saturday opened autumn displays of the magnificent new cars, which will remain open to November 19.

The chief showings here were held at D. C. Black's, 339 Peachtree street; the Decatur Buick company's showrooms in Decatur, and the Buick factory branch at 512 Spring street. Hundreds of interested persons flocked to the exhibits during the day and expressed whole-hearted praise.

The Buick displays are being held in showrooms all over this territory, according to H. H. Alexander, manager of the local Buick factory branch, who added that all persons interested in the new models will find attendants on hand at the showings to point out their many beauties and improvements.

The new Buick cars embody all the nationally-famous features of the Buick in addition to a number of innovations and refinements, according to Mr. Alexander.

"The new models are proving a sensation from coast to coast, literally taking the country by storm," Mr. Alexander declares. "Built on the famous Buick sealed chassis and powered with the Buick six-cylinder, valve-in-head engine, whose vibrationless performance startled the industry last year, the new Buicks offer such additional features as an entirely new interior treatment, greater getaway and power, enhanced beauty and a degree of riding and driving ease unapproached elsewhere."

OBREGON TO RESUME MEXICAN CANDIDACY

Mexico City, November 12.—(United Press.)—Former President Obregon will arrive in Mexico City tomorrow morning ready to resume his campaign for the presidency.

With a clear field apparently before him—his rival candidates for the presidency having been executed as rebels—Obregon now faces only one possible obstacle, namely the chance that Calles may prorogue his own term for an additional two years.

It is understood that Obregon intends to visit Vera Cruz and the southwestern states. His attitude toward extension of Calles' term is unknown, but it is presumed that he and the chief executive are in accord, and that any move which is made by congress in that direction will be with the consent of both men.

Messages received by deputies from their constituents and from the state legislatures said sentiment is favorable to Calles serving a six-year term. Even those who have been favorable to Obregon's candidacy are said to be shifting to the six-year idea.

INDIAN BARBECUED STEAKS ON MENU AT HASKELL MEET

Lawrence, Kan., November 12.—(AP) Indian barbecued steaks, squaw bread and black coffee was the menu for some 3,000 Indians and palefaces at the second annual homecoming and powwow at Haskell institute here today.

Long thin strips of meat were carved from 2,500 pounds of steer quarters and laid across long curved grates to roast in Indian fashion.

Chief White Cloud, 90, of the Iowas, presided over the barbecue, under the supervision of A. C. Scott, for 22 years a Haskell faculty member, and aided by a corps of Cheyenne and Winnebago braves.

The football game between Haskell and Loyola, of New Orleans, provided the climax of the celebration this afternoon.

UNDERMINED HOME LIFE IS BLAMED FOR WORLD WAR

Budapest, November 12.—(AP)—The feminist movement was blamed in the Hungarian parliament today for the world war. Count Bethlen, the premier, said that had the French people kept pace with other countries it is probable the war could have been avoided. He warmly subscribed to the view expressed by Deputy Huszar that the feminist movement, "by undermining family life and establishing the one-child principle," had enfeebled all countries.

"The newspapers and the stage," he said, "glorify free love. Modern woman is an article of luxury, the whole modern life is a death dance."

FOOD SHOW ENDS; WAS BIG SUCCESS

Atlanta's seventh annual food show came to a close Saturday night after one of the most successful seasons it has ever experienced, the final day being attended by big crowds.

The Sturdivant Packing company's booth was the center of attraction for the day, news having spread rapidly that Edward Sturdivant, vice president of the Tennessee concern, had married Miss Kathryn Edmunds, of Atlanta, after a whirlwind courtship that began when they met here last Monday morning.

Miss Edmunds appeared for the Studivant company in the commercial pageant held on the auditorium stage, and her beauty and the cleverness of the "stunt" in which she participated won the company one of the prizes and won Miss Edmunds the heart of Mr. Sturdivant.

The two met last Monday when Mr. Sturdivant engaged Miss Edmunds to represent his concern in the pageant. They were quietly married a few days later, and when news of the wedding spread at the food show the orchestra Saturday kept up an almost constant thrumming of the wedding march while the happy pair received congratulations.

Other prize-winners in the commercial pageant were the Atlanta Apple week committee and Poland's Brighten-up. The apple committee booth was in charge of Ed Coolidge, who also directed the catchy "stunt" which won first prize in the pageant.

The food show, sponsored by the Atlanta Food Dealers' association and the City Salesmen's association, is an annual event and this year's event was considered one of the most outstandingly successful of the entire series.

Auto, Stolen 9 Years, Gives Sleuths Trouble

The Ford touring car that was stolen from Mrs. J. D. McCarty, of the Ponce de Leon apartments, just nine years ago and since has passed through the hands of ever so many owners, was perched beside the station house Saturday while Detectives Samuel A. Smith and J. H. McKibben were trying to find a former owner of the car who would be unable to explain how the Ford came into his possession. Since finding the stolen machine Friday, the detectives have traced ownership in the vehicle through four different persons, each of whom directed the sleuths to prior owners.

Detectives Smith and McKibben came upon the car in the Fulton Bag & Cotton mills district. Suspecting it to be stolen property, they raised the hood and saw the motor number had been defaced. The car was brought to police headquarters, where, after chemical treatment, the original engine number was revealed. The Southeastern Underwriters' association then identified the car as that stolen from Mrs. McCarty in November, 1919. When taken by detectives Friday, the car was in possession of Joe Hughes, of Milton county, who directed officers to the man from whom he bought the car. This started the officers on what seems to be a perpetual string of buyers and sellers.

ATLANTA PASTOR CONDUCTS FUNERAL OF NEGRO "MAMMY"

Montezuma, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Hannah Mason, ex-slave and lifelong servant in the Levie family of Montezuma, were held yesterday from the residence of Mrs. M. T. Levie. "Aunt" Hannah was born in Tallapoosa county, Alabama, near Alexander City, nearly a century ago, and she had been in the Levie family about ninety years.

When the negroes were freed she refused to leave the family that she had served as a slave, and she continued to live with Mrs. Dollie Mason, an aunt of Mrs. Levie. She had made her home with Mrs. Levie for 38 years, and during her last illness she was nursed by Mrs. Levie with all the tenderness and care that a member of the family would have received.

Bound, not by the ties of race or blood, but by faithful service and beautiful devotion to three generations of children in the Levie family, this old negro mammy had won a place in the hearts of her white friends that even death could not destroy.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. I. T. Hawk, of Atlanta, a Presbyterian minister, and Rev. H. C. Jones, pastor of the First Methodist church of Montezuma. The interment was in the Levie lot in Felton's cemetery.

Electric Motors are like boxers

THE ring fighter's stock-in-trade is a compound of steaming punches, confusing feints, boring tactics and lightning foot work. His methods of battling vary with the men he faces. He studies his opponent and balances his own efforts to suit.

Building a motor is like boxing in that certain electrical and mechanical qualities must be balanced. You can vary the proportions any way you wish, and get a different result. But there's one right combination for every job. Finding it is a matter of the skill, equipment, resources, and experience of the motor manufacturer. Westinghouse has all these — especially experience.

WESTINGHOUSE SK MOTOR

Put one responsibility back of the entire motor application by using Westinghouse control apparatus as well as Westinghouse motors.

New York Bankers Expect Continuation of Easy Money

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, November 12.—This week's important news developments from Wall street's viewpoint included the announcement from Washington that the treasury offering of $400,000,000 seven months 3 1-8 per cent certificates had brought forth total subscriptions of $1,067,000,000. Banks take the offerings by the treasury of low interest-bearing short-time notes. From this week's heavy oversubscriptions to the seven months 3 1-8s its plain that bankers expect a continuation of an abundance of easy money.

From what was learned in banking circles here this week the peak of autumn requirements in the money market was reached the middle of October. Since then the undertone of the money market has increasingly reflected easier money. Bankers here are now predicting that money will continue to get easy.

For the time being bankers here are paying no attention to call money feeling that the rate on call loans will probably fluctuate with temporary demands. In predicting easier money bankers here have in mind time money and commercial paper.

Commercial Paper.

Commercial paper which has been ruling at 4 per cent has recently changed hands in small amounts at 3 3-4 per cent with bankers here predicting that 3 1-2 per cent will be touched between now and next spring. The demand for commercial paper is now in excess of supply. The demand for commercial paper is from banks, arising partly from the slowing down in general trade and partly from the fact that cotton farmers are paying off loans from the proceeds of this year's crops. After Christmas, corn farmers are expected to pay off a large volume of outstanding bank loans.

Bankers here expect to see the usual seasonal low winter rate for money reached some time between January 19, that is after the holiday and year-end demand, and before the beginning of spring agricultural and trade demand. If these expectations are realized easy money is expected to offset stock marketwise the slowing down in general trade. Easy money is also expected to stimulate the bond market, especially the market for second grade bonds.

If bankers here are right in their predictions for easier money there is going to be a demand for picked stocks with seasoned dividend records and for second grade bonds that will act as an offset to selling caused by any slowing down in general trade. The demand for picked seasoned dividend paying stocks will come from experienced investors. The demand for second grade bonds paying a comparatively high income return will come partly from holders of the outstanding $750,000,000 Liberty bonds called for payment November 15 and partly from reinvestment of $500,000,000 January interest and dividend money.

Liberties Disposed Of.

Banks, institutions and experienced investors holding the called Liberty 4 1-4 per cent bonds have long since parted with their bonds either through exchange for the new bonds or notes offered by Secretary Mellon or through sale in the open market. Holders of the $750,000,000 outstanding Liberty 4 1-4 per cent bonds called for payment November are not the type to be satisfied with low interest bearing government securities or seasoned corporation bonds or stocks offering 5 per cent or less. Many holders of the outstanding $750,000,000 Liberty 4 1-4 per cent called for payment November 15 will use the cash thus received to buy second grade coroporation bonds offering 5 1-2 per cent or more.

Wall street bankers figure that some of the money to be paid out by the government on November 15 in taking up the $750,000,000 outstanding Liberty 4 1-4s will be spent before or after the Christmas holidays, thus stimulating general trade. Bankers here are expecting a lull in general trade after the holidays and until spring trade develops, partly seasonal and partly to the readjustment now going on between industrial production and current consumption.

In making predictions that easier money is ahead bankers here are taking three factors into consideration, the underlying tone of time money, the underlying tone of commercial paper and the trend of the yield on bonds. Since the middle of October, or since the peak was passed in the autumn, money market requirements to trend of the income return on bonds, especially gilt-edge issues, has been downward. Experienced investors, including banks and institutions, have been buying gilt-edge bonds on expectations of easier money. Buying of second-grade bonds by the public, it is predicted, will follow.

No one could be found in responsible banking circles this week willing to predict how low the income return on bonds will go before the bottom is reached for the interest rates on time money and commercial paper.

Trend Downward.

All that was predicted for some weeks and perhaps months to come, the trend will be downward.

At the present time the average income return on United States government securities is from 3.15 per cent to 3.45 per cent. Gilt-edged railroad and industrial bonds offer 4 1-2 per cent and less. Second-grade industrial and railroad bonds offers from 5 to 6 per cent, according to risk. To get more than 6 per cent it is necessary to turn to untried industrial issues, railroads with limited earning power or foreign issues.

As a result of the warning issued by Reparations Agent Gilbert against the heavy borrowing and spending by Germany, bankers here expect a slowing down in the recent heavy offerings of foreign bonds. If this expectation proves correct, together with expectations of easy money, idle funds are going to seek employment in the market for domestic bonds and stocks.

This week's statement of the contracts placed in October for building throughout the country showing an unexpected increase over a year ago is believed by bankers here to reflect expectations of a continuation of easy money. The demand for bonds makes possible the enormous amount of money that is being spent by states, cities, towns and counties for various construction, including road building. Voters here in New York approved at this week's election an increase of $300,000,000 in bonds for subway building, typical of what is going on throughout the country.

Weekly Reviews

FINANCIAL.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—The stock market, having recovered nearly half of the ground lost in the recent reaction in what was generally described as a correction of an oversold position, again looked to financial and trade news this week for guidance in the determination of quoted values.

Such news as came to hand was generally favorable and the market was quick to respond to it.

Steel shares pointed upward on the unexpectedly large increase in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation last month followed by a raising of prices by some of the leading subsidaries. Motors were helped by the raising of the Packard dividend and the announcement of an extra cash dividend of $2.50 on General Motors common, coupled with the placing of that issue on a $5 annual basis. Although fears of Ford competition continue to hang over the motor group and have a tendency to discourage bullish operations, particularly in the shares of companies manufacturing low and medium-priced cars, most of the leaders of the industry are optimistic over next year's business.

Tobacco shares, under the leadership of the American Tobacco issues, responded to reports of steadily increasing earnings of the leading companies, due, in part, to intensive advertising and selling mathods. Mercantile shares and mail order issues moved upward in expectation of record-breaking holiday trade. Montgomery-Ward, Sears-Roebuck, May department stores, Woolworth, R. H. Macy, Arnold Constable and several others breaking through to new peak prices.

The advance in oil shares was temporarily checked by the discovery of a new field south of Seminole which revived fears in some quarters of another era of over-production. Public utility shares presented several strong points. Insurance issues were inclined to heaviness.

Specialties in which trade conditions are favorable found a ready market. Among the many new 1927 highs recorded were American Can, Burroughs Adding Machine, International Business Machine, Victor Talking Machine, Lehn & Fink and Warren Bros., the last named more than doubling its low price of the year.

Rails were rather sluggish as a result of the falling off in freight car loadings in the last week of October, although Southern railway attained a record high price for all time above $140 a share. Hopes of an increased dividend on Southern Pacific were again blasted when only the regular payment was declared. Hard coal carrying railroads developed special strength.

Nevertheless there was a feeling that as the crop had improved during October, the final estimate in December might show a further increase over the November 1 indication of 12,842,000 bales, although this impression may have been modified to some extent later in the week by unfavorable weather prospects. The decline which followed the report carried the price of January contracts off from 21.06 to 19.30 or about 175 points from the best, but trade buying became more active below 19 1-2 cents, and there were rallies from that level on week-end covering.

According to reports current here today, trade buying has been considerably in evidence on the decline, but it has been chiefly on scale down orders. Southern selling seemed to taper off at the lower prices, and reports reaching here have indicated a continued firm basis with spot holders showing little inclination to force their cotton on a declining market, such advices, no doubt, contributed to the week-end rallies, which also reflected a firmer technical position. The break during the middle of the week checked business in the primary goods market and some prices shading was reported, but there appeared to be buyers for goods at concessions and according to some advices a sufficient inquiry has been in evidence to suggest a good business as soon as raw materials have been stabilized.

The situation in this respect appears to have maintained optimistic views as to domestic consumption for the season, but the opinion is expressed in some quarters that between the new crop and old crop carryover, supplies are sufficient to permit a very fair volume of takings for the season and that advances in prices might tend to over-encourage planting next spring.

COTTON GOODS.

Cotton Goods.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Cotton goods markets have continued quiet. Since the last cotton report was issued weakness has developed in prices quoted for later deliveries of print cloths and convertibles, some cloths being available for January-March deliveries at 1-4 cent below the asking prices for spots. Buying has been light since the report was issued. Recent statistics disclosed that October sales were but 68 per cent of production, and shipments, 88.4 per cent. Stocks increased 17.6 per cent and unfilled orders decreased 13.6 per cent.

Some agitation has started in favor of curtailment of production to meet the condition of output exceeding demand but no general movement is yet under way. Finished goods sales have been of moderate volume. A price advance of 2 cents and 3 cents a yard has taken place on the sheet and pillow case basis and sales have been stimulated a little at the low end. Bleached cottons continue weak and irregular. Printed specialties for wash fabrics department are being bought moderately for spring.

Colored cotton goods have ruled quiet. Spot and nearby business on towels was quite active after the recent price reduction, but has become quiet again. Cotton duck sales were light. More business was done ign tire fabrics and in some of the cloths wanted by the automobile trades. Yarns are irregular and quiet.

Prices current in primary markets are as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch 64x64s, 6.5-8c; 64x60s, 6.3-8c; 38 1-2-inch 64x64s, 8 7-8c; brown sheetings, southern standards, 14c; denims, 19c; tickings, 23@24c; prints, 8 3-4c; staple ginghams, 10 1-2c; dress ginghams, 16 3-4@18 1-2c.

COTTON.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—A very sharp decline followed the publication of the government's crop report in the cotton market here this week. Evidently traders were surprised by the increase of 164,000 bales in the official crop indication as compared with that of October 1, and while the change for the month was a comparatively small one, it seemed to lift crop ideas from about 12,500,000 to 13,000,000 bales. The report of the census bureau showing 9,925,795 bales ginned prior to November 1 was about as anticipated and traders had been prepared to reconcile ginnings of about 10,000,000 bales with a crop indication of 12,500,000 males on the ground that an unusually large percentage of the crop has been ginned.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS

Chicago, November 12.—(AP)—Despite reports of damage from frost, rust, smut and insects, Argentina is still apparently the unbeaten champion in control of the world wheat market trend. Just now the Argentine season corresponds to June in Texas, and trade experts here say it will be three weeks before Argentine harvesting, already commenced, can become general in the big central zone.

With Argentine acreage the largest on record, and with chances wide open for possible serious untoward developments before harvesting is ended, wheat values here showed 1-4 to 1 5-8c gain this morning, compared with a week ago. Simultaneously, the corn market was 2 3-8c to 2 7-8 up for the week, with oats of 7-8c to 1 5-8c advance, and provisions ranging from 75c decline to a rise of 22c.

So far, crop damage reports from Argentina, although extremely varied, have not been of a character to give speculators and pronounced belief that much of a radical curtailment of wheat yield had been brought about. According to the best information in Chicago, though ,the Argentine carryover of old wheat into the new season will be relatively small, no matter what may be the outcome of the present harvest. Moreover, it seems probable that fresh arrivals of wheat will not reach Buenos Aires in quantity before January 1.

In contrast with anxiety shown concerning Argentine wheat prospects, interest relative to the size of the Canadian surplus has been much less keen, many traders contending that prics have discounted the Canadian situation to some extend at least. Besides, as an offset to Canada's yield, a deficiency exists in Australia of 50,000,000 bushels or more, according to trade figures here, with what appears to be unusual need for wheat and other grain in Europe. Meanwhile, the domestic spring wheat movement from the northwest is now gradually falling off after the successful handling of the bulk of one of the largest crops in recent years.

Notwithstanding that the government report on corn yield indicates a huge increase, many traders appear disinclined to take the official figures as correct. In this connection, it is pointed out that husking returns received from a wide area suggest yields well below expectation. Oats prices largely reflect knowledge that terminal stocks total only about half as much as last year, and that the rural movement of oats lacks value.

The provisions market is showing unusual irregularity, with lard values tending higher, whereas meats have a decided downward slant.

WALL STREET CHEERFUL AS STOCK PRICES MOUNT.

New York, November 12.—(AP)—Important financial and trade developments followed each other in quick succession this week and left Wall street in a cheerful frame of mind. A further recovery in the stock market wiped out more than half of the ground lost in the recent sharp reaction, and sent scores of individual issues to new peak prices for the year. Cotton broke sharply on the publication of an unexpectedly large government crop estimate, then made partial recovery. Sterling exchange advanced to the highest level since 1914, Dutch guilders the highest since 1919, and Japanese exchange collapsed to a new low level for the year.

Two of the most significant developments of the week having a bearing on the stock market were the stiffening of steel prices following soon after the surprisingly large increase in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation, and the declaration of an extra cash dividend of $2.50 on the new common stock, of General Motors, which also was placed on a regular annual basis of $5, equivalent to $10 on the old which paid $8 with occasional extras.

Wall street was of the opinion that consumers of steel would place large orders for future delivery when they became convinced that the recent declining trend of commodity prices had been definitely checked. Likewise the generous cash extra on General Motors was construed as an indication that Ford competition was not feared by other leading manufacturers. Declines in commodity prices were offset by the fact that the aggregate value of leading crops was well above that of last year. Ease of credit conditions was emphasized by the heavy over-subscription of new bond offerings, particularly the treasury issue.

ATLANTA-MACON ROAD TO BE PAVED SOON

Jackson, Ga., November 12.—(Special).—The survey of state route 42 from Indian Springs to Forsyth has been completed, and with the completion of this link the entire highway from Atlanta to Macon has been located. The survey is preliminary to the grading and paving of this road.

Indications point to the early paving of this highway. Henry county is grading its link preparatory to paving and Butts county is rapidly completing the grading of the link from Jackson to Indian Springs. The two links from Indian Springs to Forsyth and from Jackson to the Henry county lines will receive attention at an early date. From Forsyth to Macon the road is already paved. On the northern end of the line Henry county will connect with Clayton and Fulton.

The grading on this route conforms to the highest standards of engineering and it is said this will be a model highway when completed.

Butts and Henry counties will complete the grading on their allotment within the next few months and will be ready for paving. Commissioners in all the counties through which the highway will pass are showing much interest in this project.

Route 42 from Atlanta to Macon will pass through Stockbridge, McDonough, Locust Grove, Jackson, Indian Springs and Forsyth, and is some twelve miles shorter than any highway now in existence between these two cities.

WATER TOO COLD, WOMAN ABANDONS SUICIDE ATTEMPT

Baltimore, Md., November 12.—(AP) Because "the water looked too cold" Mrs. Minnie Risik changed her mind at the last minute today after she had resolved to end her life in the harbor.

Her husband, Joseph, asserted that he returned home to find a note telling of her resolve and indicating the exact spot where her body could be found.

After frantically notifying police, he hurried toward the harbor he said, only to meet his wife returning.

Laughing for the first time in months, Risik said, Mrs. Risik informed him that "the water looked too cold."

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR SAFETY MEETING

Judge Marcus Beck, of the Georgia supreme court; Frank Shumate, vice president of the Georgia Power company; Louis Marquardt, of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and A. May, of the American Mill company, of Atlanta, will be chief speakers on the program of the Georgia Safety Council conference to be held in Atlanta early in December.

Plans for the conference are now being prepared by O. R. Bennett, vice chairman of the Georgia public service commission, who is president of the state safety council; J. E. Bodenhamer, of the Georgia securities commission and Assistant Attorney General T. R. Gress.

New Aspirants To Renown

ANNUAL JUBILEE TO BE HELD FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Will Seek Fiddler's Crown

PROFESSOR ALECK SMART.

Master of ceremonies at the Old Fiddlers' convention Friday and Saturday night and champion melodeon player.

"The Devil Among the Yearlings," coupled with the equally famous "Billy in the Low Ground," will be the tunes chosen by Uncle Eli Watts, of Ringgold, Ga., for his first bid for statewide fame as a fiddler, according to Mr. Watts' entry for the Georgia Old Time Fiddlers' convention, scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights at the Atlanta auditorium.

Mr. Watts has cast his hat into the ring with a message to Professor Aleck Smart, master of ceremonies, announcing that he and his nephew, John Watts, will be on hand to compete for the fiddling championship of the south, and stating that the two fiddle tunes mentioned are his masterpieces.

The Ringgold fiddlers will meet formidable competition in their ambitions to win the cash prize and the championship medal, however, as Earl Johnson, of Atlanta, the present title holder will defend his honors, and more than fifty redoubtable masters of catgut and rosin have sent in their entries. Among them are E. M. Watson, of Seville, Ga.; J. T. Blackwell and his sons, William Lingerfelt, K. B. Smith, E. O. Pursell, of Lake City, Fla.; T. S. Ellis, of Atlanta; O. V. Cooper, Atlanta; W. G. Keith, Gainesville; Julian Smith, Atlanta; Sam Prather, Lithonia; Robert H. Stephens, Lindale, and B. F. Wright, Columbus. All of these have been outstanding contestants at former conventions.

Among the new aspirants for the fiddling championship who have entered the contest are the Elkins brothers, from Franklin, N. C.; Jim Whittaker, from Orlando, Fla.; Tom Adamson, of Heflin, Ala., and a delegation of five fiddlers from Murphy, N. C., under the leadership of Bill Allen.

Virgil W. Shepard, manager of the convention for the associataion, announces that between 50 and 100 fiddlers will be on the auditorium stage for the opening session on Friday night, and even more are expected to arrive Saturday morning.

Fiddlin' John Carson and Gid Tanner, both famous entertainers, are under contract to appear at all the sessions, including the Saturday afternoon matinee.

The coming convention will be the fourteenth annual meeting of the association, which is composed of veteran country fiddlers from almost every county in Georgia. Several thousands of lovers of old-fashioned fiddle music usually flock to the auditorium, hundreds coming from various parts of the state to cheer for their favorites.

DEAN TO CLOSE SERIES WITH THREE LECTURES

Three remaining lectures of a series of six on psychology by Thomas H. Johnston, D. D. Litt. D., dean of St. Phillip's cathedral, will be given Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the chapter house of the cathedral at East Hunter and Washington streets.

The first lectures given the past week, were unusually interesting and people from all denominations and from every section of the city attended.

Dean Johnston is one of the best known lecturers in Georgia and has made a special study of the subjects that he is presenting in a series of lectures on psychology.

A small admission price is charged for each lecture and all proceeds will go into a benefit fund of St. Mary's Guild of St. Philip's cathedral. Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale is president of the guild.

Stock Letters.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, November 12.—The market was strong and fairly active for a day on which a great many people were absent from the street. Recent attempts to increase the prices of steel products had quite an effect on steel stocks today. U. S. Steel getting above 129. On the way up, however, there was some rather good selling, probably representing the liquidation of stock bought for support on the recent decline. Mail order stocks continued in good demand and just at the close there was a burst of strength in the rails, under the leadership of Atchison which advanced over 3 points. There is no indication of any change in the market in the near future. Quite likely some reaction will develop in the early part of next week, but we think the market will easily recover from such reaction. We continue bullish on the stocks we have been recommending, particularly Union Carbide. We would not be surprised to see this stock sell around $200 next year. It seems an excellent purchase around present levels.

Cotton Letters.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, November 12.—The cold wave sweeping towards, and expected to cover the cotton belt was responsible for good demand in today's market. This follows rainy weather in central belt sections, both of these conditions are unfavorable to that portion of the crop as yet unharvested. A hard freeze might damage some small amount of cotton as yet unopened and will stop all growth. Buying has been principally of a covering nature on account of the price level and the belief that the best part of the trade is not following the advance with buying orders. Somewhat higher prices may result, especially as at the opening Monday the census report on cotton consumed for October will be published and the figures should be rather full. From now onward it seems quite likely that consumption figures will tend to show a downward curve as mills are stocking up with goods and manufacturers are considering curtailment plans. We expect there will be an increased quantity of notices for sale on further strength. January Liverpool due, 10.73.

HUBBARD BROTHERS

The market opened steady but eased off during the first hour under New Orleans selling. This selling seems to have been brought about by the fact that the advance in the market of yesterday attracted a profit-taking this morning. New Orleans seemed to be the principal seller, with scattered hedge selling from spot houses. This selling was well absorbed by limited orders from the trade, which, as we have said before, always takes place on setbacks of this kind.

The market was quiet during the middle of the short session, but towards the close it began to ease off, going to the 10.70 level for January. The market apparently, is very much stronger technically than heretofore and responds quickly to buying orders.

Although we do not anticipate any big advance, we do not think that price is rather attractive.

Liverpool futures are due on Monday: January, 10.74; March, 10.72.

Coffee.

New York, November 12.—Coffee futures opened today 6 to 12 points lower. March contracts easing off to 13.07 under small offerings inspired by slightly easier cables from Brazil. March closed at 13.09, the general market closing 6 to 9 points net lower. December 13.09; January 13.09; March 13.09; July 13.09; September 12.97. Estimated sales 5,000 bags.

Spot quiet; Rio 7s, 14 1-2; Santos 4s, 22 1-2. Cost and freight offers included Bourbon 5s and 8s at 20.00 to 20.50.

Rio exchange on London 1 12-32 lower; dollar buying rate 5 reis higher. Rio market 25 reis higher to 75 reis lower. Santos unchanged to 125 reis lower. Brazilian port receipts 65,000; Jundiahy receipts 34,000.

Rubber.

New York, November 12.—Rubber closed steady: December, 36.00; March, 37.10; May, 37.50.

Smoked ribbed, spot, 36½.

Rice.

New Orleans, November 12.—Rough rice quiet; sales none; receipts 3,178. Clean rice quiet; sales 1,834 Blue Rose, 917 Edith, 321 Lady Wright; receipts 3,075.

Bran and polish unchanged.

Boat Aground.

Key West, Fla., November 12.—(AP) Coast guard boat No. 203 is reported aground in New Found harbor near here. Patrol boats Nos. 108 and 132 made this port this afternoon for fuel oil and left immediately to pull the grounded boat off the shoal. According to the report, the boat is undamaged and none of the crew was injured. The boats all operate from St. Petersburg.

ANNUAL OLD GUARD MEETS ON NOV. 28

Associate, honorary and active members of the Old Guard battalion will assemble at 7 o'clock on the night of November 28 for an informal get-together stag dinner and smoker at the Atlanta Athletic club, it was announced Saturday.

At present there are 130 names enrolled on a roster, which embraces many of the city's most prominent business, civic and social leaders. The historic battalion has responded with enthusiasm to every patriotic appeal here for the past score of years.

Preliminary plans will be made at the meeting for the annual outing on which members, their wives and friends embark each summer. The last outing was spent in Cuba, during which the party was entertained by the governor of the island republic.

The active membership is as follows: P. A. Aicklen, F. M. Akers, P. Dexter Allen, Walter P. Andrews, Dr. Luther P. Baker, A. H. Banker, Albert D. Barber, J. E. Bennet, J. C. Bone, Henry C. GARTRELL SCOTT DIES AT BAINBRIDGE HOME

Bainbridge, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Gartrell Scott, member of a prominent family here, died in his home Thursday and was buried in Oak City cemetery Friday afternoon following funeral services at the house by Rev. H. H. Shell, of First Baptist church.

He is survived by a sister, Miss Nettie Scott, and two brothers, J. M. Scott, a former postmaster of Bainbridge, and C. B. Scott. Mr. Scott had been a leading merchant until ill health forced him to retire. He was not married.

POPPY SALES TOTAL $88 AT BAINBRIDGE

Bainbridge, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Mrs. George Hawthorne has announced that poppy sales Thursday amounted to $88 for the Woman's auxiliary to the Bainbridge American legion. Mrs. Hawthorne is president of the auxiliary and Mrs. Melvin Nussbaum was chairman of the sales.

High Tension Line Extended From Florida City Into Waycross

Waycross, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—The Hoosier Engineering company, of Indiana, has been awarded the contract for building the high tension line from Inglis, Florida, to Waycross.

The plan provides for the erection of towers a quarter of a mile apart from Inglis to Jasper. From Jasper to Waycross the line will be carried on steel poles.

As soon as this tension line is completed the large hydro-electric plant at Inglis will begin operations.

JUDGE REED LAUDED FOR HIGHWAY STAND

Waycross, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—The secretary of the American Automobile association, Ernest N. Smith, Washington, has written the Waycross Motor club warmly commending its president, Judge Harry D. Reed.

Smith says: "Your president, Judge H. D. Reed, is to be congratulated on his advocacy of a state highway bond issue. The passage of a bond issue is the only way that Georgia is going to make any progress in the development of a highway program, particularly in the laying of hard-surfaced roads."

A CHATTANOOGA CHALLENGE.

J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga, who has already donated $400,000 to Oglethorpe university, and made the marvelous development of that institution possible, has now offered another contribution of $250,000 if Georgians will match the amount.

It is a challenge for the completion and the endowment of a great Atlanta institution made by a great citizen of another state. Atlanta cannot afford not to meet it.

Oglethorpe has no endowment fund, and needs one. The raising of this $500,000 will not only provide expansions that are necessary, and additional equipment, but the income from the endowment will serve to help toward the meeting of the annual deficit.

No educational institution in America has made more progress in ten years in the development of a great teaching plant, and in the building up of a fine student body of young men, than Oglethorpe university.

With less than two-score students enrolled in 1918 it has today a total enrollment of 500. The personnel of the student body is unusually high. The curriculum measures up to that of any institution in the south.

The executive management of Oglethorpe has been so excellent that the school year deficit per student is only $100. This is $365 below the average in the United States.

This record made by Oglethorpe, which is no less than marvelous, has been due to the great ability of Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, who has been president of the institution since its establishment.

Coming from a good old Presbyterian family in South Carolina, endowed with great learning, with tireless energy, with unimpeachable character, and with the spirit that young men love in college executives and teachers, Dr. Jacobs has carried the name and the fame of Oglethorpe all over America and into foreign lands.

The planning of the buildings and the campus has demonstrated great skill. Other buildings will arise in the course of time and will comport in architecture, construction and moderism with the beautiful buildings of blue granite that have already been erected. There are no more attractive college buildings in America.

In the gravure pictorial section today reproductions of photographs of Oglethorpe's structures and campus are given. They illustrate the system that has been employed in the erection of this great school plant which is not only a credit to Atlanta and Georgia, a fitting monument to Georgia's founder, but a credit to the nation.

Dr. Jacobs is now preparing to go before the people of this city and ask them to meet this generous proposal.

Surely they will meet it with genuine enthusiasm. It deserves to be.

Mr. Lupton, a business man from a city outside of the state, recognizes the great appeal of the institution.

He recognizes the soundness, the services, the opportunities for the institution in the education of young men of Georgia and the south. He recognizes what it means as a monument, not only to General Oglethorpe, but to Dr. Jacobs.

"GOING TO WHITTLE."

President Coolidge was asked what he was going to do after the expiration of his term.

"Going back to Vermont" was his laconic reply.

"What are you going to do in Vermont?"

"I am going to whittle for a year or two," he said.

There is significance in this conversation. It is the most definite statement that he has yet made as to his own plans as to the next republican convention.

It is very evident, despite the persistence of Senator Fess, that the president does not intend to be a candidate for the nomination, nor does he intend to be conscripted.

In going back to Vermont it will be recalled that while that is his native state, Massachusetts, of which state he was governor in 1920 when he was nominated for the vice presidency, is his legal residence.

It is more than probable that his plans are to reside on the old New England farm upon which he was sworn in as president following the death of President Harding. The president now owns this property. He probably can "whittle" with greater satisfaction there, under the shades of the elms, than anywhere else.

In the meantime these last few words that have found themselves in print throughout the nation will start new speculation as to the possible republican nominee.

SOUTH AN INDUSTRIAL CENTER.

This country has never known such a power development as is now being inaugurated in the south.

The Alabama Power company has contracted for a $20,000,000 steam-electric plant in that state, the work to begin as quickly as the public service commission grants the permit.

There is being built on the Saluda river in South Carolina a $24,000,000 plant, and the earth dam will be the largest in the world, containing 11,000,000 cubic yards.

A contract has been let for a $7,000,000 plant for the American Glanzstoff company near Elizabethton, Tenn., for the manufacture of rayon, with plans for a final expenditure of $50,000,000.

In the meantime almost every cotton mill in the east is either preparing to move south with entire plants, or establishing subsidiary plants in the south.

The stupendous power developments in the south, under way and contracted for, are in contemplation of this general movement which is anticipated for 1928-29.

The Appleton company, of Lowell, Mass., with 113,500 spindles—one of the greatest textile mills in the world—will move the entire plant to Anderson, S. C., as quickly as necessary buildings can be erected. The directors of the corporation voted $750,000 for the buildings and the expenses of moving the spindles and looms.

The fact is, the trend of the textile industry to the fields of raw production is as natural as is water in seeking its level.

The marvelous industrial progress of the south is in keeping with a natural law. This section is the source of raw production, and thus it is becoming the source of manufactured production.

In a few years it will be the industrial center of the nation. This, combined with its agricultural status, will make the south the richest section, with the largest purchasing power of any, of like area, in the world.

The advantages of the south, including power, climate, housing conditions and stabilized labor, are so outstanding that factory executives cannot fail to know and appreciate them.

Unwise legislation, burdensome taxation and alien and restless labor are also features experienced in the old industrial centers of the country that are driving the plants to the south.

We experience no exultation at the losses to the sections from which these plants come. They will readjust themselves to new conditions. But we do take pride in the fact that the south is developing so rapidly and so permanently.

These industrial readjustments are challenges to Georgia. It will be little less than a crime for this state to let great opportunities pass through lack of paved highways, a just and stable taxation system, and a lax method of invitation.

There is every good reason why this state should profit by the present movement more than any other state in the southeast, due to its transportation, financial, climatic and other natural conditions.

If it does not do so the fault will very properly be laid at our own door.

PARLIAMENT IN SESSION.

Parliament met Tuesday for a 20-day session. Early indications are it will be stormy. Lloyd George started out with an attack on Sir Austen Chamberlain. He charged that Sir Austen has stood still since Locarno.

"It is no use standing on the shores of Lake Maggiore, like a stork, looking preternaturally wise, because you have swallowed one trout."

That was a peculiar figure of speech but characteristic of Lloyd George. He did urge, in more definite language, that the British foreign minister follow the example of Aristide Briand "who is now sending the dove of peace toward Washington to agree upon a pact that there shall never be war between them."

Perhaps the most important issue to be considered will be the reduction of unemployment. A great army of unemployed miners in Wales is preparing to march upon London in a protest against the chronic physical distress that prevails in the coal fields.

Some one has suggested that saving money on armament and using it to cure conditions which make for the employment of her people might be a popular policy in England at this time.

Labor won signal victories in the last election, and unless the conservatives show constructive results in the improvement of economic conditions it is probable that there will be another MacDonald lifted to the premiership. Or it may be that Lloyd George will stage a "comeback."

AS TO TAX REDUCTION.

The demand for a federal tax cut commensurate with the treasury surplus is nation-wide.

Even the administration advocates in the party, many of whom are outstanding economists, say the approaching reduction should amount to a great deal more than $225,000,000, as has been stated as the maximum limit by the president.

The war was fought for the safety of future generations, and there is no reason why the war debt should be retired by the present generation. It should be equitably distributed. Money is worth more to the individual who is living and who is making America strong and prosperous than the low interest rate that applies to federal securities.

In a leading editorial the Manufacturers Record says:

"President Coolidge and Mr. Mellon in seeking for a small reduction in taxation instead of a large one will probably be as badly defeated in that respect as in their former experience. The country demands a big reduction. Enough congressmen probably will be in favor of it to pass a bill to that effect. Certainly such a bill ought to be passed. The tax on corporations should be severely reduced. Earned incomes in contrast with the tax on incomes from invested securities or property should be heavily reduced. The inheritance tax should, as suggested by Mr. Mellon, be wiped out. It is in every respect an unjust tax as it now stands. Business is shackled by this income taxation. Cut these shackles loose and business would respond to such an extent as to make an increased income from taxation, necessitating further reduction of income taxation in the not distant future. A bill for heavy tax reduction should be introduced promptly when congress meets and promptly passed."

Increased and increasing wealth of this country will make the payment of the national debt easier a few years from now than at present, and if the tax burdens are lifted now the wealth of the nation will increase so rapidly by reason of it that this debt can be paid ten fold more easily 10 or 15 years hence.

Government is business. Every great business in the world has its bonded indebtedness.

Such businesses make no attempt to strangle themselves and to curtail their earning capacities by retiring such bonds more rapidly than agreed, or normal, under sound administration.

This government has already retired its war debt more rapidly than any other nation. It is preparing now to retire another great issue. It has the funds set aside for the purpose, independent of the surplus that is available for tax reduction.

The wise course, therefore, will be to apply the surplus, or a major portion of it, to tax reduction.

It is very probable that congress will so determine.

NATION-WIDE PROSPERITY.

Atlanta is particularly interested in the General Motors corporation by reason of the fact that a great plant of that institution is shortly to be established in this city.

The corporation has enjoyed a year of unprecedented prosperity, with a disbursement to shareholders that has broken all records.

In addition to the quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share, declared at the meeting of the directors Friday, it added an additional $2.50 a share, to be paid in cash.

It will have paid out, therefore, $136,650,000 this year to stockholders, besides retaining a cash reserve of $235,000,000.

These are staggering figures, but reflect general prosperity.

General Motors deals in more than automobiles. Like Standard Oil, it has a number of subsidiary corporations manufacturing articles for the home and for store and factory. Its prosperity, necessarily, very clearly reflects the general prosperity of the country.

Several nation-wide corporations held their annual meetings during the past week, and cash dividends larger than ever before were declared.

Not in the history of this country has there been greater optimism, nor more reason for it, than at the present time.

When big business succeeds little business succeeds.

When the industrial operators are prosperous the industrial operatives are prosperous.

It is impossible for a general and widespread prosperity to exist without it being felt by all groups and classes of people.

Nothing has been more indicative of a nation-wide prosperity than the great earnings of the General Motors and other corporations that deal with the buying public.

The public cannot buy unless it has the money to pay.

THE THEATER TICKET TAX.

When the new revenue bill comes out of the ways and means committee it will very probably provide a repeal of the nuisance tax provision that exacts 10 per cent federal tribute from a patron of a theater who must pay $1 or more for the admission ticket.

The last revenue bill repealed the tax on admissions up to 75 cents. The job should be completed, and all theater ticket taxes should be struck from the federal tax laws.

It may be said that the average theater patron who can pay $1 or more for an admission is able to pay the 10 per cent to the government. But in that fact rests the unfairness of the tax. It is such a patron usually who pays income taxes, and taxes on cigars and cigarettes, and makes a score of other intangible contributions to the government.

The average individual who patronizes a high-class theater looks upon the 10 per cent tax as an imposition, and now that treasury surpluses are piling up it is nothing short of that.

Drama, and all good theatrical productions, compose a part of the cultural life of any city. The Atlanta season of grand opera has done much to make the city a cultural center. The taxes that have gone into the federal treasury from the tribute exacted on admissions would run into the tens of thousands of dollars. And yet the grand opera patrons, on the whole, pay more federal taxes in various ways than any other group of people, perhaps, in Georgia and the south.

When there was a real war demand for such an imposition there was no complaint. But that demand, like the continued Pullman surtax, has long since been removed.

TWO AMBITIOUS RUTHS.

In the campaigns of 1896 and 1900, with the late William Jennings Bryan, then of Nebraska, the democratic nominee in both instances, William McKinley, of Ohio, was the successful republican candidate.

The most conspicuous figure in republican circles at the time was Mark Hanna, chairman of the national committee, and manager of the McKinley campaigns.

Bryan and Hanna met on various occasions, and were personal friends but bitter political enemies.

Mark Hanna was well known in Georgia, having a home at Thomasville at which he spent a great deal of time except when in the campaigns.

His daughter Ruth, for several years, spent a great deal of time in their Thomasville home.

Bryan had a daughter also named Ruth.

In the course of time the Bryans moved to Florida. Miss Bryan married Major Reginald Owen, of the British Royal engineers.

Miss Hanna married the late Medill McCormick, of Chicago.

The two Ruths became active in public life about the same time, and became close friends.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Owen visited Mrs. McCormick. Shortly thereafter the latter announced for congressman-at-large from Illinois. "No bunk and no promises" she declared to be her platform. Political observers say she will win.

The other day Mrs. Owen announced for congress from the fourth Florida district against Representative Sears. She is already on the stump.

It is some time before the next primaries for congress. They may tire of the running. Anyway the coincidence makes an interesting story, calling back memories of national politics 30 years ago.

A little over a hundred years ago the remarkable statement was made that soon one could breakfast in Baltimore, dine in Philadelphia and sup in New York. A navy flier has just annihiliated time at the rate of 322 miles an hour, and at that speed he could breakfast at New York and sup at San Francisco.

A beggar held in the night court of New York was bailed out by his wife who drove up in a limousine, attended by a chauffeur. It was then discovered that he and his wife were living in a suite of rooms in an up-town hotel. That would make a beggar of most any one.

H. C. Cole and James Fuell were arrested in Chicago for fighting on a business street. The scrap began after a heated argument, which was extinguished after they were thrown into the cooler.

The president is reported as saying that when he retires to his home in Vermont he will whittle for a year or two. He is adept, at least, for he has cut some ice.

You are advised that you must mail your overseas Christmas packages by November 15. Half overseas packages are handled by the police rattler at all times.

Washington, November 12.—(Special.)—Now that the full reports of last Tuesday's political events have been absorbed here at the capital by the party actuaries, it is interesting to note how little the results of those elections have changed the horoscope of things to come.

When the several state returns are coolly and carefully analyzed, they appear to justify neither the enthusiasms nor the pessimisms that were provoked by the first reports.

It is frankly admitted that the New York amendment results are boosts for the prestige of Governor Al Smith as a vote-getter in that state, and quite likely to increase the faith of office-seeking democrats throughout the country that he can surest pull the official chestnuts out of the republican fire. Democratic leaders like Senators Copeland, Edwards and Dave Walsh, looking toward the campaign of next year, see "nobody in it but Smith!" Others think otherwise.

On the republican side the general sentiment is that Tuesday's elections, reduced to their surest significance, have made no inroads upon the chances of that party to carry the 1928 election.

The Case in Kentucky.

The defeat of Beckham by Sampson in the Kentucky governorship race is not seriously considered here as having any political significance.

The fight was not between the parties as such. Beckham went out to smash the race-track gamblers' ring that has so long a time had a strangle-hold on the Blue Grass state. Kentuckians have always prided themselves upon their blooded racing stock. Up to last year all Kentucky politicians, democratic or republican, have said "yours truly" to the powerful, aristocratic Jockey club and the race-track gamblers. But last year Congressman Alben Barkley boldly bucked that combined outfit in his race for the United States senatorship and beat them by a large margin, and greatly to their amazement and chagrin.

Taking courage from Barkley's victory, Beckham this year declared against the pari-mutuel betting machines at race tracks and pledged, if elected governor, to fight to outlaw them. But it did not work.

* * * *

Butters No Parsnips for Smith.

The Al Smith enthusiasts who are interpreting the result in Kentucky as a defeat for the "drys," because Beckham is a dry, and as an indication that Smith would carry Kentucky as a presidential candidate, are surely badly taught concerning the denizens of the "dark and bloody ground."

They are the people who will defeat a Senator Stanley because he is wet and elect a dry republican in his place; then turn out a moist republican like Senator Ernst and replace him with Barkley, one of the driest dry apostles in all America. There was no wet or dry issue between Beckham and Sampson.

Neither does the big defeat of the Marshall act in the Ohio referendum election mean that a wet for president will have more than a field-horse's chance to win that state. The issue in Ohio was not a clean-cut wet and dry fight, although the new and inept leadership of the Anti-Saloon league tried to have it so. They forced a legislative act to perpetuate a disreputable and too often dishonest system of "kangaroo courts," run by wandering justices of the peace, that was condemned by the supreme court of the United States as unconstitutional!

The system was obnoxious from every point of honest view, but the Anti-Saloon league tried to perpetuate it by a subterfuge statute. Myriads of drys refused to stand for that and helped to defeat it.

The result was a verdict in favor of honest law administration and enforcement and a rebuke to the fanaticism of the Anti-Saloon league, but it by no means indicates that the Ohio masses have abandoned their devotion to the policy of prohibition.

So that, taking the dope-sheet as colored by Tuesday's results, there appears upon it no support for the claim that "the nation is going wet." The fact seems to be that even dry men are simply getting back to common-sense ideas and favoring the reconstruction of prohibition into a form that will prohibit.

Henry Bacon.

This noble structure should be seen by all patriotic Americans who can get to Washington. It should not only be seen but studied. It deserves our reverent attention for its own sake and for the sake of one whom it commemorates. In it Greece arises from the dead to bear her transcendent witness to the deathless president.

I have a friendly dispute with an acquaintance about familiar misquotations. He says that the lines:

"And to be wroth with one we love, Doth work like madness in the brain."

Neither. It is found in Coleridge's "Christabel." The fixed idea that certain pet passages belong to given authors entirely innocent of them prevails in many well read people. How frequently one hears the last line of Milton's "Lycidas" recited as "fresh fields and pastures green" instead of "woods." The saying "Cleanliness is next to godliness" has been ascribed to a variety of sources ranging from the Bible to John Wesley. Butler's couplet, "He that complies against his will is of his own opinion still," has been changed to the phrase, "A man convinced against his will." Follow the advice of Jowett of Baliol by verifying your quotations.

I attended a funeral service recently in a modern home and heard the clergyman say that only to Christians does death bring peace and immortality.

Did he mean that I, who am a Jewess, and all others of my religious faith, will not find peace and immortality after death?

No clergyman has the right to say what you allege. Perhaps the one in question meant to say that the sincere Christian possesses the secret of a victorious death. But to infer from this that devoted believers of other faiths have no release in their death is to contradict human experience.

Read again your own ritual for the departed in which the comforting words of assurance express that "Larger Hope" of which Christ Himself testified: "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold." Did He not also say, "He who is not against us is for us;" and further, that "the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is not the God of the dead but of the living?"

The Father's love is wide enough to embrace Jew and Gentile in one brotherhood of righteousness and peace, and heaven's oceanic dimensions far exceed the boundaries of race and creed. Yesterday while reciting the words of the Book of Revelation at a funeral I thought of your letter. "He showed me that holy city Jerusalem coming down out of heaven from God . . . having a wall great and high, with twelve gates . . . and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of Israel." (Chapter xxi, 10-12.) So much for the New Testament. Evidently Jews as well as Christians are expected in Paradise, and I trust that all may be prepared for an abundant entrance there.

Is not a very large part of Christian theology taken from the works of Plato? Do not the writings of St. Augustine, the greatest patristic interpreter of Christian doctrine, reflect the ideas of Plato to a marked degree, particularly in the former's book entitled "The City of God?"

Plato's philosophy exercised considerable influence upon early Christian thinking. Even the New Testament reveals its traces in the prologue of the Fourth Gospel and in certain passages of the Epistles to the Colossians, Ephesians and Hebrews.

The majority of the great Christian theologians of the third and fourth centuries were trained in Hellenistic philosophy, which was of course largely Platonic. They were entirely justified in using the noble speculations of Plato as a framework for the Christian faith.

Bishop William Temple, of Manchester, England, has told the story of this process in his little book, "Plato and Christianity," and Dean Inge has written upon "The Platonic Tradition in English Religious Thought."

Yet do not for a moment infer that Christian theology is merely Platonism revamped. In the words of the medieval schoolmen both Plato and Aristotle can be regarded as "the forerunners of Christ in things natural as Moses and John the Baptist were in things spiritual." But our Lord gave all men what neither the Greek thinkers nor the Hebrew prophets possessed apart from Him, the sure and saving truth concerning God and the secret of moral power and spiritual peace.

Iraq---Land of Eve, Noah and Ali Baba

Washington, D. C., November 12.—Should Iraq become a member of the League of Nations, as discussed by King Feisal in London, "the oldest country in the world will become the newest member of the league," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Iraq is a modern name for the traditional Garden of Eden, historically known as Mesopotamia. Many historians hold that somewhere in the valley of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers is to be found the cradle of civilization.

6,000 Years of History.

"Upon the breaking up of the Turkish empire following the world war, Mesopotamia became a British mandate, which was erected into the Arab kingdom of Iraq with a Mohammedan prince from Mecca upon the throne. Such is the latest form assumed by the Phoenix among nation. In the last 6,000 years Babylonian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, Greek, Roman and Saracen civilizations have flourished in Mesopotamia, each rising from the ashes of its predecessor.

"The great irrigation works which, throughout the centuries, had kept the Tigris-Euphrates valley green, rich and flurishing were destroyed by invading Mongols and allowed to decay by heedless Turks. The Garden of Eden became a treeless desert, except for a few date palms along the river banks. Cities like Bagdad and Basra fell into decay and seemed fast approaching the fate which had overtaken Ur and Babylon, where jackals howl above a lonely waste.

"Then followed a rebirth during the throes of the great war. Once more boats crowded the swift and treacherous reaches of the Tigris. Once more the bazars of Bagdad and Basra and Mosul hummed with world traffic. Marauding desert robber tribes were kept in perpetual peace by airplanes humming over their remote villages. Sanitary regulations and electric lighting made town and country both more safe and more healthful. Ice factories and sodawater establishments helped alleviate summer days of 120 degrees in the shade. Levees were built to keep the flooding rivers within their banks and slowly bit by bit work was begun on repairing irrigation works and building railroads. Thus was modern Iraq born.

"The new kingdom under British mandate embraces the valley of the Tigris-Euphrates between the Arabian desert on one side and the Persian uplands on the other. To the northwest lies the French mandate of Syria and to the north the Kurdish highlands of Turkey. Southward stretches the Persian gulf, the country's salt water outlet to the wide world. Within this strip of territory are barely three million people where once flourished a population denser than that of modern Belgium.

Arabs Adopt City Life.

"There are three principal cities: Mosul, of oil fame, is in the north; Bagdad, the capital in the center part, and the important port of Basra in the south. The latter is situated on the Shatt-el-Arab, a river formed by the union of the Tigris and Euphrates. Smaller centers of importance, such as Kut and Amara, follow each other at intervals the entire length of the valley. Most of the inhabitants are Mohammedan Arabs, though in the cities are many Jews, while in the mountainous north are settlements of Nestorian Christians dating from very early times.

"City Arabs have taken readily to the ways of civilization and seem glad for the chance to work in ice and cotton cloth factories, and upon engineering and public works. Much agricultural land has been reclaimed, the date palm, of which more than sixty varieties are known, being the chief product. Wheat, barley and rice are also grown, and experiments with cotton are being made. Flowers, pumpkins and vegetables are planted in the date orchards where the palms protect tender leaves below from the scorching summer sun. These green spots are still chiefly confined to the region of the river banks. The rest of the lower valley is swamp or treeless plain.

"At some distance from the settled districts roving bands of Arabs herd camels and sheep wherever they can find a little grass for grazing. When forage gives out in one spot they fold their brown tents and depart quickly and silently for fresher regions.

Land of Noah and Ali Baba.

"In the spring months when snows are melting on nearby mountain ranges the Tigris and Euphrates become swollen torrents and often overflow their banks and inundate the surrounding country, just as they did in the days of Noah. The new regime is taking active steps in the flood prevention by strengthening river banks in low places and damming up the flow at headwaters. There has been no serious flood since 1919 when the Tigris rose to within a foot of the level of Bagdad and the lower valley became one vast lake wherein man and beast vainly sought for safety."

Builders of Good Will

There was a very notable gathering in St. Louis last week. It was called a "Good Will Congress," and met under the auspices of the World Alliance for International Peace Through the Churches. I like all of those words. You cannot have anything worth while without "good will." Then I am so firmly convinced that, when we remember how many alliances there have been in the world's history for making war, you must have nothing less than a world alliance, if you ever hope for international peace. Added to this is the method of creating this good will, out of which an international peace is to come, "Through the Churches." Is not that just where we must expect "peace and good will" to come?

In 1914 there was a great deal of peace and good will sentiment scattered about in the world, but it was unorganized. It had no definite utterance, or voice of authoritative influence. The artillery, which crashed through the cathedral at Rheims, drowned out the voice of the angels. We must remember, too, that religion was so much occupied with transportation arrangements to another world, that it had greviously neglected conditions in this world. Too often it had made a compromise with pagan commercialism, by which men were allowed to live the life of the jungle six days in the week, if they would bring a tithe of their profits to the altar of the Lord on the Sabbath.

The Danger of War.

This good will congress last week observed with solemn thoughtfulness Armistice day. There was none of the ecstatic joy which marked the celebration nine years ago. Men cannot help comparing the radiant hopes of that first Armistice day, with the conditions of the world today. The map of the world has been greatly altered, but the serious question fronts us, has the spirit of the world changed?

The most discouraging fact about the world today is, that so many people still place their faith in force, and seek to secure their safety by standing armies and well equipped navies. This faith in force is a primitive instinct of our animalism. It is our inheritance from barbarism, which still lingers in the blood like a fever. It is the story of the "tooth and claw," which has not yet been mastered by the spirit. Men still believe in the ancient advice of despair, "in times of peace, prepare for war."

It is disturbing to witness the growth of an exaggerated nationalism in so many of the countries of the world. I mean that type of nationalism, which maintains that the rights and interests of my nation are supreme over the rights and interests of all other nations. We rightly believed that the Prussian slogan, "Germany over all," was a threat and a menace to the peace of the world. We must come to understand that the slogan, "America first," upon the lips of our super-patriots is just as dangerous, and just as disturbing to the other nations. When the sacred passion of patriotism degenerates into a bullying braggadocio, careless of the feelings or rights of others, it ceases to be a virtue, and becomes a national curse. I love our flag so long as its stars mean light for all of the nations, and its blood-red stripes symbolize its willingness to sacrifice for the welcare of all the nations, but when that flag simply trails our trade for the protection of our dollars, it ceases to be an emblem of the patriotism of our fathers.

The men and women gathered in St. Louis last week found their faith in the possibility of a warless world, not in force, but in their faith in God as Father of all men, and in all men as brothers in one human family. But that faith is not to pause in pious platitudes. It must become leagued in councils of reason, where conflicting interests must be harmonized, and where it must become clearly revealed that the interests of one are the interests of all. The responsibility of the churches is not political. Their task is to create a spirit of good will and fellowship, within which political alliances are to be formed.

NEW YORK SKYLINE

The City Nobody Knows, And Its Name Is Brooklyn—Can It Be That Santa Wears Padding?—The Great Peanut Controversy.

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

New York, November 12.—Brooklyn, largest borough of Greater New York, covering about 100 square miles, is seldom solved, geographically speaking, by anybody. Few living men can find their way around in it, and that includes residents.

Seasoned New Yorkers, when bound for a new address in Brooklyn, either get careful and detailed instructions or go straight to the policeman in the shanty in the shadow of the west end of Brooklyn bridge. He has been telling people all his life how to get to places in Brooklyn, but he almost always consults a book before answering.

In the last five years Brooklyn has gained 222,000 population and Manhattan has lost 407,103. This means that business and congestion are crowding residents out of Manhattan, and that many of them are taking homes far out in Brooklyn. Unlike Manhattan, this booming borough is a city of private, individual dwellings, 186,550 of them, although in certain sections the private dwelling is fast giving way to the apartment house.

PLEBIAN STREETS PATRICIAN NAMES.

Bleecker, Beekman, Roosevelt, Delancey and Monroe are fine old names in the history of New York, and long ago they were given to what were then the best streets in the city.

Years passed, the first families that inhabited such streets moved away, and insensibly the social standing of the streets diminished. Nowadays no Roosevelts live on Roosevelt street, or anywhere near it. The present residents of the streets with pure old Dutch and English names have the family names of the new immigration.

The old, first-family names grow in prestige so far as the descendants of these old-timers are concerned, but as applied to streets they have taken on a tone sadly plebian.

SOPHISTICATED DUMMIES.

The latest in store window dummies is much less than a rag and a bone and a hank of hair. It consists solely of a cloak or gown thrown upon a display rack, with a metal neck and impressionistic head protruding from the top.

This head is scarcely more than a disc that suggests a bob. Two slits, one for mouth, one for eyes, suffice for features.

One shop has a dummy historical show in the window. The new-style dummies, sophisticated, sketchy, and somehow extremely effective in making the clothes appear nifty, are placed alongside of the old-fashioned dummies, in close imitation of the female form divine, with wax heads, pink cheeks, real hair, and eyes unutterably dumb.

DON'T BE HELD UP.

"What would you do," inquired Captain Ralph Micelli, who teaches 17,000 police how to shoot, "if on a dark street, on a dark night, you felt the cold muzzle of a gun against your back, and heard a gruff voice give orders?"

"Anything the gruff voice said," declared the Sky-Liner, with no sense of shame whatever.

"Unnecessary," asserted Captain Micelli. "Now try it on me and see what I do."

The captain whirled quickly, twisting the muzzle clear of his body, and wrested the weapon from this experimental holdup man.

"That's what we teach the police. Never fear a revolver, we tell them. Beat the holdup man at his own game. Take his gun away from him. Simple, if you use your head and don't get scared."

The Sky-Liner sticks to his original reply.

THE PEANUT CRISIS.

With the calmness of indifference the general public here has received a recent order from Park Commissioner Herrick, that hereafter all peanuts entering Central Park must first be shelled, because the shells, which are eaten by the elephant and hippopotami, make a dreadful litter.

The public is unaware that this order may revolutionize the business of Lomberg Brothers, who have the park peanut concession. A cardinal principle of this business has been to put 20 peanuts in a bag. Twenty peanuts with shells don't look like anything. Will the public stand for it? Must the price or number of peanuts be increased.

Time will tell. It is a big question, affecting, on a good Sunday, 500,000 visitors to the park, about 20,000 pigeons in the park, an untold number of squirrels, and a score of monkeys.

Lomberg Brothers' business began 25 years ago, when one brother peddled from a basket. Now they pay $30,000 a year for the park concession, and maintain 20 stands. Nobody outside the trade knows that their office is right under the carousel or merry-go-round.

SANTA CLAUS A STUFFED SHIRT.

Enter Santa Claus, more than a month early, in a department store play where the old fellow is represented as getting married. He and the wife live in a magic house in the toy department of this Fifth avenue emporium.

It sounds pretty and innocent enough, unless parents catch the sinister propaganda in certain lines that Santa Claus has to say. He tells the children that since he has a wife he will be able to accomplish far more work, so no child need hesitate to ask for all he wants, with full expectation of getting it.

The store Santa Claus is obtained, alas, through an employment agency, and his job comes under the dull head of promotion work. He takes his store throne early in November, to get the shopping under way, and often he is a thin man, well padded.

TWO NEW YORK WOMEN.

One, a famous author, is most particular about taxicabs. They must be clean. This woman has been seen to hail one taxicab after another, climb in and look around, climb out again, tell the driver his cab won't do, and bid him be gone. She rented the apartment over her own to have quiet, leaving it empty when she couldn't get tenants noiseless enough to suit her.

The second woman, 73, makes friends of all the young people in the neighborhood, and has them in to bridge parties. When she finds a young man and young woman whom she considers well matched, they are invited as the only young guests in company of persons all past their fifties. So placed, youth falls in love with itself.

Oglethorpe's Growth Told as Atlanta Is Asked To Match Lupton's Last $250,000

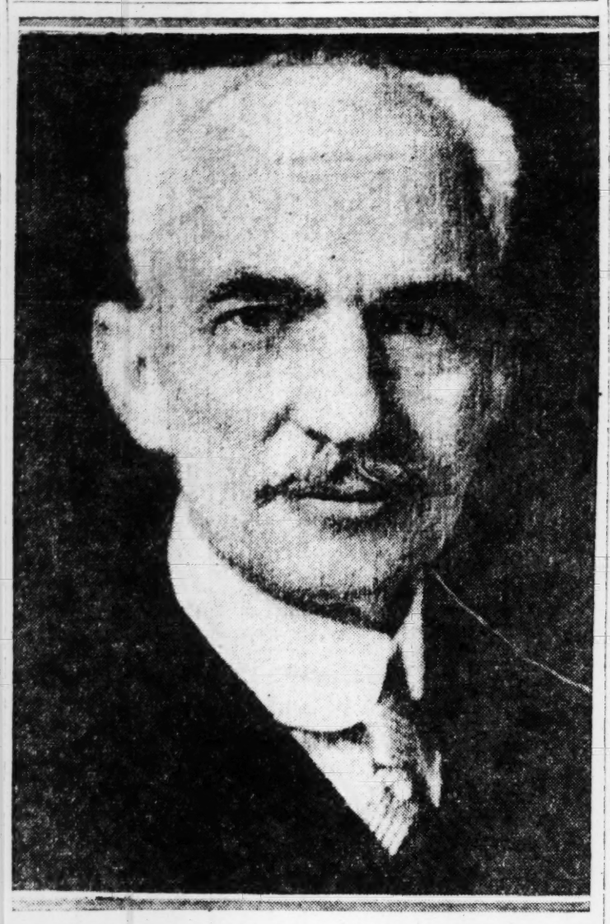

University's President Outlines Aims and Struggle Without Suitable Endowment Fund.

A page of striking photographs taken on the campus of Oglethorpe university appears this morning in the rotogravure section. The beauty of the university grounds and the architecture of the buildings make Oglethorpe one of the sight-seeing spots of Atlanta as well as one of the south's most interesting institutions of higher education.

BY THORNWELL JACOBS,
President of Oglethorpe University.

Because Oglethorpe university had made such good use of $400,000 which he had already given them and because of the remarkable accomplishments of the university during the ten years since he made his first contribution, J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga, Tenn., has offered Oglethorpe the sum of $250,000 to be used for further development and endowment, provided, however, that the city of Atlanta give an equal sum. This puts before Atlanta the most unusual proposition in her history, for here is a man who is not an Atlantan, not even a citizen of Georgia, who challenges single handed, the generosity of the greatest city in the southeast toward one of her own institutions. Although all of the money is to be spent in and for Atlanta, this prince of men in Chattanooga, offers to match our city, dollar for dollar, in building a memorial to the founder of our commonwealth. No such proposition has ever been made to this city before nor does the record show that any Atlantan or Georgian has ever made such a proposition to any other city outside the state.

Doubtless the compelling motive for the amazing generosity shown by Mr. and Mrs. Lupton in their munificent offer of a quarter of a million dollars to Oglethorpe was their conviction that the time had come for Oglethorpe university to have an endowment. They knew what the general public is unaware of, namely that Oglethorpe university is the only standard college in America that is trying to live without an endowment. All of the better eastern and western universities have large sums invested in safe securities and use the interest only to pay their annual deficits, for they spend in many instances as much as a thousand dollars on each student in addition to the amount paid by the student to the college. Some of these institutions have endowments running into tens of millions. The general average in the United States is $465 per student spent by the college in excess of the sum paid by the student. Even our southern colleges in many cases spend $250 to $300 on the student in addition to what he pays. If Oglethorpe university were to do so it would involve an annual deficit between one and two hundred thousand dollars, which would mean the closing of the institution almost immediately. Oglethorpe has been run so efficiently that its annual deficit per student has been less than one hundred dollars, but even this small deficit has to be taken care of and as the college has had no endowment whatsoever, the annual deficits have necessarily accumulated until the time has come when they must be paid. Mr. Lupton, knowing this and desiring to see the institution firmly and permanently established, has offered Atlanta this magnificent contribution, sufficient to pay all obligations and leave Oglethorpe with a nice little endowment as a nest egg for further growth.

J. T. Lupton, Chattanooga philanthropist who, in addition to $400,000 already given by him and Mrs. Lupton to Oglethorpe university, now donates $250,000 more, provided a similar amount is subscribed toward a much-needed endowment.

Makes First Gift.

Another thing that impressed Mr. Lupton greatly was that at the beginning of her life the University should have so carefully and farsightedly laid its plans to become an institution that would rank among the greatest of America. When he saw the first building erected, now called the Administration building, a structure into which he had put $10,000, his first gift, he was so pleased with its architecture and construction that he remarked, "It is a pity for a building like this to stand alone on a campus. It should have a mate." During the following years he proceeded to build a mate, which now stands just opposite the other. Both the buildings are built of blue granite trimmed with limestone and covered with varigated slates. Both are of fireproof construction and are unsurpassed for excellency of appointment. The Administration building houses the dining hall and kitchen, the bursar's office, the postoffice and a number of class rooms, the infirmary and something like forty dormitory rooms. Lupton hall houses the basketball court, swimming pool, University Press, library, executive offices, some ten class rooms and dormitory space for about thirty men. In this building also is the founder's room in which, on a limestone lectern, is the founder's book, containing the names of all the men, women and children who have aided in the building of the university. In the tower of Lupton hall are the clock and chimes, given to the university by Mrs. Grace Josephine Lesh, of Boston. In the library reading room are hung the portraits of Generad and Madam Oglethorpe, presented to the university by Mrs. J. M. High and secured when the president was in England in 1923. The portrait of Madam Oglethorpe is believed to be the only one in existence and is a priceless possession of the university.

Lupton hall consists of three separate structures. One of them, the first to be erected, was given by Mr. Lupton in memory of his mother; the second was given in honor of his son, Cartter, and the third was erected in honor of his wife. Together they constitute what is probably the handsomest college building in the southern states and one that is not excelled either in dignity or beauty by any college structure on earth. Since the erection of Lupton hall, Colonel and Mrs. Robert J. Lowry gave the university Lowry hall, which houses the Lowry School of Banking and Commerce. This building has an interest that few in America have. It is a replica in stone of Old Corpus Christi college, Oxford, England, alma mater of General James Edward Oglethorpe, founder of Georgia. Over the easternmost entrance doorway hangs a wroughtiron lantern, an exact replica of one that lighted the doorways of Old Corpus Christi when Oglethorpe was a student there. Above the doorway is the coat-of-arms of Corpus, which is also a replica of that over the doorway of the college building at Oxford. Both of these were made in England, another gift of Colonel and Mrs. Lowry to the university. For fineness of outline, excellence of construction and beauty of architecture no building on any American campus excells Lowry hall. Taken with Lupton hall and the Administration building it forms a wonderful trio. As illustrations of what Oglethorpe university is to be in the future when 16 such buildings stand on her campus they offer to all friends of the university a wonderful vision of beauty and usefulness.

Student Body Grows.

But in addition to the buildings themselves Mr. Lupton was perhaps even more impressed with the student body of the university. In the year 1914 when Mr. Lupton first became interested in Oglethorpe there was not a single student in sight. During the following years he watched the student body grow. In 1916 there were some 45, which number was reduced by the war in 1917 to about 35. These had grown to nearly a hundred in 1918 and have increased steadily since, until this year the total enrollment for 1927-28 will approximate 500. But it was not so much the number as the quality and activities of these boys that impressed Mr. Lupton. For example, Oglethorpe university is the only college for men in the southern states whose undergraduate students both write and enact their own dramas. In one notable instance a sister institution has done some very fine work in original drama but this work is participated in by the faculty, the townspeople and in fact citizens all over the state. At Oglethorpe it is exclusively an undergraduate activity. Each year three of the best plays are presented at the leading Atlanta theater before a capacity audience at regular theater prices and the students use the proceeds for the further equipment and development of drama at the university. Their success in this activity has been so phenomenal that other southern colleges are now beginning to follow their example.

Another unusual development in student life at Oglethorpe is the University Press. In the basement of Lupton hall stands an excellently equipped printing plant, given to Oglethorpe by Dr. J. D. Jacobs, brother of the president. It consists of a beautiful Optimus Babcock press, a linotype machine, a couple of smaller presses and the other customary equipment necessary for the operation of such a plant. This seems simple enough but it is a most unusual fact that this plant is probably the only one of its kind in the south for it prints not only the stationery, catalogues, view booklets, etc., for the university but also the college papers, college annual and has recently undertaken the printing and publishing of textbooks and volumes of popular literature and science. The first book of the sort to be published was the New Science and Old Religion, a beautifully illustrated series of popular lectures on that subject written by the president of the university and used by him as a textbook in the senior class of Cosmic History. This book is being sold literally all over the United States. The second volume to be printed is a volume of poems by Charles W. Hubner, distinguished and beloved Atlantan. It comes from the press in the next few weeks. It is entitled "Poems of Faith and Consolation." Another valume of poems is in press and will be published early in 1928. The point that interested Mr. Lupton in this story is that all of the work is done by Oglethorpe students, the foreman himself being an expert printer and a graduate of the university. The Oglethorpe University Press, while young and small is one of the same sort and quality as those of Harvard, Yale and Princeton and other eastern and western universities.

High Scholastic Standard.

Another reason Mr. Lupton assigns for such unusual generosity to Oglethorpe is the knowledge of the quality of instruction which is given at the institution. After all a university is just a housing arrangement whereby the student is brought under the influence of great teachers. It is, of course, impossible to estimate greatness but one can get a fair idea of the quality of the teachers by careful investigation. Every man who is at the head of a department at Oglethorpe university has received the highest degree offered in the world in that department. Some time ago the librarian of the university made a very careful check, designed to show the proportion of members of the faculty in various outstanding southern and eastern universities whose names are to be found in Who's Who in America. The proportion ranged from 3 per cent to 57 per cent and of the entire list the highest was that of Oglethorpe, 57 per cent of whose faculty was listed in the book of distinguished Americans.

Mr. Lupton has always been interested in college sports. In the early days when Oglethorpe was losing game after game he used to watch the boys play and at the close of one disastrous season presented them with a silver loving cup on which is inscribed a tribute from him to their "unconquerable spirit and clean sportsmanship." In later years when Johnny Know and Adrian Maurer were scoring on the best teams of the country at will, he took special delight in watching their games. It is ever to be regretted that he was not able to be present at the time when Oglethorpe finally succeeded in winning over Tech, this last being the culmination of what is doubtless the most unique series of scores in American football history. For seven successive games Oglethorpe gradually drew nearer and nearer the victory. First it was 55 to 0, then 44 to 0, then 35 to 6, then 28 to 3, then 19 to 0, then 13 to 7, and finally Oglethorpe won 7 to 6.

But before there was an Oglethorpe campus or any Oglethorpe buildings on it or any Oglethorpe students in them of any faculty to teach the students, Mr. Lupton was interested in the story of the old Oglethorpe. In all the history of American educational institutions there has never been written a more charming chapter, interwoven with real romance and moral beauty, than the story of the birth and death of old Oglethorpe university.

Coming Back Rapidly.

And rarely has there been in America a finer illustration of the immortality of high ideals than is exhibited in her resurrection from the gray ashes of fratricidal strife to her present position of honor and power among her sisters. She is unique among standard institutions of learning in that she, alone, having died for her ideals, has also been raised from the dead. For today on Peachtree road she is rapidly arising as one of the most beautiful universities in the whole world.

The story goes back a long way to a man and his friend, the man an English gentleman of titled descent, the friend an artist, an author, who, having published a very beautiful and expensive book on architecture and begin unable to meet the costs was thrown into the smallpox ward of a debtor's dungeon, and died there. From his death there sprung a high resolve on the part of his friend to purify the whole wretched prison system of England which later, by a path that every Georgian knows, led to the founding of the largest commonwealth of the United States, east of the Mississippi river by James Edward Oglethorpe in the earlier part of the eighteenth century. In memory of this most remarkable figure, there was founded about one century after he founded Georgia—the first Christian college or university between the Atlantic and the Pacific, south of the Virginia line which, for approximately one half century did its marvelous work in Georgia, not only, but was, and of a right claim to be, mother of that fine company of southern institutions of learning which combined religion with scientific and literary instruction.

To tell her story properly it will be necessary for us to go back to the early years of the nineteenth century when a group of Georgians, composed of members of all faiths and churches organized the Georgia Education society whose avowed purpose was to give a Christian education to every white boy in the south. This was in 1823, years before Atlanta was founded, at a time when in all that vast expanse of territory between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, south of Virginia, there was not a single college for men under distinctively religious auspices. Before they had finished their task, they had founded three great institutions in their own state, to be followed later by many similar ones throughout the whole south. One of these was Mercer, now located at Macon; another was Emory, formerly at Oxford, now in Atlanta. But the first of the three to be established, with the finest buildings, the largest student body, the ablest faculty and heaviest endowment was old Oglethorpe, located on Midway hill in Milledgeville. Being first in the field and having the choice of names, they named it for the founder of the state, James Edward Oglethorpe, the man who ranks with William Penn, and Lord Baltimore was perhaps the greatest of the three individual founders of American commonwealths.

Became First Governor.

He was the only titled Englishman before the revolution to become a citizen of the American colonies. He was the first governor of Georgia. He was the first great American general and naval commander—as his war with the Spanish in Florida proved. Before there was a practical prohibitionist in America he forbade the sale of whisky in his colony, and before there was an Anglo-American entente, he, having been offered the leadership of British arms to subdue the colonies, declined the honor, saying that he would not fight against his fellow countrymen. Having the choice of situations, Oglethorpe university was located in the then capital of the state, Milledgeville. Having the field largely to himself with respect to faculty and students, a most unusual collection of teachers was gathered on Old Midway hill. There was Samuel K. Talmadge, uncle of the eloquent T. Dewitt Talmadge, who served as president of the university a full quarter of a century, famous as one of the great administrators of the south. There was James Woodrow, uncle of Woodrow Wilson, and one of the most brilliant instructors Georgia has ever known, from whom Sidney Lanier said that he received the greatest moral impulse of his life. There was Joseph LeConte, who, with Louis Agassiz, ranks as one of the greatest geologists that America has ever produced, and there was the immortal Sidney Lanier, founder of pure literature in the southern states, who entered Oglethorpe in 1857 at the age of 15 and who was graduated in 1860 with the highest honors, accepting the position of tutor for the coming year and then leaving with the Oglethorpe cadets when they went out to the war. For when the war came the boys all went into the army; the money went into Confederate bonds, the faculty was dispersed; the buildings used for barracks and hospital and finally burned, so that after the war there was no more an Oglethorpe. She alone of all the standard institutions of the nation had died for her ideals. The story of Oglethorpe means infinitely more than the way in which Atlanta became possessed of a fine university. It is the story of the immortality of the ideal which is an illustration of the way in which the beautiful thing persists to influence the lives of men, for here, in the city whose name Oglethorpe never heard and of whom Lanier knew little, is being gathered the most precious heritage of all Georgia—the legacies left by her two best citizens, James Oglethorpe, her founder, and Sidney Lanier, her poet. For they are centering on their campus three great traditions. One is that inimitable excellence of statecraft and philanthropy exhibited by James Edward Oglethorpe, cleanser of the prisons of England and founder of the commonwealth of Georgia. The second is the tradition that clusters around the incomparable Lanier, first of that sweet chorus of southern singers whose word music breathes the same principle of magnanimity and generosity and love. From Oglethorpe they draw the inspiration of humanitarianism and wisdom in politics and government. From Lanier they win their ideals of literature and art. For this Oglethorpe boy, alone among the southern-born, has won his right to sit down with the nine immortals of American literature—Bryant, Longfellow, Emerson, Lowell, Whittier, Holmes, Whitman, Poe and Lanier. His diploma hangs over the desk of the president and his spirit hovers over the campus of his alma mater. The third is the spirit of the university itself, into which is gathered all the love of the invisible, intangible and inaudible greatness of the past and the splendid generosity of spirit, the elegance of soul and the purity of sentiment of her Lanier and Oglethorpe and to which is added the utter abandon of love of the new worlds of science and discovery which is a perpetual gift of God to each generation and all the solid conviction of the essential sinfulness of veneer and sham or anything short of the absolute truth which is so well expressed in her architecture and construction and management.

Looking Ahead.

Two men were standing in the great hall of the Administration building of Oglethorpe university. They had been looking at the beautifully caved oak rooms; the heavy quartered oak furniture, the leaded glass work, the sturdy tiling, the attractive lighting system and the beautiful limestone fireplace with the inscription carved on it:

"Square round and let us closer be,
We'll warm our wintry spirit;
The good we each in other see
The more that we sit near it."

The visitors turned to the president of the new institution and remarked: "Doctor, you have spent enough extra money on this great hall alone to educate 100 men! Why have you done it?"

"Because we plan to educate 100,000 men with it," replied the president.

That is the keynote to Oglethorpe university. The purpose of the founders of the institution is to build a school which will express all the fine qualities of a great human soul in its architecture, equipment and appointments.

So they are putting into these buildings everything that the faculty teaches in their class rooms—dignity, durability, solidity, permanence, honesty, reliability, reverence and beauty are all in the face of the buildings just as splendidly reflected as they are in the face of any man. These really wonderful structures are built of steel and stone, as fireproof as human skill can make them. The partitions are of brick and hollow tile. The wooden surface floors are set in concrete. The public rooms are finished in quartered oak. The lighting system is indirect, there being no light in the whole building that shines in any eye, everywhere from the electric refrigerating plant to the marble shower baths, the idea has been that each building is the dean of the faculty, is itself a teacher and by its silent, irresistible influence is to set the ideals of its inmates as high as human thought has yet risen.

Of course, the dream is still incomplete. The assets of Oglethorpe at the time of this writing are in amount of approximately a million and a half dollars, including subscriptions in process of collection, buildings with their equipment and campus of 155 acres of land, the westernmost line of which borders upon an 82-acre lake, including a number of smaller temporary buildings and Hermance stadium, now in process of construction, perhaps the only granite one in America, with a seating capacity of approximately the same as the Coliseum at Rome. Oglethorpe needs many things—more dormitories, laboratories and equipment. More than any other one thing she needs endowment. Some day she must have a Lanier school of expressive arts, literature, poetry, sculpture, painting and music whereby the soul of man gives back to the world the result of its milleniums of growth. Many other departments must be added until all that has been dreamed of and prayed for and worked toward shall have been accomplished, which doubtless, while men remain men and God remains wise, will never completely happen. For, after all, the philosophy of human life is not different from the way we have expressed it on the entrance of our first building:

"A search is the thing he hath taught you
For height and for depth and for wideness."

Too Late

By Ernest Neal,
Poet-Laureate of Georgia.

There came to my window one morning in spring.
A mother bird's cry from a heart distressed;
In vain had she fought with fluttering wing
'Gainst a snake with its fangs in her nest.
Alas, poor bird! too late you found
Your nest was built too near the ground.

There are woes in the world like the wails of that bird,
Under-tones in the noise of the marts;
At the show, at the dance they may not be heard,
But mutter and flutter in poor broken hearts;
For serpents of hell fatten and grow
On the nestlings of homes that are built too low.

Atlanta's Public Schools

What They Are Doing; What They Are Trying To Do.

This is the second of a series of articles on the Atlanta public school system, prepared under the direction of the Personnel Association of Atlanta, and published with the view of informing the parents of pupils and the general public on a subject of prime importance. The entire system, from kindergarten to high school, will be discussed.

Officers and teachers of Atlanta's public schools, a veritable army of skilled educators, are not chosen at haphazard. There are no places for men who have failed in everything else and who have turned to teaching as an "easy job," nor for women who have had no training of any kind and must find some way to make a living. The teacher of today must be equipped for the task. Those who pass the preliminary tests and fail to demonstrate ability soon are weeded out. Those who do prove ability are protected by civil service regulations and are certain of their places. There is no "politics" or "patronage" in the teaching staff, and no teacher need curry favor of influential parent or city politician to hold a place or receive promotion. That has not always been true, but it has been the case for some years. It is the result of the general sentiment that whatever factional disputes may take place over school finances and physical improvements, the teachers must not be handicapped by politics.

Jobs Made Secure.

Under the rules of the board of education, "all teachers shall be chosen with reference to educational, moral and physical fitness, and after having been once employed as a permanent teacher, shall serve during good behavior and efficient service." This applies to principals, assistant principals, department heads, directors and supervisors. It is the policy of the board to elect young teachers.

Requirement for entrance into Atlanta's teaching staff are rigorous. Teachers in elementary schools must hold a diploma from a standard four-year high school and a certificate of graduation from a standard two-year normal school, or a baccalaureate degree from a standard college and eighteen semester hours in education.

Teachers in junior and senior high schools must hold a baccalaureate degree from a standard college and in addition must have had two years of successful experience in junior or senior high school work, and eleven semester hours in education.

During their first years of service, all teachers are "on probation," and are elected from year to year. After that time, teachers are considered permanent and cannot be dropped without specific reasons and after a hearing if they request it.

Constant Education Necessary.

But the teacher who feels contented with having attained a safe place on the list will find himself—or herself—slipping rapidly behind the others. Atlanta teachers keep on going to school, keep on learning more and more about the profession.

The Atlanta teacher must keep abreast of the science of teaching, by attending the normal school during the week before the fall term opens, going to summer school during vacation time; and frequently taking a year's leave of absence for training in some university.

To encourage this, and to meet in part the expenses of these courses, the board of education offers increased salaries to teachers who take such summer courses and complete other special work.

There are automativ increases in salary as teachers complete certain periods of service and those going with promotions, and, after the maximum has been attained, an additional $150 a year is added to the salaries of teachers who have attained a master's degree.

Great Educational "Plant."

The public schools of Atlanta have been referred to as a great educational "plant," and in one sense of the word the term is well applied. For every year there is received a fresh supply of raw material, the children who have not learned their A. B. C.'s, who must gradually be carried through all the processes of education until they are graduated from the high schools.

In a city of Atlanta's population, which sends more than 60,000 children to the public schools, this "plant" must necessarily be organized to a high degree. There must be system, and yet that system must be so flexible that it will not force every child to "go through the mill" in exactly the same way as every other child. There must be a study of the individual, of his ability and adaptability. The exceptionally bright child must not be held back to the average; the dull boy or girl must not be forced to speed up to keep pace with the others. The "mill" must not grind all alike.

So, in addition to the regular classes, there must be special classes for the unusual children. Too, there must be special schools for special needs. Vocational education is making greater strides, for there is a growing demand that children, after they have mastered the rudiments, must be taught something specific, given a start toward a business, a profession, or a trade.

Other Special Schools.

There must be night schools for special needs, "opportunity schools" for grown-ups whose education has been neglected; technical training in various lines. There are high schools for boys and girls offering academic courses; a technical high school for boys; a commercial high school for both sexes. There are schools and classes for the deficient, classes for the deaf, classes for the blind. All of these will be discussed in later articles.

Atlanta's public school system was outgrown years ago. It always has been overcrowded, in spite of steady additions of new buildings and enlargements of old structures. "Portables" are in use in many schools; double sessions are being held in the negro schools. For the school population appears to keep steadily ahead of the physical growth of the great "plant."

School bonds to the extent of $3,500,000 were voted by the people of Atlanta more than a year ago, but up to this time through various causes, not a brick has been laid from that fund. By the time it is expended, the system probably will be outgrown again. Atlanta people are proud of their city's growth; they must be prepared to pay for the growth of the school system in at least equal proportions.

1,376 on Total Roster.

At this time, the white public schools are employing 54 principals, nine assistant principals, 985 teachers, 19 clerks and six librarians, or a total of 1,073. In the negro schools are 14 principals, two assistants, 280 teachers, and one clerk, a total of 303. In addition there are numerous janitors, repair men, employees of various types, necessary for the operation of the big enterprise. There are 76 separate school units, many of them with more than one building.

Even the total of nearly 1,400 teachers in the white and negro schools is not sufficient, in the opinion of the administrative heads, to bring the most efficient results. It was found necessary for financial reasonst his year to reduce the number, not by discharges but by failing to elect new teachers to fill vacancies, and as a result the classes taught by each teachers are considered far too large for the greatest efficiency.

At the head of the school administration, elected for a three-year term by the board of education, is the superintendent of schools, the present superintendent being Willis A. Sutton. He is the chief executive officer and the administrative head of all departments and responsible for their efficient management.

Three Assistant Superintendents.

There are three assistant superintendents: R. R. Ritchie, in charge of all business affairs; H. Reid Hunter, in charge of senior and junior high schools, and Miss Mary W. Postell, directing the elementary schools. They are elected for three-year terms.

Under business affairs are included the maintenance and operation of the school plant, the scientific development of the building program, the purchase and distribution of text books, and all accounting. Purchases of supplies and equipment must be conducted under competitive bidding. Specified important expenditures must be authorized by the board of education.

Next to the assistant superintendent are the directors of census and attendance, visual education and testing and guidance, manual arts, drawing and handwork, health education, music, evening school and Smith-Hughes education. The last-named field covers the technical training schools operated under governmental assistance.

The director of census and attendance issues all tickets of admisison of pupils, sees that non-resident pupils pay their fees, fixes the boundaries of the school districts, secures attendance of children under the compulsory attendance law, and keeps up an accurate census of pupils. Under his direction are the attendance officers.

There are supervisors of kindergarten and elementary grades, and also of such special branches as music, physical education, drawing and handwork, nature study, penmanship, ungraded classes, shops and mechanical drawing and home economics, chosen for special ability in their respective fields. They supervise and instruct all teachers, in private and in teachers' meetings.

A later article will discuss the greatest problem of the school system—the school finances, how the money is raised and how it is invested in educating the child.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

CATARRH IS A MYTH.

Every night my mother and I read your articles in our paper with great interest, and we usually agree with you. Tonight, however, you say there is no such ailment as catarrh. I have been hard of hearing for 10 years and the doctors called it catarrhal deafness. The deafness certainly is not imaginary, and I have not consulted any quacks either, but good reputable physicians in this city and in (another city). I have also attended the —— school of lip reading and met many deaf people. Most of them had what they called catarrhal deafness, all with the same symptoms as myself, i. e. noises in the head and a strong susceptibility to those things which you say are not colds. What I am getting at is, if this kind of deafness is not catarrhal, what is it? It has to have some name.

Although only 23 years old, I have lost the use (I don't know the technical terms) of the auditory nerve—it went on strike suddenly about nine months ago, so that I am totally deaf. I am not trying to get a free diagnosis, but should like to know if there is no way that the nerve could be reawakened, or is it useless for me to spend further money on doctors? The last one said he could not help me, but if there is any chance of recovering even part of my hearing I would keep on going to the doctor indefinitely. Last December I had 40 per cent hearing.

Your articles are always interesting, and it seems good to meet a really frank doctor who tells the truth regardless of what people may think or say. Thank you, and good luck to you and your column.

P. S.—Now that I think it over I'm not positive the doctors said I had catarrhal deafness—it was something about the nasal sinuses. But it seems to me that catarrh is as good a name as another, and it has to have some name.

In view of the obstinacy with which many of the medical brethren cling to the "catarrh" myth, I hope readers will understand that it adds nothing to my popularity when I say there is no such condition, disease, entity as "catarrh." There is in the medical profession a very rare body of men, general practitioners as well as specialists, men of high standing, capable men, who resent it, when I make this sweeping assertion, quite as much as do the downright mail order quacks and flim-flam artists who exploit customers who prefer to think there is such a disease, condition or entity as "catarrh."

Never before have I imagined or implied that persons who believe their trouble is due to "catarrh" merely imagine there is something the matter. That would be—well, never mind—one controversy at a time and that conducted in a friendly way, is my rule. But all I want victims of the "catarrh" delusion to understand is that they cannot hope to get anywhere as long as they accept "catarrh" as an adequate explanation for what ails 'em. To that I would add that in my judgment those general medical practitioners and specialists who still tell patients they have "catarrh" never get anywhere, either, and in my judgment they cling to this myth for the very reason they have no desire or ambition to get anywhere—they're content to string patients along on the present aimless plan. Once you get this "catarrh" delusion thoroughly planted, there is small chance to win free from it, unless you are still young like the correspondent.

I know physicians and even the medical authors still speak glibly about "catarrhal" deafness and "catarrhal" conditions of the nose, throat and other structures, but they don't mean anything by it. They have no definite idea in mind when they use that word—they just use it in parrot fashion, and they can't tell you precisely what they do mean by it. Of course they can't because it is utterly meaningless—today. An age ago perhaps the term "catarrh" conveyed some particular idea, but it doesn't today, and it is slovenly, thoughtless and surely unscientific for physicians to use the term in this connection at present—aside from the effect this slovenly habit has upon the trade plied by mail order swindlers and disreputable quacks.

"Catarrh" Is an Ingrowing "Cold."

The other term the young woman neatly introduces into the dispute is unfortunately bound up with this same obsolete idea. "Catarrh" is derived from a Greek word meaning a flow or a running down, and unfortunately (for our purposes) the term also mean "rheum"—"rheumatism" being still a third popular ailment which I insist does not happen—so, then, "catarrh" is just an ingrowing or chronic or more or less permanent or oft-recurring "cold"—and alack and alas, I am quite certain there is no such ailment or indisposition as a "cold"—indeed, the argument is most baffling. It is up to me to prove a negative, and that's something the philosophers say is extremely difficult to do. Recognizing that I can't do that, I endeavor to find something positive or tangible to take hold of, and to this end I'm forever challenging the doctors who do profess to believe in "catarrh," "colds" and "rheumatism," to produce a case or two and let us examine them. This the doctors very cannily decline to do. They rest their case on the observation, ever popular with the deluded jury, that "everybody knows" what a common cold is, or what catarrh is, or what rheumatism is. And nearly everybody professes to know, but nobody will define such an ailment—certainly no doctor of standing ventures to define what he considers a "common cold," or "catarrh" or "rheumatism," in the way doctors define other or actual diseases, so one may recognize the condition from the description. No health officer who teaches the public to beware of the "common cold" dare publish a definition of the "common cold," not because of little faith on his own part, but because he knows darn well that this individual conception of what the alleged entity is will not jibe at all with the conception of any other health authority. The health authorities have been trying hard to arrive at a concerted program along this line, but so far the concert seems devoid of harmony and their one best bet, when their attitude and teachings are challenged or questioned, is the ever popular song—"Everybody Knows." Probable this ballad owes its popularity to the fact that it flatters everybody.

Getting as close as possible to the essential question, when a doctor takes the trouble (and has the skill and the instrumental equipment necessary) to examine the patient, he can generally find out what is the matter in a case of alleged nasal catarrh. It is useless for me to attempt to enumerate the various conditions an ordinary general practitioner finds when he honestly endeavors to diagnose the trouble and give or advise the proper treatment, but just from ordinary experience I may mention a few such conditions: Adenoid enlargement, thickened turbinate body; a foreign body lodged in the nasal cavity; chronic pus infection of the ethmoid sinus; diphtheria; polyps overlying sinus infection; atrophic rhinitis (shrinking, wasting, so called "dry catarrh"); obviously each of these conditions requires its special remedy—how foolish it would be to use the same remedies or treatment for such diverse conditions, and yet one should if one believes in "catarrh." Would a change of climate remove a bean from a child's nose or a polyp from an adult's? You must believe it would if you believe in "catarrhal trouble."

I hate to acknowledge it, but we're hewing to the truth today, and so it must be admitted that when we pass from the nasal cavity up through the eustachian tube into the ear cavity, the little pea-size attic or cavern which physicians call the middle ear, where the famous hammer, anvil and stirrup are housed, we can't be quite so cocky about the "catarrh" delusion—or at least I can't, for the reason that we, or at least I, do not know the way about, in the less accessible ear cavity as well as we do in the nasal cavity or throat. Still, I make bold to say that when the doctor or specialist tells the patient it is "catarrhal" trouble in the ear, he is just using a noncommittal form of saying he doesn't know what the nature of the trouble is and he doesn't know what remedy or treatment should be applied.

Please do not read into this more than I say. If the doctor or ear specialist doesn't know, certainly no one else does know. It is the fashion for all sorts of cultists and short cut healers to pretend they know about these things, especially when some of use doctors admit we don't know—such an avowal is eagerly seized upon by the vendors of quackery and diverted to their shrewd uses in bamboozling the wise ones.

It is now fairly well understood in the laity that when a doctor tells a patient an illness or indisposition is a "common cold" or "just a cold," the doctor is merely marking time, holding a patient, until the condition develops sufficiently to permit a diagnosis. I am quite confident that no reputable physician or health officer will take issue with this assertion. In like manner, I believe, when the doctor or specialist designates a patient's condition as "catarrh" or "catarrhal" the doctor is just trying to avoid the embarrassment of saying "I really don't know just what the nature of this trouble of yours is" and he is hoping the patient will be content with "catarrh" until such time as medical science may clear away some of the obscurity that still surrounds the diseases of the nose, throat and ear and enable the doctor to determine definitely what is causing the trouble and what remedy or treatment is needed.

"She's a Sheik" Is Bebe Daniels At the Howard

Bebe Daniels, Paramount star, will be chief contributor of laughs to this community this week, when she will be seen in "She's a Sheik," a comedy of desert love and warfare, which opens at the Howard theater.

Critics who have seen "She's a Sheik" pronounce it one of the star's best and this statement is made over the head of Miss Daniels' more recent fun provokers, "Senorita" and "Swim, Girl, Swim," both of which were tremendous hits.

The story deals with the activities of the granddaughter of a sheik who has been educated in America and has some very modern ideas on how to bag a man. Falling in love with a handsome captain of the foreign legion she sets about winning his love in one of the strangest manners ever revealed on the screen. How she finally succeeds makes one of the funniest productions seen in some time, it is said.

The objective of Miss Daniel's attack is Richard Arlen, one of the stars of "Wings," Paramount's epic of the air. This is the first time Arlen has appeared on the screen with the vivacious and athletic Bebe. William Powell is an important member of the supporting cast.

The story of "She's a Sheik" comes from the pen of John McDermott, author of "Senorita." The screen play was written by Lloyd Corrigan, author of "The Campus Flirt, and "Swim, Girl, Swim."

Al Short presents the Publix stage show, "Young America," a new personality revue with first prize winners in the Publix National Opportunity contests of 1927, conducted simultaneously in sixteen cities. Beulah Leavens (Miss Atlanta) is featured. She was selected last May through cooperation with the Constitution as Atlanta's most talented non-professional.

JACK HOLT STARRED IN RIALTO PICTURE

"The Tigress" will open a week of fancy entertainment at the Rialto theater. The stars in "The Tigress," which will grace the program Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, are Jack Holt, one of the leading red-blooded he-men of the screen, and Dorothy Revier, a beautiful recruit to the silent drama.

"The Tigress" will be accompanied by the educational comedy, "Meet the Folks," with Jimmy Adams as the star. The new Paramount news reels will have the latest big news of the day in picture form. There will be views of the Tech-L. S. U. football game of Saturday here and the Georgia-Clemson game in Athens if they are available, as well as pictures of the devastation wrought by the flood of the last week in the New England states.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Rialto will present the film version of the famous dramatic poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, "The Wreck of the Hesperus."

The screen picturization of "The Wreck of the Hesperus" is by DeMille and the all-star cast includes Virginia Bradford, Sam DeGrasse, Alan Hale and Frank Marion. The directorial skill of Elmer Clifton is manifest in some of the most enthralling scenes ever built into a motion picture.

The comedy on the program for the second half of the week is "Wedding Wows," with Bobby Vernon in the comical role.

Paramount news, of course, will have a new release.

Quebec, Quebec.—Quebec's population increased by 6,730 during the past two years, according to the city assessor's report. At the present time there are 131,071 persons resident in the "ancient capital."

ROBERT HICHEN STORY SEEN AT LOEW'S GRAND

One of the year's outstanding pictures, "The Garden of Allah," a magnificent production based on Robert Hichen's great novel, directed by Rex Ingram, will be the feature picture offering this week at Loew's Grand theater. Bringing "The Garden of Allah" here at popular prices is in line with the "big attractions" policy adopted at Loew's Grand, which has brought recently such pictures as "What Price Glory," "The Fair Co-ed" and "7th Heaven." Along with these super-pictures some great vaudeville programs are being offered which are bringing the foremost vaudeville acts of the country.

One lone Trappist monk, the last of a mighty army of silent missionaries to Algiers, is all that Rex Ingram found at La Trappe—the one-time famous retreat of the severest religious order in the world—when he visited there to film the monastery scenes of "The Garden of Allah," his latest picture for Metro-Goldwyn.

It was the first time a clicking camera had ever been heard within its cloistered walls.

It is a hundred years since the Rev. Pere Dom Francois Regis de Martin planted the cross of Christianity at Staouali. He built his monasteries around the historic palms that tower above the buildings to this day.

It was on this "land of saints" that the bloody combat took place June 19, 1830, between the Arabs and the French, which opened the route to Algiers, thereby beginning the French conquest of Northern Africa.

Thirteen years later on this same spot the government gave the Trappist monks a concession of 1,200 hectares, roughly equal to a domain two miles long and two miles wide.

BIG PICTURES BILLED FOR ALAMO 2 SCREEN

Beginning tomorrow the Alama No. 2 theater, on Whitehall street, will offer a daily change of program for the week consisting of some of the biggest pictures to ever reach the screen. Monday only Richard Dix and Bebe Daniels will be seen together with Mary Aster in "Unguarded Women." On Tuesday the picture that took the country by storm will be shown. It is none other than the great "Stella Dallas" featuring Belle Bennett, Ronald Coleman, Alice Joyce, Lois Moran and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Every one is advised to take advantage of this opportunity.

Wednesday will find "Husbands and Lovers" holding the screen with Lewis Stone, Florence Vidor and Lew Cody in the leading roles. Thursday's attraction will be "Greater Than Marriage," featuring Lou Tellegen and Marjory Daw.

Friday's picture is especially recommended for every member of the family, Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate." This entire picture is photographed in natural colors. Saturday will see Madge Bellamy strutting herself in "Ankles Preferred." There will be a special comedy on each program.

'YOUNG AMERICA' UNIT FEATURED AT HOWARD

The Howard presents this week the most unusual array of new talent ever assembled on any stage, it is said. The glittering personality revue to be presented by Al Short, starting tomorrow, is called "Young America," featuring Beulah Leavens (Miss Atlanta), winner last May of the Constitution-Howard opportunity contest—being selected as Atlanta's most talented non-professional.

"Young America" opened at the Paramount theater, New York, and has since toured the entire country, appearing on the stage of the leading Publix houses in the principal cities.

This is said to be one of the most refreshing entertainments of the season, being a sensational combination of youth, beauty, and talent. With "Miss America," 15 other prize-winners will appear on the Howard stage. They were selected simultaneously in the Publix national opportunity contests of 1927.

Besides Atlanta, the 15 cities represented are: New York, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Dallas, DesMoines, Detroit, Houston, Indianapolis, Kansas City, New Haven, New Orleans, Omaha, and San Antonio.

This great stage attraction is in addition to the feature picture, Bebe Daniels in "She's a Sheik." Leading the supporting cast are Richard Arlen and William Powell. Critics who have seen "She's a Sheik," pronounce it one of the star's best, and this statement is made over the head of Miss Daniel's most recent fun provokers, "Senorita" and "Swim, Girl, Swim," both of which were tremendous hits.

THREE ORGANISTS TO SUPPLY MUSIC FOR RIALTO FILMS

Three of Atlanta's foremost organists, Jane Perkins, Carolyn Whitehead and Gladys Powell, have been signed to preside at the great new Wurlitzer organ at the Rialto theater and this week each in turn will present a distinctive musical program at performances of the picture program.

The picture for the first half of the week is "The Tigress," starring Jack Holt and Dorothy Revier, and three distinct types of organ music will be rendered by the three famous artists. The fans will be asked to determine whose presentation is most popular.

The picture for the latter half of the week will be the dramatic spectacle "The Wreck of the Hesperus," and another musical novelty along the same line will be tried. "The Wreck of the Hesperus" will call for the ringing, tremendous music of which only the pipe organ is capable.

An agreement by which the music was brought back to the Rialto was reached last week, and Manager W. T. Murray immediately got busy and engaged the trio of leading organists to entertain Rialto fans while they are enjoying the splendid picture presentations.

The attention of those we dislike is even more than the neglect of our friends.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM FOR PONCE DE LEON

Presenting a big double bill on Tuesday, the Ponce de Leon program this week bids to be one of the most enjoyable seen at the theater in several weeks. The type ranges all the way of heavy drama to the lighter and heavier forms of comedy.

Lon Chaney, the inimitable character actor, opens the week with his masterful portrayal of the name role in "Mr. Wu," which plays Monday only at the Ponce de Leon. On Tuesday there will be a splendid double bill of pictures presented with Colleen Moore's "Twinkletoes" and Charlie Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms" being shown.

Florence Vidor, personable star, will be featured in "The World at Her Feet" on Wednesday at the Ponce de Leon. This is one of Miss Vidor's most enjoyable comedies and should attract large numbers of her stars.

For the two-day run on Thursday and Friday the management has secured "For Heaven's Sake," one of the funniest comedies that Harold Lloyd has ever made. James Oliver Curwood's "The Slaves," will close the week on Saturday.

Tudor.

Buck Jones makes his bow at the Tudor on Thursday when that theater opens with a three-day showing of this particular star's latest pistol opera.

The story is from the pen of Charles Alden Seltzer, one of the best-known and best-liked authors of western stories. It is called "Chain Lightning," and is the story of one Steve (Flash) Lannon, erstwhile gunman, who has left the range and gone to San Francisco in an effort to live down his reputation as a killer, but who returns to his ranch to protect his property and make a final cleanup of the brigands who ruled the country.

It is a fastmoving, spectacular story, and the star makes good on his reputation as one of the best of western actors.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the Tudor offers the revival of "Nomads of the North," one of James Oliver Curwood's most vivid tales of the northland. Lon Chaney, just then emerging into screen prominence, has the leading role of the outlander who fought like a madman for life and a woman. Lewis Stone, Betty Blythe, Francis McDonald and other now important screen players appear in the picture.

Some men run a business along the lines of the man who used a cannon for shooting mice.

Alamo No. 1

Buffalo Bill, Jr., starts the week in "The Desert Demon." This is a story of love's trials overcome by a man fighting for his honor and innocense.

Whizzing like a rocket across the silver screen—loaded with TNT dramas—packed with laughing gas—jammed with thrills—crowded with cyclonic action—Johno Wells, formerly known as Pawnee Bill, Jr., in his thriller of thrillers, "Arizona Speed."

Friday and Saturday Leo Maloney in "The Long Loop on the Pecos" gives us a story of the west in the days when each man was a law unto himself, when the bark of the gun was the voice of the law. Leo Maloney shaves and changes horses to get a job on the ranch of his enemy to avenge the death of his brother. Soon he is discovered and the sharpest of gunmen is sent to get him, but he failed. This picture has beat any yet put out by Leo Maloney and should not be missed.

'The Crystal Cup' Plays All Week At Metropolitan

Starting tomorrow a tense and highly dramatic story, marked by splendid direction and well drawn characterizations will open at the Metropolitan theater.

Based on the daring novel of the same name by Gertrude Atherton, "The Crystal Cup" is probably one of the most unusual stories ever filmed.

Its basic plot motif concerns a sensitive, impressionable girl, who goes through a terrible experience early in her life, and who is so deeply impressed and so frightened by it, that its influence never completely leaves her.

Dorothy Mackaill in the featured feminine role, gives a performance of unusual depth and sincerity. It is said that she has never been seen on the screen to better advantage. Jack Mulhall, in the opposite role, gives a well-modulated performance of a wholly dramatic nature, in direct contrast to the many humorous roles he has played lately, demonstrating definitely the remarkable versatility which is his.

Rockcliffe Fellows, Jane Winton, Edythe Chapman and Clarissa Selwynne deserve mention for their prominent supporting roles.

Enrico Leide has arranged a special love theme for "The Crystal Cup" entitled "You Only Want Me When You Are Lonesome."

Palace.

"The Way of All Flesh" with Emil Jannings opens the program at the Palace this week showing Monday and Tuesday. Life has but two paths, the right and the wrong. One leads to happiness, the other points the way of all flesh.

See the moving drama of a man who thought himself a lion of strength but who was really very weak. The drama of a man who turned to the left and left his life behind him. See Emil Jannings' first American-made production. It will thrill you. Wednesday, one day only, a great Peter B. Kyne story, "Breed of the Sea," with Ralph Ince and Dorothy Dunbar. A thundering tale of the southern seas.

Thursday and Friday, Milton Sills in "Framed," a brilliant drama of a man who sought the glitter of diamonds to forget the glitter of Paris night life, and a women whose dazzling beauty dimmed both. It sparkles with the brilliance of diamonds and the acting of a great star in his mightiest role. Ranger "The Outlaw Dog," will end this week at the Place in a gripping, powerful picture crammed with action and breathless moments, flavored with romance and ending in a thrilling climax.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—"Flights of Western Canada," an organization formed here this summer to promote and encourage civil aviation, now has a membership of 300 and expects shortly to receive its Dominion charter. Instruction has been given members in the various phases of flying and an intensive winter program has been prepared.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED BY LORENZO JONES JR.

Wanta Be 'Boss' of Family? Then See 'Sinner' at Forsyth

"Battle of Sexes" Will Feature Current Presentation of Forsyth Players Stock Group.

There must be a "boss" in every family!

There must be some one in every family to hold the reigns and direct the destinies of the group. All this talk of "equality" and the like is emphatically out!

Or at least that's the problem discussed in "Sinner," the sensational Broadway play which will be presented here all this week by the Forsyth players at the Forsyth theater, under the able leadership of Miss Ivy Mertons, talented new leading lady, and Walter Regan, leading man.

"Sinner" comes to Atlanta with a record of having pleased New York theater-goers for several months. It is a comedy, despite the promulgation of the "battle of the sexes" idea, and one that keeps the audience in high spirits throughout an evening.

The author, Thompson Buchanan, whose previous play entitled, "Civilian Clothes," was a huge success has taken for his heroine in "Sinner" a young woman who looks with disfavor upon the marriage vow, and he tells with no little intensity the story of what happens after circumstances have forced her to enter marriage.

The contending rights of love and business, the gradual fading of romance, the glamour of adventure, the battle between the sexes, and all these crowned with love triumphant at the close of the play are the main ingredients of "Sinner."

And yet, definitely though mysteriously, it weaves a certain spell. Mr. Buchanan is an old hand at the business and sufficient of a showman never to let you guess exactly how things will turn out. As it proceeds from scene to scene, you find yourself wondering what the next one will bring forth, and that must be pretty good play writing.

Miss Mertons, who marked up a tremendous success on her first appearance here last week in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will have the leading role i the play with Walter Regan playing opposite her. She will portray Cynthia Penherton, the role created by Claiborne Foster in New York.

BIG CIRCUS PICTURE OPENS AT MADISON

One of the best pictures of the circus and its life ever made will play at the Madison theater in East Atlanta on Monday of this week in "Spangles," featuring Pat O'Malley and Marion Nixon. It is chock full of action and the romantic glamour of the circus and should prove of tremendous interest to all picture fans.

Ben Lyon and Billie Dove in one of their most famous successes together, "The Tender Hour," will be the Madison theater attraction on Tuesday only. Bob Steele in "The Mojave Kid," will be seen on Wednesday only.

On Thursday and Friday, when William Boyd and Elinor Fair are starred at the Madison in "The Yankee Clipper," patrons of this theater are due for one of the finest treats of the season. There is romance and thrills galore depicted in this stirring epic of the sea. Red Grange in "One Minute to Play," and the first chapter of "Perils of the Jungle" will be shown on Saturday.

Fairfax.

Charlie Murray with George Sidney and Vera Gordon open the week at the Fairfax with a hilarious comedy, "Sweet Daddies." A round of finely woven entanglements and the unwinding of each bringing a laugh—is this clever number. Tuesday "The Old Soak," screen version of the successful play, shows Jean Hersholt in another character role. This is a comedy-drama in which is depicted the outwitting of a "power behind the throne" by an "old soak."

Hoot Gibson comes in a colorful and daring picture, "The Prairie King," Wednesday. He is assisted by pretty Barbara Worth and an able supporting cast. Inimitable Clara Bow appears Thursday and Friday in "Hula," her latest screen sensation. In this original and individual production Miss Bow excels in her ability of portraying the "It" girl.

On Saturday Kenneth Harlan and Viola Dana play in the gripping story, "The Ice Flood," set in a northwood locale and abounding in exciting situations.

You may have noticed that there are more men with blockheads than wooden legs.

'FROM SOUP TO NUTS' FEATURED AT GRAND

Another great vaudeville bill, under the "Big Attractions" policy, will be offered at Loew's Grand theater this week with some of the foremost headline vaudeville acts in the country on the bill. The headline attraction this week will be Herb Williams' big comedy act, entitled "From Soup to Nuts."

Herb Williams is a sterling comedian who always brings a topnotch act. This season he presents his "Ruffined Comedy," assisted by a capable company of four people. The skit is chock full of laughs and ludicrous situations and is sone of the greatest comedy acts of any kind in vaudeville. For years it has appeared as the headliner in the leading theaters of the country and is playing the south this season for the first time.

On the same bill will be the attractive musical comedy offered by the Red Carnations, a group of singers, dancers and comedians including the six Cantor dancing girls. In this act are such well-known artists as Victor Kahn, who has appeared singly as a headliner on many bills; Lillian Kenney, Pauline Arley, Charles Garland and the Cantor Girls.

Nellie Arnaut and her two brothers will offer a beautiful act entitled "The Merry Widow." In this turn Miss Arnaut and her brothers wear some gorgeous costumes and offer some pretty dances and song numbers. The act is provided with a beautiful scenic environment and special lighting effects are used.

Packard and Dodge, "Two Nuts in a Garage," will provide much of the fun element on the new bill. Both are clever comedians and they offer some attractive musical numbers on their program.

The opening act is that of the Four Martinis, noted wire walkers, who have prepared a special act this season which is full of novelties.

This fine vaudeville bill will be offered in conjunction with the presentation of the magnificent production, "The Garden of Allah," with Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovitch in leading roles.

West End.

For this, the week before the big third anniversary week, at the West End theater out on Lee street, Manager Short has selected a real big-time program. The feature picture for Monday and Tuesday stars "the most beautiful girl in Hollywood," for that is the general opinion of Laura La Plante by her contemporaries in the cinema center. Miss La Plante co-stars with Edward Everett Horton in "Poker Faces." In the supporting cast are George Siegmann, Tom Ricketts, Tom O'Brien and Dorothy Revier. "The Flying Horseman," the big Fox picture, is the Wednesday show.

On Thursday and Friday comes that big picture, "The Unknown," featuring Lon Chaney. There are more than a thousand people, a complete circus, and a notable cast. This is perhaps Chaney's strangest role, as an armless side-show freak in a circus. The new story, written and directed by Tod Browning, is a sensational mystery drama. Joan Crawford, Norman Kerry, John George and others are in the supporting cast.

The Saturday picture is from F. B. O., "The Flowing Ferry."

The gentlemen on the upper left with the pointing finger is Herb Williams, featured at Loew's Grand. Beulah Leaven, shown next, is an Atlanta girl appearing in "Young America" on the Howard stage all this week. On the upper right, the gentlemen in blackface and with the saxophones are the famous Six Brown Brothers, exponents of everything hot in the way of music. They are headlined on the Capitol bill this week. On the lower left is Jack Jordon, talented juvenile of the Forsyth Players who this week present "Sinner." The two young folks just about to have a big kiss are seen in "Queen High," coming to the Erlanger theater. Lower right is Helen Carlson, featured on the Keith bill at the Georgia theater this week.

SCREEN LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD

BY WADE WERNER

Hollywood, Cal.—Whence come the shrewd gold-diggers who make the big city dangerous for the boy from the country? Well, Ruth Taylor, who plays the gold-digging blond in the screen version of "Gentlemen Prefer Blonds," is enthusiastically looking forward to the end of the picture and its opening in New York because that will mean a chance for her to go east and, while making her "personal appearance" at the premiere, to see a really big town. Ruth was born in Michingan, migrated to the coast as an infant, and has not been east of the Rockies since.

Appearances.

A meek-looking, round-shouldered chap was leaning against the front of a cafe across the street from a studio entrance, a rifle in his hands and a bored look upon his face. "How did that bookkeeper ever get a job as an extra in any picture with shooting in it?" asked a visitor. "That's not an extra," replied his guide, calling attention to an armored bank automobile parked outside the studio cashier's office. "It's pay day here, and he was sent with that car as protection against a possible payroll robbery."

Household Art.

One of the little ironies of the movies is that many of those artistic screen effects which help to take the tired housewife's mind off household chores are produced with the aid of such familiar household friends as: Talcum powder, which photographs as dust; salt, used by the ton as "snow;" Epsom salts and near-beer, mixed to make frosted windows; laxative mineral oil, sprayed through fine nozzles to create in front of the camera lens an imitation foggy day, and soap, which photographs as dirt when smeared on furniture or dishes.

Native at Last.

Anywhere else it would be startling, but in Hollywood, where Germans make the best movie Russians and Irishmen make the best Frenchmen, it is only mildly interesting to learn that Raymond Turner, negro film actor, is actually playing a typical negro role in "Louisiana," Billie Dove's new picture. Usually Turner wears white makeup and plays exotic "white" parts.

A powerful sun-arc mounted on a platform to accentuate the glaring daylight of an exterior set; and, tending the great light, an electrician in shirt sleeves shielded from the real sun by a a red silk parasol. A midget, aged 30, disguised as an infant, getting acquainted with the house cat hired to do a few scenes with him. Violet LaPlante, in a gay little street dress of multicolored striped velvet, visiting the set where her famous sister Laura is making a war comedy. Violet is a movie heroine, too, in westerns.

Extras From Russia.

Russian extras, working as soldiers in John Barrymore's new picture, whiling away the time between scenes with real Russian dancing and singing. Nearby, a set full of typical Hollywood extras, deep in their typical between-scenes pastime: bridge. A little dog, new to the movies, howling dismally over sad music being played for Mary Astor during an emotional scene. An item on one of the call-sheets posted daily on the studio bulletin board as a record of those expected to be on hand for work on the sets: "Seventy-five extras dressed for drought sequence." A prohibition picture?

Another Gladys.

And on the boulevard:

Raymond Hatton enjoying a warm day off in his canary-colored touring car. Francis X. Bushman, outstanding sceen idol of yester-year and prosperous featured player of today, strolling into a bank in his sports clothes to deposit his weekly check. Dolores Del Rio's red town car, with a black chauffeur at the wheel. Sign on an office door next to the Motion Picture Producers association: "Gladys Smith, notary public." But she is not the Gladys Smith whose screen name is Mary Pickford. Just a coincidence.

Big Realtors.

William Desmond, another veteran of the screen, back from one of his periodical vaudeville tours and ready to star in another serial. Alternating vaudeville with screen serials is keeping William on easy street. His serials are particularly popular in Mexico and South America. Sign on a vacant lot: "See Jess Willard for his property." Jack Dempsey walking by without looking at it. Will these lads who swapped punches a few years ago be swapping Hollywood real estate some day?

ATHLETIC HOLLYWOOD.

That boisterous game of the naughty nineties—ping-pong—is one of the things that helps to make life wild in Hollywood. The popularity of tennis among screen folk may have something to do with the prevalence of the miniature court game, but whatever their reasons, many players seem to be getting a lot of enjoyment out of ti. Among those who excel at the sport are Charlotte Greenwood, musical comedy star, who came here for a fling at the movies; Raymond McKee, the comedian, and Dorothy Phillips.

GIRLHOOD DREAM.

Some times the hobby is a glorified version of some childhood interest. The miniature mansion in which Colleen Moore houses her dolls, for instance, is the sort of thing little girls dream about. She still collects dolls, doll furniture and doll-sized books by famous authors. Olive Borden takes great pride in her array of dolls of all nations, and another doll-collector is Billie Dove. Miss Dove also has an interesting assortment of dressed fleas whose microscopic wardrobes were made in Mexico.

HOLLYWOOD'S HAIR.

There is logic in the hair-collection of Clara Bow. Featured, then starred, as the flaming-haired flapper of the films, she naturally began to notice what kind of hair other motion picture notables grew. About a year ago she began collecting sample locks from the heads of her friends, and the scrap-book in which she keeps them now contains a wisp or two from nearly every famous head in Hollywood—"Even the bald one," says Clara.

Patrons Urged To Obtain Seats For 'Queen High'

The mail order sale for "Queen High," musical comedy sensation which comes to the Erlanger theater as the Thanksgiving attraction, beginning Monday night, November 21, with matinees Thursday (Thanksgiving day) and Saturday, opened actively last week. The box office has already a large number of orders, which will be opened first and accorded the preferential choice of seats. Inasmuch as the regular advance sale does not open until Thursday, November 17, the theater-going public generally may realize that the demand for the forthcoming week's engagement will be phenomenally heavy and consequently it will be expedient on their part to get mail orders into the theater without delay. We get the same "Queen High" organization that broke all records for attendance and business in Boston and Philadelphia.

Unlike so many successes, "Queen High" is presented on tour under the same management as originally produced, which undoubtedly is the reason why it is said that the company and production is better than the usual in touring attractions. Schwab and Mandel, who produced "The Gingham Girl," "The Desert Song" and "Good News," are likewise the sponsors of "Queen High," and in association with B. G. DeSylva are responsible for the book and lyrics, while Lewis E. Gensler, whose catchy melodies in "Captain Jinks," are still in the ears of musical comedy devotees, wrote the music. Sammy Lee, who staged the dances, did similar service for "No, No, Nanette;" the Marx brothers in "The Coconuts;" the new Ziegfeld Follies, and "Rio Rita."

The large company is headed by such well-known favorites as Eddie Garvie and Dave Mallen, who have comedy roles that win a thousand peals of laughter at every performance. The other principals are Margaret Lee, Neil Collins, Carrie Glenn, Mary Marlyn, Georgette Armfield, Thomas Hudson, Danny O'Donnell, Arlyne White and Dorothea Dunn. There is a large chorus of singing and dancing beauties from the Ambassador theater, New York. The company carries its own orchestra.

Handkerchief Scarf Recaptures Favor

Paris.—(AP)—Since the introduction of the Deauville scarf years and years ago we have never strayed far away from handkerchief neckwear.

But the gay silk squares have their ups and downs. Just now they are up again. Smart Parisians pride themselves on the size and variety of their scarf collections just as Victorian dandies used to boast the number and excellence of their cravats.

SIX BROWN BROTHERS HEADLINE AT CAPITOL

You've heard of all the extraordinary and super-extraordinary vaudeville attractions. The Capitol theater alone has presented such stellar variety attractions as Vincent Lopez, Billy Beard, the Parisian Redheads and innumerable others. But now along comes Manager "Marty" Semon, manager of the Capitol, with the announcement that he has secured the Six Brown Brothers, saxaphone artists, to play an engagement of all this week at the Capitol. How's that?

When it comes to saxaphones, then there is no higher authority than the Six Brown Brothers. Way back yonder when saxaphones were still looked upon as decidedly unique instruments and they were not to be heard from every apartment house window, the Six Brown Brothers were absolute sensations.

And then as their fame became more and more widespread the saxaphone grew in popularity, and so did the Six Brown Brothers. And now look at the saxaphone—if you haven't one, you're all out of the swim. Through all these years, the Six Brown Brothers have remained the premier artists of that instrument.

Their engagement at the Capitol theater can safely be classed as one of the outstanding events of the year in local vaudeville circles. Although billed as Six Brown Brothers, there really is a band of fourteen pieces in the set, which includes that Six Brown Brothers, in a series of selections by themselves.

Four other excellent acts support this extraordinary attraction. Allan Reno is a comedian, the likes of which are rarely seen on local stages. He is a dapper young man who puts across a good song and dance and then sends his audience into convulsions with his screamingly funny representation of a bandmaster playing the violin.

Burt and Lehman are a couple of artists who stand at the very top of the "wise-cracking" game and they present a few fancy steps as well. The Blerios troupe is a hair-raising aggregation of artists who go fearlessly through a routine of thrilling stunts on a trapeze 20 feet in the air where a fall means a broken neck.

On the screen of the Capitol theater this week is "East Side, West Side," featuring the ever-popular George O'Brien in one of the most talked-of pictures of the year.

Do We Worry About Sex Too Much?

Does the western world worry too much about sex? A Chinese staff officer has been discussing the matter with Upton Close, the famous authority on China, who tells all about it in the Forum magazine.

The Chinese was quite frank in his criticism of Europe and America.

"To an Asiatic every phase of your life seems permeated with sex consciousness," he said. "From grammatical gender—incredibly ludicrous to our students of your language—through personifications of justice, ships, things high or low, concrete or abstract, to the sexward twist of your modern psychology, you are impressively sex minded. The emphasis put by novelists and even jurists, upon the sex act is a phenomenon to us. Apparently it is regarded as the crisis of life. It is a climax to romance, or, out of place, it is catastrophe irretrievable. Magical, mystical effects are imputed to it. Life can never be the same afterward."

O'Brien Starred In Vivid Picture Of New York Life

There have been many films coming out of Hollywood purporting to portray the life of New York accurately and graphically. Some of them have in varying degrees, but the bulk of the task remained to be accomplished. And so Director Allan Dwan took the story, "East Side, West Side," and made it into a really true picture of New York. "East Side, West Side" features George O'Brien and Virginia Valli and it plays at the Capitol theater all this week.

"East Side, West Side" has what is considered an excellent motion picture plot. It is rich in New York atmosphere and surrounds the activities of a young man, reared in the poorest part of the city, who battles his way to ownership of a mansion on Fifth avenue.

All of New York's celebrated sections have a part in the story, the Bowery, the East Side, Hell's Kitchen, Gas House district, Red Hook Point, the Bronx, Washington Heights, Park and Fifth avenues.

The leading role is a natural one for George O'Brien and couldn't have fitted his talents any better if the author had had him in mind when writing the story.

The New York Times has called "East Side, West Side" an "epic of Manhattan." The Evening Post has said that the author, Captain Felix Reiserberg, came nearer to writing the story of the city than any one else who ever tried it.

It is the kind of picture which has long been needed to give the world an authentic conception of New York, for the people in small towns have grown to think almost entirely of it in terms of night clubs, Broadway theaters and the tinsel gaiety of Coney Island.

Speaking of "East Side, West Side," the New York Herald-Tribune says: "Vivid and sprawling and memorable. It is thrilling and temptuous and soaring and muddy like the city it so ardently loves and hates."

On the stage at the Capitol theater this week will be featured the internationally famous Six Brown Brothers, renowned saxaphone artists.

Manager Alpha Fowler At the Tenth Street Offers Real Variety

Out Peachtree way at the corner of Tenth street we find a program on the boards that pleases all desires. Manager Alpha Fowler has booked for Monday and Tuesday a picture of the modern jazz life. For Wednesday the west and wide, open spaces are depicted in a great western drama, "Nevada." Thursday and Friday a drama of a mysterious side-show freak, while for Saturday he has a big dog film. The "Ten Modern Commandments" for Monday and Tuesday features Esther Ralston, beautiful Paramount star, who irons out a few kinks and wrinkles in the social code of today in this her latest fast moving comedy. "Ten Modern Commandments" is a story of the stage, a story that Miss Ralston has lived before. How she uses the "Ten Modern Commandments" to serve her ends makes an amusing and striking screen story.

Supporting the star is a hand-picked cast. First in line comes Neil Hamilton, of "Beau Geste" fame, who has the leading masculine role.

On Wednesday comes "Nevada" with Gary Cooper. It is a tale of the west when a man's best friends were his horse and gun; when women were heroines; when cattle rustlers and bad men roamed in ferocious bands; when wide plains offered thrilling adventure and life depended on the quickness of a man's draw. It was the era in which the old west was beginning to fade. The lawful element was serving notice that outlawry would no longer be tolerated.

"The Unknown" features that ever-different Lon Chaney, who this time is an armless circus side show freak. Saturday Strongheart, the great dog performer, in "North Star."

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—The growing tendency of Canadians to secure a first-hand knowledge of other parts of their own country is a healthy sign of sound progress, according to D. C. Coleman, vice president of western lines, Canadian Pacific railway, commenting upon the marked increase of tourist traffic here. The movement across Canada of such important organizations as the Canadian Manufacturing association, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and other groups, not to mention the British editors and other outside bodies, all tended to make the country better known, he said.

Smaller Theaters

Starting at the Top

BY DORIS BLAKE

They were a couple of infants when they were married. Maybe not in years but certainly in everything else. And as infants they played at matrimony until—

But let Clara tell it. She told it to me as we had tea in her charming little living room over on Buchanan street, a nice but not extravagant thoroughfare in the small town 20 miles out from the heart of the city to which Howard commutes daily.

"Howard and I," she corrected, "weren't infants. We were a couple of nitwits. It's a good thing for us the moron detectors weren't working so actively in those days, or we would have been caged as prize specimens.

"Our wedding must have set my parents back a good many hundreds. We were anything but rich people, but we had a certain position to uphold. You know the kind—hard pressed imitators of affluent neighbors. Nothing that his neighbor's children had was too good for his children, was my dear improvident old dad's idea. It is no wonder he died at 53. Now I know why his head was frequently buried in his hands when I ran suddenly upon him sitting there hunched over in the high-backed chair before his writing desk. Four girls of us there were to launch upon the great matrimonial adventure—with flags flying full sail. None of your half mast performances where dad's girls were concerned.

"And so my wedding day was a merry one. Tucked into the pocket of the party bag from mother and father was a check for five hundred dollars with no suggestions about how or where to spend it. From Howard's dad there was a check for a thousand handed him with the admonition that it would make a nice payment on a house, or, at any rate, a bit of a nest egg for the rainy day that was bound to come.

"'A fusty old phrase, that rainy day one,' Howard and I laughed.

"'Just to prove there isn't going to be one in our lives, Clara, let's begin at once to shoot the thousand.'

Running Through the Money.

"We shot it, all right. Before six months were over it was gone and my five hundred along with it before the year was out. We went to the coast on our honeymoon, which helped enormously to lift the strain of carrying fifteen hundred dollars around. And the weight that was still oppressing us was soon lifted after we got back.

"We took an apartment not far from Howard's work, which was the best alibi we could raise for paying $100 a month on a salary of $62.50 per week. Howard got into the concern through his father's influence, and because of it wasn't concerned about influence not getting you eventually into a managerial chair.

"Through one of those attractive pay-as-you-can systems added to the wedding present balance still with us, we furnished it, even to a player piano, which, by the way, was called for and taken away before it had been with us a year.

"When mother visited us she said, 'How different from when I started out! In fact, you have better things than I have now.'

"'Well, times have changed, mother,' I answered. 'You don't have to wait now until you are old to have the things you want.'

"Mother just shook her head and mumbled something about 'How like her father.'

"Then we started in to do a little entertaining. We wanted to get in with the right set. We had got our foot in, of course, through introductions, but we wanted to keep in.

No Time for Children.

"Children? There was time enough for that later, when we got ourselves better established. It would be simply simple minded to take that on now. One could have children when you got your fill of running around, and we were far from that stage yet. We ran around. And considerable of the running was dodging people who rang your bell impudently inquiring when they could expect a little payment. We must have been skillful dodgers, at that, for we managed to keep on going the pace for three years.

'LIFE OF JESSE JAMES' ON GEORGIA SCREEN

The daring recklessness and hardihood of Jesse James, whose exploits provided sensation after sensation for a generation following the civil war, appears on the screen at the Georgia theater this week, one of the features of the Georgia's jubilee celebration of its first birthday. Fred Thomson appears in the role of Jesse James.

The bold raids of the Confederate cavalry through Kentucky and into Union states add to the color of the picture, which portrays the exploits of this notorious character, presented as a dashing Confederate cavalryman, Robin Hood and lover of Zerelda Mimms, his sweetheart. Nora Lane plays this part.

Scenes of these stirring cavalry raids that made life on the border of Kentucky dangerous, open the story, depicting James as a cardy Confederate cavalryman. Nora Lane, as Zerelda Mimms, soon appears as a civil war bathing beauty, swimming in a creek across which James and his daring band ride in one of these expeditions.

Bob Ford, who killed James, also sights the young woman, and he, as well as James, becomes infatuated with her charms. Rivalry over the young woman, daughter of a Unionist, is ascribed as motive for the hatred that prompted Ford to slay James ultimately. Harry Wood plays the role of Ford. Woods was starred as "Tarzan" in the production of that story.

Jesse James, Jr., aided producers of the story in writing the scenario, "Silver King," the guerilla soldier's famous steed, is also screened, and his feats heighten the spectacular whole of the production.

ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM AT KEITH'S GEORGIA

The first anniversary of Keith's Georgia theater will be celebrated this week with a specially selected program of stage and screen attractions, including a double headline show on the stage and a first-run Paramount feature, "Jesse James," on the screen.

In the Original Cavaliers we have an octette of men who are accomplished musicians and singers with a well-organized band playing some of the newest and playing them in a creative manner. As vocalists the Cavaliers stand high in entertainment value.

Dividing top-line honors with the Original Cavaliers comes Charles Stuart and Mary Lash in an unusual comedy offering under the title of "Strange People." This team of comedians has taken the humorous side of life and woven some clever bits into a fabric that covers a multitude of laughs, introducing some songs and patter that are all clever.

"Vaudeville's Viking Venus" is the billing which introduces Helen Carlson, who deserves credit for devising and presenting a new and different kind of gymnastics. You will marvel at her daring and applaud her skill.

In the offering of "Ann's Ancestors" there are four clever actors and singers. Walter and Betty Reddick are the stars of the act and contribute the dance numbers which are woven into the story which is said to be cleverly executed, while Marie Hunt and Virginia Cole ably assist.

Harry Breen has provided Irene Hayden and Billie Taylor with a travesty on their own sex. They know the value of cross-fire comedy and with it all they have excellent voices for harmony singing.

DR. L. J. FRACHTENBERG TO ADDRESS ZIONISTS

Dr. Leo J. Frachtenberg, southern regional director for the United Palestine Appeal, will address the Atlanta Zionist district at 8 o'clock tonight in the Chavath Achim synagogue, on Washington street. Dr. Frachtenberg will report on the Cleveland conference of the U. P. A., where the year's activities of the Palestine organization was just brought to a successful close.

The Zionist Organization of America, an affiliated body of the U. P. A., has more than 290 members in the Atlanta district who are expected to take a lively interest in today's meeting, the opening session of the season. Regular meetings of the district are to follow throughout the year.

The report of the U. P. A. work for the past year is looked upon as one of the most important events of the Zionist meetings. Dr. Frachtenberg, recently returned from the national conference, will outline plans to be executed in the south, as its share of the 1927-1928 work in rebuilding a Jewish homeland in Palestine. He will also review the accomplishments of the closing year as revealed at the U. P. A. Cleveland conference. The U. P. A. comprises all the principal organizations functioning for the reclamation of Palestine for the Jews.

L. J. Levitas, chairman of the Atlanta Zionist district, will preside over the meeting today. Other officers of the local Zionists are Charles W. Bergman, vice chairman; Charles Glazner, vice chairman; S. W. Saul, secretary; Shirley Minsk, financial secretary, and Meyer Rich, treasurer.

Keith's Georgia Theater To Celebrate Birthday

The first anniversary of Keith's Georgia theater will be fittingly observed this week with several of Atlanta's business and fraternal organizations acting as sponsors for an evening at the theater.

Monday night the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce will give a formal dinner in honor of the occasion and has invited the officers and ladies of the Rotary club; Yaarab temple of the Shrine, the American Legion and Atlanta lodge of Elks to attend a formal "birthday dinner" at the Hotel Henry Grady at 6:30 o'clock, to be followed by a theater party at the Georgia. In addition to the several organizations, invited guests include Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman, Mayor and Mrs. J. N. Ragsdale, Sam Katz, R. E. Crabill, Montgomery S. Hill and L. L. Stewart, of the Publix Theaters corporation, and E. F. Albee, John J. Murdock and Major L. E. Thompson, of the Keith circuit.

The week just closed ended the first year of Keith's Georgia as an amusement enterprise and marks an unusual record for a new theater. During the first year of its existence more than a million patrons have crossed the portals of this beautiful playhouse, which means that each week there are in excess of 21,000 persons attending the shows in this one theater. To the business world this will seem surprising, and were similar figures compiled from each of the other downtown theaters the weekly attendance of the theaters in Atlanta would be such as to surprise those who take an optimistic view of business conditions in this city.

Indicates Prosperity.

Theaters have long been good barometers of general conditions and the fact that the theatrical world continues to increase its temples of amusement and each year more patrons are attracted to popular entertainments would indicte that "times" are not hard and that Atlanta is holding up with cities elsewhere.

During the week starting Monday something special will be offered each night at the Georgia. Monday has been designated "Junior Chamber of Commerce night." Business men affiliated with the civic work of this progressive young organization are asked to attend the Monday performance rather than other nights during the week.

Tuesday night will be "Rotary night." Rotarians and their families have promised to see that Roltare Eggleston, a fellow member, gets a rousing reception on his "first birthday" in Atlanta.

Wednesday, Yaarab Temple of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine will be represented by Thomas C. Law, potentate, and his divan. Thursday night will be dedicated to the American Legion, and Atlanta post No. 1 is rounding up its members and hopes to be out in full force. On Friday night the Atlanta lodge of Elks is planning to have many of its members present, and announcements have already been sent urging members to join in making it an event of significance.

CUNARD-ANCHOR TRAVELING CLUB NOW ORGANIZED

The Cunard-Anchor Steamship Lines recently announced the formation of the Cunard Travel club. The club, by means of its budget plan, makes it possible for people of small means to enjoy the privilege of travel aboard. Club members may take their choice of many interesting tours at low cost. Among the European countries to be visited by members of the club are Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Ireland, Italy, Scotland and Switzerland.

Cunard Travel club members are given special privileges. Booklets issued by European travel organizations are mailed them from time to time without cost. Club membership also entitles them to the personal advice of experienced travel men and itinerary makers on any related European travel matter in which they may be interested. They may obtain Cunard travelers' checks without paying the usual commission and are given a special rate on baggage insurance.

One of the most interesting features of the club is its budget plan. Through this budget plan members are given a year to pay for the tour of their choice. A few dollars are deposited at stated intervals and at the end of a given time the members may take the tour desired.

Six Brand-New Models Introduced Recently by American Manufacturers

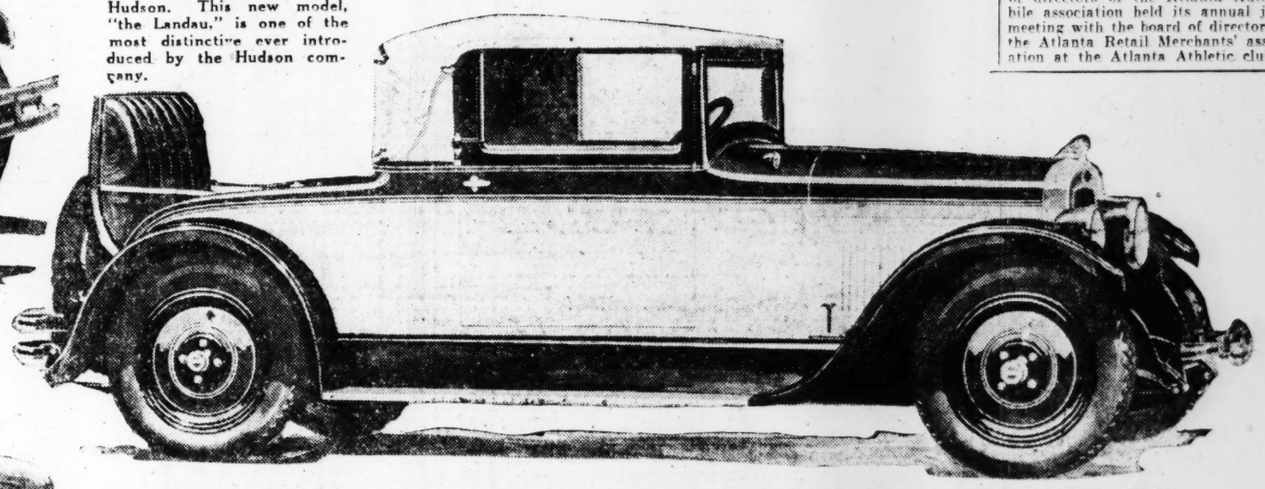

This new 1928 Hupmobile Six Sedan is a car in which the up-to-the-minute trends in design have been accorded free play. Its long, low, shapely lines, handsomely set off by the smart visor and high, distinctive radiator, draw instant attention to the beauty and new vogue of the roomy, comfortable body.

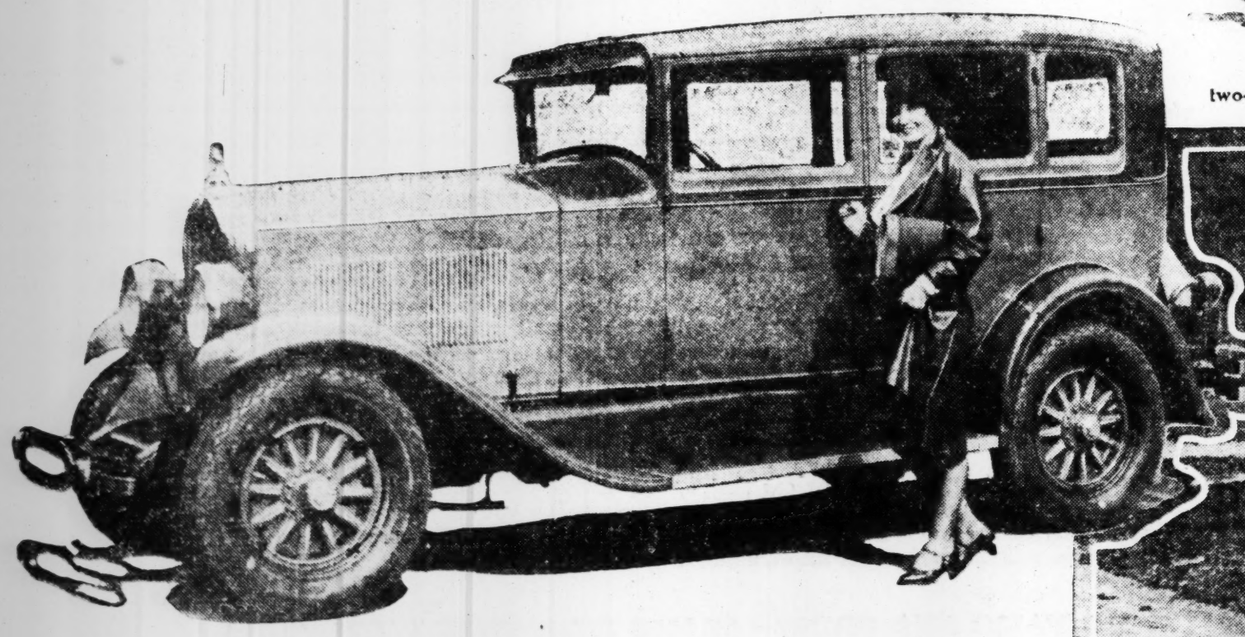

Pontiac's new landau. A very popular model in the Pontiac line; it's another achievement by General Motors with a body by Fisher.

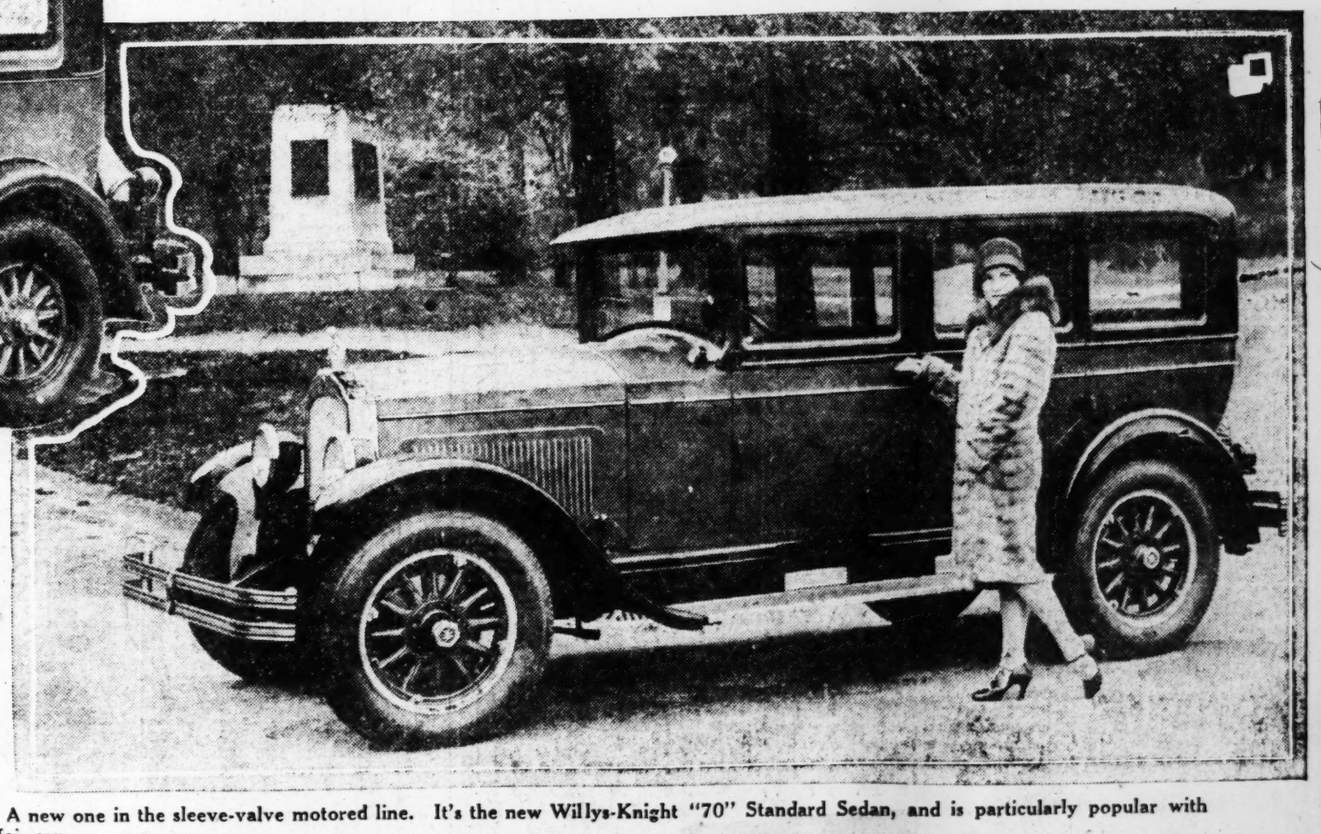

The 100-miles-an-hour Hudson. This new model, "the Landau," is one of the most distinctive ever introduced by the Hudson company.

A new model to the Nash line. Their new Cabriolet on the Standard Six chasis. It's finished in beautiful two-toned colors of various combinations.

A new one in the sleeve-valve motored line. It's the new Willys-Knight "70" Standard Sedan, and is particularly popular with the fair sex.

Newcomers To Ranks of Automotive World Speedily Gain Widespread Popularity

Here they are—six resplendent newcomers in the automotive world whose beauty and sturdiness will appeal to prospective purchasers everywhere.

Each of the six is a new model. Each has made its appearance on the local market within the past 30 days, and each has gained widespread popularity from its inception.

Among the half dozen gorgeous creations is the Hup six sedan, boasting new and improved body design with all the old Hupmobile quality and the latest in refinements that makes for ease and comfort in riding. Its beauty in line and detail is a charm.

Then there's Hudons "100-miles-an-hour car." It's the new car with the high compression motor, and Hudson-Essex enthusiasts are finding many novel features about the beautiful product to eulogize. Reports are that it is performing like magic and making an instant appeal.

Pontiac's new landau has proved itself one of the most popular models in this famous General Motors line of cars. Its graceful body, its nationally-known engine qualities and its beauty of design are its most appealing features.

A new and decidedly magnificent addition to the Nash line is the beautiful cabriolet, one of the most rakishly sports jobs ever seen on Automobile Row. Its chief charm lies in the attractive two-tone colors with which the car is finished, and it has, in addition, the well-known Nash stamina to recommend it.

And don't overlook Jordan's straight-line "8", another brand-new model just introduced by this prominent maker. It is designed along the same lines that distinguish Europe's most expensive cars and has gained widespread and favorable attention.

Last, but by no means least, is the new Willys-Knight "70" sedan, one of the world's most popular sleeve-valve motored cars. It combines rare beauty and grace with the inevitable Willys sturdiness and is gaining wide vogue among Atlanta motorists.

AUTO ASSOCIATION DIRECTORS TO MEET UPON NOVEMBER 17

What will probably be the final 1927 meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile association will be held Thursday, November 17, at a 12:30 o'clock luncheon. At this meeting the board will make a resume of the outstanding activities of the association for 1927, with a view to incorporating them in the annual report to be presented to members at the annual meeting the early part of December.

Wednesday, November 9, the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile association held its annual joint meeting with the board of directors of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association at the Atlanta Athletic club.

Prominent Physician Buys His Fifth Franklin Car

Dr. Edward Van Duyn, prominent physician-surgeon of Syracuse, N. Y., bought the first Franklin Airman sold in that district when the Airman was announced recently. This represents the doctor's fifth Franklin during a long period of ownership, having purchased his first car in 1904.

Doctors represent 23 per cent of Franklin's total yearly customers. According to numerous statements by these owners, the fact that there is no water to freeze in the cooling system eliminates car worries in the winter time. An electric primer in the carburetor heats the gas before starting so that on the coldest nights there is no delay in getting to patients. This accounts for the large number of Franklins purchased by doctors, Franklin officials claim.

"Everyone who rides in my Franklin sedan remarks about the freedom from bouncing and the comfortable seats," reports V. W. Dow, of Upper Darby, Pa. One woman claims "it is like taking a ride in her living room." Mr. Dow relates.

A number of prominent writers recently had a striking demonstration of the roadability of the Franklin Airman when they were driven at a terrific pace over rough, mountain roads that had seen little of automobile traffic. They marveled that not once during the ride did they leave their seats but were as comfortable as though riding in an airplane.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE IS GROWING IN USE OF USED CARS

BUICK OFFICIAL EXPLAINS CAUSES OF THIS CONDITION

Building of Better Cars and Increase of Knowledge About Motors Are Main Reasons.

BY A. H. SARVIS,
Assistant General Sales Manager Buick Motor Company.

The startling refinements which our motor cars have undergone in the last few years have exerted upon the used car an influence quite as profound as that which the new cars themselves reflect. We need only glance at the proportions which the used car business has assumed, to realize that the used car of today must be an entirely different quantity from the commodity which went under that name a comparatively short time ago.

There are several reasons for the public's growing tendency to buy used cars with confidence. The ultimate reason, of course, is that such confidence is being justified to a greater and greater degree with each passing year, by the performance of used cars themselves. Every possible agency is cooperating to bring this about—to surround the purchase of a used car with the same assurance of owner satisfaction as goes with a new car.

The fact that the motor car leaving the factory today is a vastly better product than any of its predecessors is the greatest single factor in the rising desirability of the used car. The industry's constant effort to build better is steadily increasing the amount of dependable transportation delivered with each new car. Consequently, there is a greater and greater reserve of service left when the original owner yields to the lure of a new machine. Improved design, and better materials and workmanship play their parts in bringing this condition about, and so does the interesting process which might be termed the evolution of the car user.

Learning About Cars.

The world is not yet fully educated to the use of the motor car. We know much more about maintaining, operating and dodging vehicles than we did 25 years ago, but 50 years hence we shall know far more about these things than we do now. Usage will implant them in the blood. And even the development which the car user has undergone to date is contributing, not only to our safety, but to the amount of service our motor cars yield.

The statement is easily proved. So rapid has been the motor car's conquest of the country that most of today's owners are driving their third, fifth, or even tenth car. They are deriving greater satisfaction from it than from their first, for two reasons: because it was a better car to begin with, and because they know more about its care than they did about the care of their first. They have learned to give it the attention which will insure freedom from battery failure, lubrication trouble, or undue tire wear. And the car which they eventually pass along to its second user has had the benefit of their extended knowledge. It is almost certain to give better service than the used car of ten years ago, when the percentage of "first owners" was far higher.

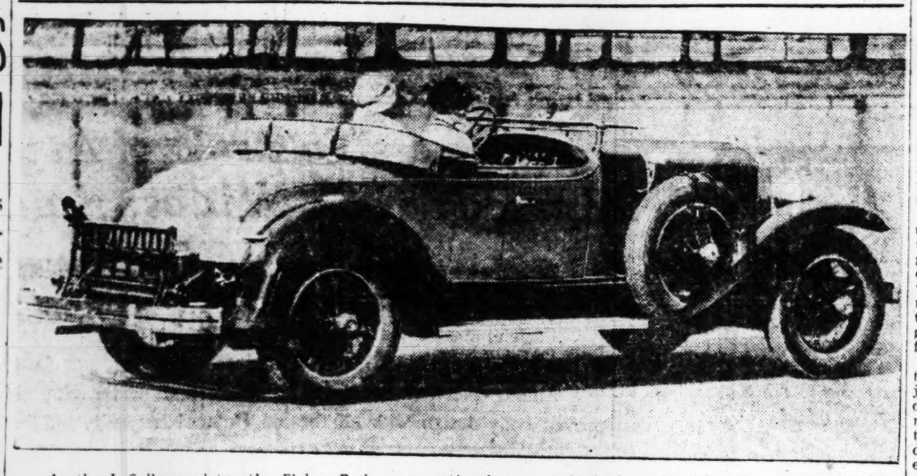

It would probably prove surprising if every car on the street were to display a placard stating whether it was in the hands of its original, or a subsequent owner. That the proportion of "new" cars is comparatively small may be gathered from the fact that there are some 22,000,000 cars licensed in the country today, while the yearly production of new cars is only about 4,000,000. Such a comparison makes it obvious that the used car business has attained vast proportions—proportions, in fact, which would be inconceivable, were not the used car of today a thoroughly proven investment in transportation.

Rights in Los Angeles For Benjamin Hirsch, Formerly of Brunswick

Los Angeles, Calif., November 12.—(AP)—Funeral services were held here Friday for Benjamin Hirsch, former postmaster at Brunswick, Ga., who died Tuesday at the home here of his daughter, Mrs. Julius May. Mr. Hirsch was 87 years old.

The local lodge of Elks, of which order the deceased was a member, held services at the train today, prior to departure of the body for Brunswick.

Popular La Salle Model

In the LaSalle roadster the Fisher Body corporation has created a body symbolizing the vigor and vitality of modern youth. The sweeping rear deck contains a rumble seat and golf compartment which opens on the right side. The compactly folded top carries out the racy line of the forward folded windshield.

For the color scheme, the designers appropriately selected from nature's studio the strong, vivid, emphatic hues of Curlte. The ledge orange and ravine yellow of body panels, fenders and moldings parallel the striking color series so intense in the stone. The upholstery in genuine pigskin carries the same tones—a striking effect that is further emphasized by the instrument panel in bright orange Duco. The striping is Watercourse red.

Harry Sommers Praises Pospect for Chrysler

October was the greatest volume months in Crysler history in number of cars delivered and was the second most profitable month the company has had in 1927, according to announcement Saturday by Harry Sommers, head of Harry Sommers, inc., Chrysler distributor here.

"The outlook for fall and winter business is good," Mr. Sommers said Saturday at his place of business at 446 Spring street. "Our agency covers Atlanta, two thirds of Georgia and a small slice of Alabama, and December orders for Christmas, together with heavy repeat business assures us of steadily improving business and rest of this year. We are confident of a better first quarter in 1928 than we had in 1928, and everything looks good to Chrysler here."

Harry Sommers, Inc., and J. M. Harrison, associate Chrysler dealer, are providing owners of their cars here two complete retail selling organizations and two complete set-ups for service.

"The growth of Chrysler business in in Atlanta," Mr. Sommers stated, "is true for our entire territory. We have not a single dealer with more than a three-weeks supply of used cars on hand, a decidedly favorable position to occupy.

"The Chrysler national showing since September 1 has been on a basis of third place in production, and we believe we will draw third place in the New York automobile show in January."

Lethbridge, Alberta.—It is announced that Lethbridge will be an official air port, the government having given its approval to the city's application. There is a fine landing field right in the city. Edmonton has already secured its authorization and Calgary is making preparations to put in an application. The action of these three cities is in line with the campaign for a building up of a Canadian air service.

Toy Cannon Idea Origin of Modern Engine of Auto

In the days when dad was a boy the old family alarm clock was set for 3 a. m. on the night before the Fourth, and the wee small hours were devoid of sleep for the rest of the family when his gaspipe cannon began to celebrate our nation's independence.

The vicious reports and spiteful sputterings of that dangerous plaything foretold the explosion type engine which is now so tamed that its quiet running can hardly be reconciled with the cannon idea. Yet the fact remains that an attempt back in 1680 to design an internal combustion engine involved the use of gunpowder for fuel.

Motor fuel today exhibits some of the characteristics of gunpowder, for just as the cannon needed to be wadded and rammed to make the greatest noise, so does the fuel mixture need to be rammed or compressed to produce the greatest power. And just as excessive ramming would produce too violent an explosion so does too much compression in the engine fire the fuel too violently so that knocking results.

Compression is accordingly figured to give the most snap and go without getting to the point where knocking results. Yet if carbon accumulates in too great quantities it fills up the cylinder space, increases the compression and causes knocking that cannot occur in an engine that is kept in good condition.

That is why one has carbon removed at certain intervals—to regain the degree of compression originally built into the engine and to give the car that smooth but snappy action it had when new.

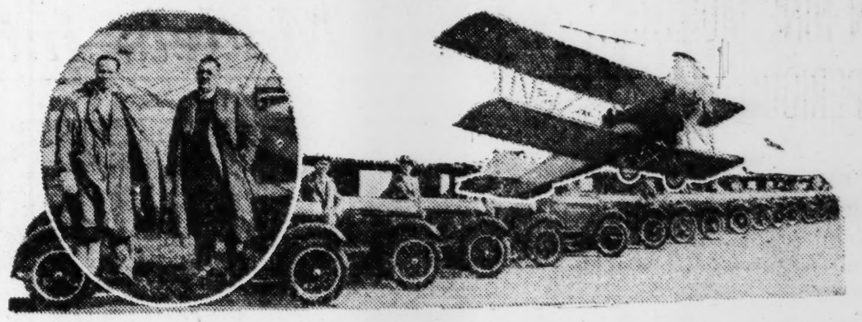

GRAHAM BROTHERS TRUCKS SHATTER RECORD FOR YEAR

Orders for Graham Brothers trucks, commercial cars and motor coaches during October totaled 6,212, breaking all previous monthly records for the year, according to official statement from the truck division of Dodge Brothers, Inc. This represents approximately $7,300,000 worth of business at retail values for the single month, the statement points out.

The October record shows an increase of 11 per cent over the number of orders in September and shows the constantly increasing demand for Graham Brothers trucks since the introduction of a complete new line in August. Factories are working at capacity to meet the demand.

Dodge Brothers dealers who sell and service Graham Brothers trucks throughout the world report enthusiastic reception of the new 1-2-ton delivery car which was announced October 30 as an addition to the line of 3-4, 1, 1 1-2 and 2-ton trucks manufactured by the company. The new delivery car is smart in appearance and capable of very fast service, according to the makers.

Airplane Hastens Auto Drive-Away

W. H. Hope, salesmanager for Hokanson-Thompson Inc., Milwaukee, and his assistant, K. D. Moore, (left and right in circle) required a large number of Oakland and Pontiac Sixes for immediate delivery. Chartering a plane, they hopped off for the factory at Pontiac, Mich. Four hours later they were conducting a drive-away back to Milwaukee. Their plane and the drive-away cars are shown at the right.

Elaborate Plans Made For Auto Men's Meeting

Definite plans have finally been completed for the big annual meeting and celebration of the Atlanta Automobile association in December under the guidance of a capable committee of which Clarence Knowles is chairman. The meeting will be held the evening of December 12, beginning at 6 o'clock, on the roof garden of the Ansley hotel. A short, preliminary business session will convene promptly at 6:30, followed by a 20-minute address by Harry G. Moock, managing director of the greater market development division of the Automotive Equipment association. Mr. Moock is making a special trip from Chicago to be the feature speaker on this occasion.

This will be followed by the annual election of officers, a special nominating committee having been appointed, consisting of the past presidents of the association, who will make their recommendations for consideration of the members at this annual meeting.

Between 7:30 and 8 o'clock the members will sit down to an elaborate course dinner, during which a number of musical features will be introduced in connection with a special orchestra engaged for the occasion, and immediately following the dinner, several high-class vaudeville features will be put on under the leadership of Fat Elrod.

Present officers of the association are Harry Somers, president; Ed Yancey, C. G. Parsons and F. L. Brandes, vice presidents, and Jack Phinizy, treasurer.

The board of counsel of the tabernacle, although having no official connection with Mrs. McPherson's church, has notified her it would consider promoting the "gospel lighthouse" idea in Des Moines.

The "WHY" of Willys-Knight's Superiority

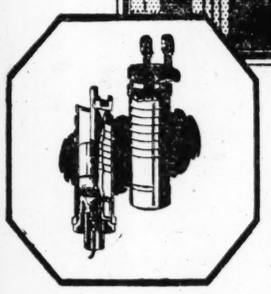

SMOOTHER WITH USE!

Highest Uniform compression is possible only with PATENTED Knight sleeve-valve engine

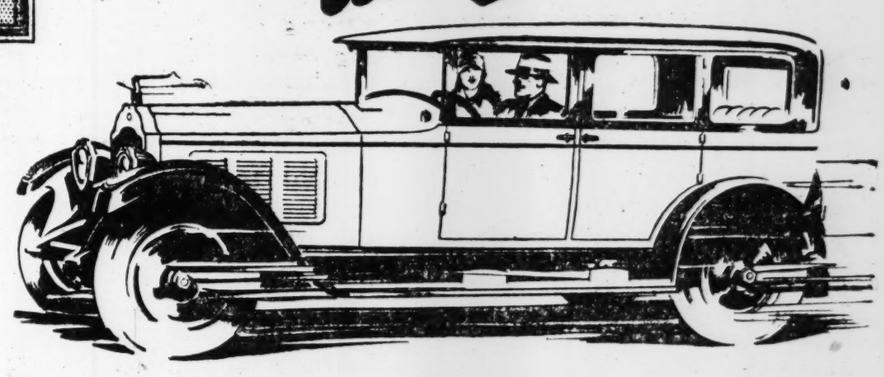

Use ANY gas

Spherical cylinder head and sliding sleeves of PATENTED Knight engine provides the most efficient compression chamber.

Two metal sleeves, working smoothly, silently up and down, one within the other, in a protective film of oil. Simple, positive action making for quietness and efficiency.

is all you pay for a 5-passenger, 6-cylinder Willys-Knight closed car. "70" Six, $1295 to $1495. Great Six, $1850 to $2695. Prices f. o. b. factory and specifications subject to change without notice. Willys-Overland, Inc., Toledo, Ohio.

SMOOTH and quiet at the beginning, the Willys-Knight grows even smoother and quieter the longer you drive. For Willys-Knight offers not only higher compression, insuring greater speed and liveliness, but uniform compression, insuring velvet smoothness at all times, at all speeds. Thus, you always enjoy an even, unfailing flow of power.

Willys-Knight brings you all the advantages of high compression with none of the disadvantages. There is no undue wear on the engine, as is the case with many poppet-valve high compression motors. And with the Willys-Knight, you can USE ANY GAS; there is no need to buy special and more costly fuel.

Unlike most great advances in motor car design, the Knight sleeve-valve engine is controlled by one organization exclusively, and is rigidly protected by PATENTS. The self-starter, lacquer finish, balloon tires and four-wheel brakes are common to many cars; but this, one of the most valuable developments in all automotive history—the PATENTED Knight engine—still remains the property of a single company.

Exquisitely Beautiful New Colors

Your choice of many distinctive colors, both in lacquer and upholstery. Colors that are rich, harmoniously blended, lastingly attractive.

You owe it to yourself to see and drive the finer "70" Six or the Great Six. Their beauty will command your instant admiration. You will enthuse over their low, graceful lines, their rich, harmonious colors. But your deepest appreciation of the Willys-Knight will result from smooth, unfailing performance through the years.

STUDEBAKER REPORT SHOWS GOOD INCREASE IN SALES

4,000 INCREASE IN NINE MONTHS' PERIOD IS SHOWN

Profit Per Share on Common Stock Also Makes Gain, According to Erskine's Statement.

South Bend, Ind., November 12.—An increase of almost 4,000 in the number of cars sold during the first nine months of 1927 above the number sold in the corresponding period of last year is indicated in the third quarterly report of A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker corporation, made public today.

The report shows a net profit of $1.61 per share of common stock for the third quarter, as compared with $1.56 for the third quarter of last year. This is calculated on the common stock outstanding.

The net profits of the first nine months of the year $11,627,592.72, or $5.99 per share of common stock outstanding. This is nine cents less than the net profit for the first nine months of 1926. The net profits for the third quarter, however, are $3,155,209.53, almost $80,000 above the net profits of the third quarter last year.

La Salle Shows Quick 'Pick-Up' Aid To Traffic

New light has been shed upon the subject of speeding up motor car traffic without increasing speed limits through investigation carried on by the city of Chicago as to the effect of quick "get-away" in relieving congestion. With an expected addition of 316,000 units to Chicago's motor car population during the coming twelve months, the problem of handling the traffic with speed and safety is one of tremendous import, and a test run was recently made under the supervision of Chicago's chief of police, Hughes, to determine what effect quick acceleration would have upon traffic movement.

In the test run, using two different types of cars, it was demonstrated that rapid acceleration—quick "pick-up"—would increase traffic mobility 20 to 25 per cent in Chicago under the present street capacity and the present "stop-and-go" light system.

Just how increased car acceleration aids in the movement of traffic and the relief of congestion is shown in the results of the test run from the city limits on the north—Sheridan road and Juneway terrace—to Russell Square at the southeastern extremity of the city, a distance of over twenty miles.

Each of the two cars used in the test carried two official observers and timers with stop-watches.

The test was made with a LaSalle because of its extreme power in second gear, which accounts for its rapid acceleration and quick "get-away," and another type of car of average "pick-up."

Buicks and Chevrolets Popular, Hertz Chief Says

Parade of 40 new Buick and Chevrolet cars just placed in service for rental to the public by the Hertz Driv-Ur-Self Station here.

In an effort to supply the demand for the new 1928 Buick made upon the Hertz Drivurself automobile rental stations by its patrons following the introduction a few months ago of twelve 1928 sport roadsters, nearly double that number of 1928 Buick sport coupes and sedans have been purchased within the past few days.

In addition to this, the fleet of cars now being operated by the local station at 40 Auburn avenue, is being further augmented by more than a score of new model Chevrolets, according to announcement Saturday by W. E. Wilkinson, general manager of the Hertz stations operating in the states of Georgia, Florida and North Carolina. Many of the new cars have already arrived and have been placed in service and Mr. Wilkinson states that the last of the large shipment will be available for rental to patrons within the next few days.

"Both the Buick and Chevrolet made an immediate hit with our patrons when the first models were added to our regular equipment," said Mr. Wilkinson. "Since then we have had innumerable calls for cars of this type, and until the receipt of this shipment, we have found it impossible to supply the overwhelming demand."

NEW SPARK PLUGS VITAL FOR WINTER

With the approach of winter, cold engines, alcohol in radiators and thick lubricating oil, the installation of a complete new set of spark plugs is the best kind of economy if the present ones have given 10,000 or more miles of service, according to O. C. Rhodes, chief engineer of the Champion Spark Plug company.

Efficient spark plugs, only, should be used at all times, Mr. Rhodes points out. They more than pay for themselves in all seasons by improved engine performance. But, he emphasizes, they are of even greater importance in cold weather. It is in extremes of temperature that engine operation is least efficient. A vast difference exists between engine efficiency during freezing, or near-zero, temperatures and during that of the warmer seasons.

"New spark plugs are of vital importance in improving engine operation in cold weather," he says. "They also facilitate easier starting which, under the best engine conditions, is difficult in winter. More than 2,000 No. 3 or better.

SHOPS IN ARCADE PLAN DECORATION FOR XMAS SEASON

Tenants of the Arcade building, most of whom are members of the Arcade Cooperative association, are planning to decorate the Arcade building more lavishly than ever before for the 1927 Christmas shopping season. In years past, beautiful decorations in the Arcade building have made it one of the holiday show places of the city.

L. M. Anderson is president of the Arcade Cooperative association, and T. H. Fuleton is chairman of the committee in charge of decorations.

NEW UNIT IS ADDED TO PAIGE FACTORY

Detroit, Mich, November 12.—Construction of the latest addition to the Paige-Detroit Motor car company's plant, a 1,000-foot covered loading platform, is now well under way. The cost is approxiamtely $100,000 and is a part of the expansion program outlined for Paige several months ago by the three Graham brothers.

Complete shelter in all kinds of weather for the unloading of all materials used in the manufacture of Paige cars, as well as for the loading of finished automobiles, will be supplied by the new structure.

This new unit is to contain more than 50,000 square feet of floor space and will bring the total area at the main plant to approximately one million square feet. This does not include the body plant at Wayne, covering more than 200,000 square feet, which was recently acquired. It will be of brick and steel industrial saw-tooth construction, with windows and skylights affording daylight working conditions.

This is but one step in an expansion program contemplated by the three Graham brothers when they acquired control of Paige, officials state.

Georgia Dinner Tickets Will Go On Sale Monday

Tickets will be on sale this week at the offices of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce for the Thanksgiving dinner of Georgia products to be given in the chamber's building on the evening of Tuesday, November 22. Reservations will be limited to 250 persons and tickets will be $2 each, it is announced.

The dinner, to be entirely informal, will begin at 6:30 o'clock, and will be open to members of the chamber and the general public as long as any tickets remain.

The memory of Colonel and Mrs. Lawson Peel, who took a prominent part in the upbuilding of Atlanta, will be honored at this dinner, a revival of the annual Georgia products dinners inaugurated by Mrs. Peel and so successfully carried out under her direction.

Several speakers from various parts of the state will be invited to speak on Georgia products and kindred subjects.

The dinner is to be given under the direction of the senior and junior chambers of commerce and the woman's division of the chamber, and committees from all three are busily at work on details of the plans.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce Concert orchestra, 25 musicians directed by C. S. Jarrell, will make its debut at the dinner after rehearsals of several weeks.

The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Aubrey Milam, chairman; C. K. Ayer and Fred Shaefer, of the senior chamber; Dr. H. B. Kennedy, George B. Yancey and Joe Ray, of the junior chamber, and Mrs. Wilbur Colvin, Miss Eula Lang and Miss Kate Hammerschmidt, of the woman's division.

TRAFFIC LAWS

DRIVE CAREFULLY—WALK CAREFULLY.

With the increase in the number of motor vehicles on our streets and highways it is imperative that the necessity for careful driving be pointed out constantly. But it is of equal importance that we have careful walking. Not only the motorist but also the pedestrian must keep constantly alert.

The person who jay-walks, that is, crosses a street at a place other than a crossing, is careless. And the careful driver must be constantly alert in watching for the careless walker.

The person who crosses a street while the traffic light is against him, is careless. The motorist who faces the green light and has the right of way must also be alert to keep an eye on the person who insists upon taking chances by darting through lines of moving vehicles.

The person who alights from a street car and then walks around the end of the car and starts across the street without looking to see whether any vehicles are approaching is careless. But the careful driver will watch, in approaching a standing street car, for just such a person.

The person who starts across the street without looking to see whether any vehicle is coming around the corner is a little bit careless. The careful driver in rounding a corner will be particularly careful, and courteously he will permit the pedestrian to cross first. I have no patience with the driver who requires the pedestrian to run to cross in safety.

What is needed constantly is careful driving and careful walking. The motorist must be respectful of the rights of the pedestrian and the pedestrian must be respectful of the rights of the motorist. Thoughtfulness always pays.

Style that women desire--Durability that men demand

BUICK for 1928

Buick for 1928 is as up-to-date as the latest mode. Its fleet, graceful lines and new combinations of lustrous Duco colors catch every eye. Its rich upholsteries and appointments introduce an entirely new order of luxury in closed car interiors.

And in addition to the style that women desire, Buick for 1928 provides the durability that men demand.

Improvements in the Buick six-cylinder Valve-in-Head Engine—long famous for its stamina—provide unmatched performance, a new snap to get-away, increased power, and greater flexibility.

Buick's Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers, front and rear—integrally designed with Buick Cantilever Springs—smooth out ruts, bumps and road irregularities.

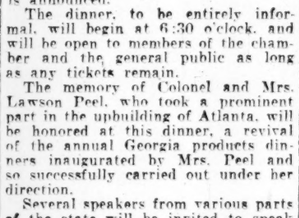

The Sealed Chassis, Torque-Tube-Drive and staunch bodies by Fisher assure long life and absolute dependability.

Buick for 1928 has won tremendous popularity among men and women alike—because it combines the style women desire with durability men demand.

NASH OFFICIAL SEES PROSPERITY FOR AUTO INDUSTRY

ALFORD PREDICTS 'YEAR OF PLENTY' ALL OVER NATION

Shows That Increased Agricultural Earnings Will Greatly Swell Public Buying Power.

Indications of a "year of plenty" for 1928 are seen by W. H. Alford, vice president and comptroller of the Nash Motors company, known throughout the financial and industrial world for keen business insight and sound conservatism. Mr. Alford's optimistic view of general business conditions during the coming year was given by him Monday night at a talk in Kenosha to a group of dealers representing the Nash Motors company in New York state and lower New England.

"The year 1927 is rapidly drawing to a close and manufacturers and business men generally are giving thought to the business outlook for 1928," said Mr. Alford. "In my judgment there is every indication that general business should be as good or better in 1928 than in 1927. I base this conclusion on the general improved condition of our great agricultural population.

"Except for small areas, average crops of corn and wheat have been raised and are bringing good prices. Cattle and hogs are in good condition and are bringing higher prices than they have for several years past.

"This should mean added stimulus next year to the metropolitan markets and industry in general for, after all, the farmer is the very backbone of our national business fabric. When the farmer has his money his local merchants benefit, they in turn benefit the jobber or wholesaler, the cycle then reaching the manufacturer in the industrial centers. Thus a good wheat crop in the northwest is soon beneficially felt in Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis and other industrial centers, and the effects of a good cotton crop, in like manner, serves as a stimulus to business throughout the north.

"The southern farmer, where cotton is the principal money crop, will have at least $500,000,000 more for his 1927 crop than he received for his 1926 crop, although some 3,000,000 bales less will be gathered. He is receiving from eight to ten cents a pound more for the crop this year than he received for it last year or, on the basis of a 500-pound bale, from $40 to $50 more. On a price basis of ten cents a pound, the 16,000,000-bale crop last year brought him $800,000,000, and the 13,000,000-bale crop this year at 20 cents a pound will bring $1,300,000,000, or an increase of $500,000,000 for this year's crop over last year's crop.

"This, however, does not tell the whole story of the improvement in the condition of the cotton farmer, for the cost of gathering and ginning is a big item in the cost of raising cotton.

"It takes 1,500 pounds of seed cotton to produce a 500-pound bale of lint cotton. On an average, it costs about $1.50 a hundred pounds of seed cotton to gather or pick, or $22.50 a bale, and about $3.50 a bale for ginning and bagging and ties, or a total of $26 for a 500-pound bale. When lint cotton was selling for ten cents a pound, or $50 a bale, the farmer had $24 left out of each bale to cover the land rental, seed, planting, fertilizer and cultivation, or $384,000,000 for the 16,000,000-bale crop. At the present price of 20 cents a pound for lint cotton, a 500-pound bale brings $100, but the cost of gathering and ginning remains at $26 and leaves the farmer $74 a bale to cover the same items of producing and, on a 13,000,000-bale crop, this amounts to $962,000,000, or $578,000,000 more than for the larger crop of last year."

Montreal, Quebec.—According to a recent bulletin of the dominion bureau of statistics concerning manufacturing in Quebec during 1925, a total of 148 new industries were added in the province in that year. The capital invested increased by $91,919,164; the pay roll rose $7,306,771, and the net value of production increased by $17,752,336. At the end of the year there were 6,995 establishments with a capital investment of $1,136,033,133 and a net production value of $408,103,754.

The Wayside Inn Comes Back

"The Coach and Horses" tavern shown in the photo is in Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's birthplace. The car before the inn is an Erskine Six, the property of Mrs. John A. Ford, of Los Angeles, who toured Europe and the British Isles this summer.

The ancient wayside inns of merrie olde England, famous for their crackling fires, flowing bowls and dining tables heavily laden with choice viands, have been given new life and prosperity by the advent of the motor car.

For many years after the railroad displaced the stage coach in England the wayside inns went on "starvation wages." Patronage came only from neighbors and the old prosperity was gone. Then came the automobile and the tourist.

Today the inns are spic and span. Countless American tourists have augmented the English people who journey through the country by motor car and the old inn-keepers are doing a thriving business.

Essex Climbs Mt. Tamalpais Sealed in High

Sealed in high gear, a standard Essex Super-Six coach established a world's record by climbing Mt. Tamalpais, near San Francisco, according to word received by the Hudson Motor Car company from Stanley W Smith, Hudson-Essex distributor for northern California.

This is the first time, it is declared, that this peak has been climbed in high gear. Each year thousands of tourists reach the top by a trip on a cog-wheel railway, which winds its way up the steep sides. This railway itself is one of the most interesting examples of mountain construction in the world. The only automobile route to the top is a dirt road which tortuously climbs more than 1,700 feet in a little over eight miles.

"The Essex which undertook this test," said C. H. Becker, of the Goldsmith Becker company, Hudson-Essex dealer, "was strictly a standard, stock car and was driven by non professionals. The Essex has made a number of outstanding runs in California recently, and chose this Mt. Tamalpais route because it was one which never before had been accomplished by any car, large or small. Even with the use of all gears, a steady fast climb up Mt. Tamalpais is a formidable assignment for any car. In high gear, as the Essex was driven, such a trial might well stagger the largest and most powerful cars.

"Yet the Essex, with its high compression motor and its super-six principle of design, averaged just a bit less than 40 miles an hour. Of great assistance was the low-hung design an dtruly balanced construction of the Essex chassis, which permitted turns to be taken at a speed with entire safety. Also, where sharp curves slowed down speed the Essex acceleration snapped the car back to its best performance.

"The success of this run confirms what all Essex owners and dealers know—that the car has power, reliability and rugged pulling power to spare. It is unusual to find the combination of marked acceleration plus power to pull steadily against heavy grades or loads, but Essex decidedly has both."

Chrysler Experts Tell Care of Car for Winter

At this season the prudent motorist, taking time by the forelock, is beginning to consider approaching changes in driving conditions and is planning how best to put his car in order for winter months.

Chrysler service experts, following the Chrysler policy of assuring to owners the fullest possible enjoyment of their cars throughout the year, have outlined a program of preparation. They advise motorists to make use of service station facilities, wherever possible. But as there are always a certain number of owners who prefer to condition their own cars for the winter, these suggestions will be read with profit by many.

The first step advised is to remove from the oil pan any accumulated sludge and to refill the pan with fresh oil, taking care that it is of good quality. Frequent changes of oil afterward, in conjunction with proper adjustment of crankcase ventilator, will continue to safeguard oil circulation.

Change of Oil.

Next, the chassis should be completely lubricated and the oil changed in the transmission and differential. The generator should be thoroughly inspected and cleaned and any worn parts replaced. With this done and the battery checked and recharged the electrical system will have plenty of "punch."

The starting motor should be removed and cleaned and worn parts if any replaced. Cleaning the starter driving mechanism is stressed as being of particular importance, both on the starter and the gear of the flywheel, as accumulated oil gets gummy and in time prevents gears from engaging, or, once engaged, from disengaging.

Connecting cable terminals of the entire electrical ssytem should be cleaned and those at the battery, generator, starting switch and ground greased to prevent corroding.

In the ignition system it is important that the distributor and spark plug points be cleaned and adjusted, rotor and distributor cleaned, cables inspected and replaced if necessary, and timing reset.

Cleaning of Gas Tank.

Other important items on the schedule include cleaning of gas tank, vacuum tank, carburetor and gas lines, and adjustment of the carburetor to proper winter setting. The cooling system should be thoroughly flushed, worn hose replaced and anti-freeze solution poured in.

As a finishing touch, wheels should be aligned to prevent tire wear, and body bolts and spring clips should be tightened to safeguard again body squeaks and spring breakage. With the adjustment of the clutch, brake pedals and brakes the work of preparing for cold weather driving will be completed and the car owner can feel confident that he has saved himself a great deal of difficulty later on.

WHIPPET CONQUORS DANGEROUS INCLINE

In one of the most remarkable power demonstrations ever staged in the hilly districts of Pittsburgh, a Whippet collegiate roadster a few days ago climbed the steep 850-foot Seventeenth street incline in 46 seconds under official observation of Pittsburgh newspapermen. The daring climb was made up the inclined railway track used to carry the street cars up the 37 1-2 per cent grade.

The demonstration was staged to prove the high degree of power generated in the Whippet, while the return trip down the steep grade in neutral was an exhibition of the efficiency of the Whippet's four-wheel brake equipment.

Observers declared that this was the first time in history that an automobile of any make ever has been driven under its own power up or down a Pittsburgh passenger or commercial incline.

1,000 Expected At Local Meet Of Odd Fellows

More than 1,000 representatives of the 60 or more subordinate lodges in the thirteenth, sixteenth and nineteenth divisions of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will meet at the roof garden of the Ansley hotel Wednesday night, November 23, it was announced Saturday by Harry L. Brown, general chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The session will be opened with a meeting of the executive committee at 6 o'clock and at 6:30 o'clock Riverside lodge No. 17 will assume charge of the business session. At 7 o'clock the ceremonial will begin with the degree staff of Fulton lodge No. 32 conferring the first section or the initiatory degree. At 8 o'clock the second section will be handled by Central lodge No. 28 degree staff, conferring the first degree. At 9 o'clock the third section will be in charge of Dixie lodge No. 104, conferring the second degree. At 10 o'clock the fourth section, third degree, of the ceremonial will be conferred by Banner lodge No. 514.

Several hundred candidates from the lodges in Campbell, Clayton, DeKalb, Newton, Rockdale, Cherokee, Cobb, Fannin, Gilmer, Milton, Pickens and Fulton counties are expected to take the degrees. The meeting is one of a series of regional sessions being held over the state under the direction of the grand lodge officers, a number of whom will be in attendance at the Atlanta meeting.

Other meetings are scheduled to be held in Dalton November 11; Rome November 12; Griffin, November 14; Columbus, November 15; Macon, November 16; Albany, November 17; Waycross, November 18; Savannah, November 19; Augusta, November 21; Athens, November 22, and Gainesville, November 24.

The executive committees will meet Wednesday evening, at which time final plans will be completed for the meeting here on the twenty-third.

Buick Ambulances Serve Uncle Sam

The Buick chassis is the nucleus of the five United States navy ambulances shown here. Each has a capacity of 12 passengers, or of four stretchers and two attendants, in the rear compartment. The ambulance bodies were built by the Flexible company, of Londonville, Ohio, on Buick chasses bought from a Washington (D. C.) Buick dealer.

Mason Contractors' Association To Meet Here Next January

The Mason Contractors' association of the United States and Canada will convene in Atlanta during January, with an attendance of around 250, the Atlanta convention bureau announced Saturday. Headquarters will be at the Henry Grady hotel, according to G. V. Webb, president of the local association.

No definite plans have been arranged, but it is expected that the visitors will be given a sight-seeing trip around the city, a trip to Stone Mountain, and a dinner with entertainment probably furnished by Peter Manning, of Emory, known as Doctor Brown, and some religious spirituals and chants to be sung by a negro choir.

The Mason Contrairos' convened last year in Nashville, Tenn., and held their 1927 meeting in Toronto. The organization was established 17 years ago, but the Atlanta members have only been organized since June 17, 1927. The purpose of the organization is to promote use of brick in every way and to see that the work is properly done. An agreement entered into with the bricklayers all over the country is to the effect that no workmen employed by a member of the Mason Contractors' association can strike while on the job. Through the east the majority of persons employing bricklayers are members of this association, and every state in the United States has chapters.

Montreal, Quebec.—The value of building permits issued by 63 cities in Canada during the month of September was $14,410,212, an increase of 30.4 per cent over September, 1926, according to the dominion bureau of statistics. The cumulative total for the first nine months of 1927 exceeds by nearly $22,000,000 that for the same months of 1926, the previous high level of the record which was begun in 1920.

NEW SERIES 81 OF PIERCE-ARROW CARS IS ANNOUNCED

LONG, LOW LINES AND PERFORMANCE BEING FEATURED

Luxurious Finish and Many Refinements Mark Moderately-Priced Group of Autos.

Buffalo, N. Y., November 12.—President Myron E. Forbes, of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company, announced to the company's distributing organization, assembled in convention here today, a new, moderately-priced Pierce-Arrow car, named Series 81.

The cars displayed at the convention are strikingly representative of Pierce-Arrow's traditional policy of producing the finest possible automobiles, regardless of cost, thus putting an end to recent rumors of a lower-priced car.

An astonishing change has been effected in physical appearance. The cars, in fact, strike an entirely new note in body design, bearing no resemblance to previous Pierce-Arrow models. Body and roof lines, radiator, lamps, fenders and cowl, all show radically different treatment from the more conservative modeling which have characterized Pierce-Arrow in the past.

Although the wheelbase of 130 inches is unchanged from that of the preceding model, the new Series 81 carries a notable group of engine and chassis improvements, which contribute to performance standards heretofore unapproached, according to company officials.

Power Plant Design.

The power plant, designed and built in the Pierce-Arrow factory is described as an "aluminized, high-compression" engine, which does not require the use of "anti-knock" fuels. Retaining all the economy and simplicity of its preceding Series 80 engine, the new engine develops substantially greater horse-power, has higher maximum speed, faster acceleration and bettered hill-climbing ability.

Among the engineering features which contribute to these results are an aluminum alloy high-compression engine head, drop forged aluminum connecting rods, aluminum alloy pistons, larger bearing areas on the 7-bearing crankshaft, an "equal-distribution" manifold and a special carburetor with thermostatic control for quick acceleration and improved economy.

An automatic chassis lubrication system, using liquid grease instead of oil, has been engineered into the design. Vital points are lubricated simultaneously by pushing a foot plunger.

Immediately noticeable among the changes in exterior appearance are lowered body lines without the slightest sacrifice in headroom, an unusual visored roof which arches and sweeps from front to rear without a break in its lines, airplane fenders, unusual panelling and moulding effects, and a rear shield or apron which conceals the gas tank, rear springs and running gear and which lends an extremely graceful sweep to the body lines.

Radiator Emblem.

One feature which undoubtedly will cause widespread comment is the appearance for the first time in Pierce-Arrow's history of a radiator emblem. This new distinguishing mark is a richly enamelled reproduction of the Pierce coat-of-arms.

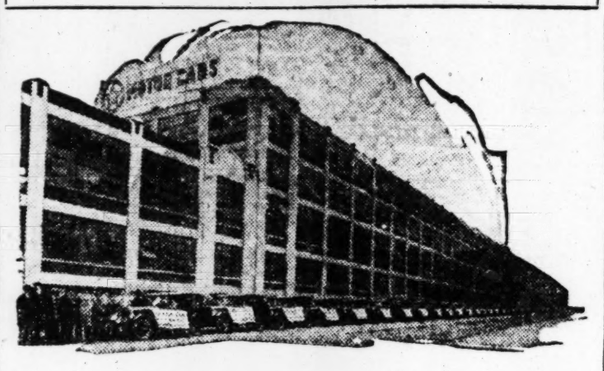

Another departure of unusual interest is the appearance of many of the cars with a special helmet design of bracket headlamps, although the famous Pierce-Arrow headlamps, now modernized to harmonize with the new design, are retained for those who prefer them. When fender headlamps are used, they carry with them small auxiliary helmet type lamps mounted midway between fender and radiator in an extremely graceful grouping.

In the interior, the eye strikes immediately an exquisitely designed instrument panel which carries speedometer, clock, gasoline gauge, engine temperature gauge and other instruments in one grouping under glass, indirectly lighted. A new steering wheel, an automatic ignition lock, a more conveniently placed gear shift lever and other new features are includes.

As before, Pierce-Arrow builds the bodies of aluminum and northern white ash with laminated joints.

Nitro-cellulose finishes in a wide range of both conservative and daring colors give the cars a lustrous appearance.

Star Car Breaks Records

Enormous plant of Durant Motors, Inc., at Elizabeth, N. J., one of four plants where the Star car is built. The photo was taken at the recent delivery of 61 cars to the New York city police department.

T. S. Johnston, assistant to W. C. Durant, announces that during October, 1927, the large Star plant at Elizabeth, N. J., built and shipped out more Star cars than during any previous October in the company's history.

This is the second consecutive month in which Star has broken its own record, September of this year having seen the largest production recorded for that month. These reports from Durant Motors, Inc., are particularly interesting in face of the fact that the automobile industry as a whole has shown a falling off in production during the past two months.

When W. C. Durant came "back on the job" in April of this year and resumed active participation in the building of the Star car, he promised to do something big for the motoring public. Thus far he has made no drastic changes in the Star line, but has preferred to devote himself to improving the basic quality of the cars through the incorporation of higher-grade materials and added features which reflect advanced trends in motor-car design.

It is significant that Mr. Durant's return has greatly added to the popularity of the Star, particularly the Star six, which he describes as "a sensational car." This is due no doubt to the great public confidence in the man himself, based on his outstanding successes in the past as a builder of motor cars.

NEW CHANGES DELAY FORD CARS SLIGHTLY

Detroit, November 12.—(Special.)—Eleventh-hour changes on the new Ford car have further delayed production. While the changes are of minor nature they have been of sufficient importance to prevent the final assembly line from getting under way as planned, and 200 motors which were to be used in the initial run were ordered back for changes. So far, no production models have been turned out.

Efforts are being concentrated on the Tudor model, which is nearest final approval. It is expected this body type will be the first to go into production, and first into dealers' hands. The fact that shipment of parts to branches has not started, although there is a considerable accumulation at the local Ford plants, is taken to mean dealers will be supplied with cars for show purposes from Detroit plants rather than from the various branches.

Ford dealers are being given demonstration rides in the test cars that have been built. All are loud in praise of the new Ford, which it is claimed, will attain 45 miles an hour in second gear and 63 miles in high, and with a minimum of 26 miles to the gallon of fuel. The new line will consist eventually of six body types and the cars will be available in ten colors.

In addition to rearranging its plants completely for production of the new car, Ford Motor company has increased capacity materially and made further progress in cutting production costs.

Nature Is Source Of Novel Colors Of Cadillac Cars

In the automobile salon to be held at the Hotel Commodore, New York, November 27 to December 3, "creations from nature's studio," will be the color scheme of the bodies presented by the Fisher Body corporation. The display will include on the Cadillac chassis eight Fisher-Fleetwood bodies and three Fisher bodies, and on the LaSalle chassis two Fisher-Fleetwood bodies and six Fisher bodies.

Besides presenting a radical departure from past design these creations are particularly interesting because of the new color developments. Earth, minerals, precious stones, flowers, birds, butterflies, sea water and deep-sea fish have all been sources of the new colors. Even the combinations of colors have been directly copied from natural sources and checked with scientifically prepared color charts.

Illustrative of the principle employed there will be on the Cadillac chassis a Fisher 4-passenger phaeton in emerald green with fenders and running gear in argent, the combination corresponding with a jeweler's artistic setting of an emerald in platinum. A Fisher convertible two-passenger coupe is in colors derived from the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. The combination will be Grand Canyon blue, brown and orange.

On the Cadillac chassis there will be a Fisher 7-passenger Imperial in a special iridescent blue and green, the colors copied from a South American butterfly. The body color of a Fisher-Fleetwood transformable cabriolet is "midnight blue." The broadlace of the upholstery is blue with stars in silver needlepoint. There will be a Fisher - Fleetwood transformable brougham reproducing the shade of the Mediterranean waters along the Italian coast.

In the 5-passenger Fisher-Fleetwood Imperial, the brilliant plumage of the board of paradise, one of nature's most dazzling color creations, furnishes the color scheme. On the LaSalle chassis will be a Fisher 5-passenger town sedan and a Fisher-Fleetwood transformable cabriolet.

Oakland-Pontiac Sales Disclose Big Increase

Pontiac, Mich., November 12.—Record-breaking October sales of 15,674 Oakland and Pontiac sixes, 61.6 per cent greater than during October, 1926, are reported by W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales for the Oakland Motor company. Mr. Tracy also states that sales totals for the last 10 months have made 1927 the company's most successful year.

The October record follows a September sales increase of 37 per cent over the corresponding period of a year ago.

The grand aggregate of Oakland and Pontiac six sales during the months from January to October, inclusive, is 172,027, against 121,330, during the first 10 months of 1926. This increase of 50,697 represents a gain of more than 41 per cent over the sales during the same period of 1926.

Introduction of the improved Pontiac six at lower prices early this year contributed substantially to the increased total of sales," said Mr. Tracy. "Oakland six sales experienced a brief mid-summer interruption while the factory was being rearranged for production of the new All-American six.

"But the immediate public acceptance of the Oakland All-American models since their introduction early in August, together with the sustained demand for the Pontiac six, have increased our business to the point where Oakland-Pontiac retail registrations ranged fourth among all manufacturers in the United States during August and September.

"The factory expansion necessary to keep pace with the continued rise in our sales has been going forward steadily. The completion of the model factory for the Pontiac six has been followed by an additional plant expansion program for the Oakland six. This project, already under construction, involves the expenditure of $3,000,000 which will provide the Oakland six with a gigantic new assembly building and new shipping facilities duplicating those already in operation at the Pontiac six factory."

Regular AC Advertising Schedule Is Announced

Automotive accessory dealers and service station men of Atlanta and vicinity will be interested to know that regular advertising has been released to The Constitution featuring AC products. The advertisements will give forceful messages of AC quality to the thousands of consumers.

This means that the sale of AC products in this territory will be supported by the best local newspaper advertising, as well as by liberal advertising in national publications.

Because newspaper advertising is so effective in paving the way for increased sales, dealers will take advantage of this demand by displaying AC products prominently in their stores and making use of window displays provided by the manufacturer.

Dealers are cooperating with this advertising because it offers a prominent line of merchandise to the consuming public backed by the sound merchandising and experience of the AC Spark Plug company of Flint, Mich.

Montreal, Quebec.—On board the Canadian Pacific steamship Metagama, which arrived last week-end, was a conducted party of British youth proceeding to the Provincial School of Agriculture at Claresholm, Alberta, under the "Hoadley scheme." They will receive there an intensive farm training during the winter months and in the spring be placed in employment on provincial farms under the supervision of the department.

Present Values in Cars Called Greatest Ever

The greatest dollar for dollar values in the history of the automotive industry may be had at the present time, the fall of 1927, according to W. I. Glasby, salesmanager for the Paige company of Georgia, local Paige dealer. Practically all motor car authorities agree that at no other time since the advent of the automobile could a finer car be bought for such a reasonable expenditure than today, Mr. Glasby explained.

"The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has made an analysis of the purchasing value of the dollar as measured by the trend of wholesale and retail commodity prices this year in comparison to previous years and the analysis shows, indirectly at least, the automobile to be in the most favorable light," he continued.

"As a basis for comparison, the latest report of the national industrial conference board shows the dollar to have fluctuated less than 5 cents either way in its purchasing value of commodities since 1921, and may be considered as having become stabilized at this level. The average weekly wage earnings have more than held their own over the same years. At the same time, substantial reductions in the prices of automobiles have been made almost annually.

"These reductions have been made possible, of course, through savings effected at the factory by massed production and improved processes. They have been passed on to the public regularly in lower prices until today an extended probe would be required to find an industry giving the dollar value offered in automobiles. While the purchasing value of the dollar measured by living cost for the wage earner has remained unchanged since 1921, the value of the same dollar in the purchase of an automobile has steadily reached new high levels.

"All these reductions have been made in spite of a vastly improved automobile. The car of today offers greater comfort, safety, beauty and durability, and it is in innumerable ways the superior product. We have the four-wheel hydraulic brakes for greater safety; a roomier, better furnished interior, and larger, stronger springs for comfort; more attractive color combinations, greater beauty and materials throughout which assure longer life to the product."

EXIT trouble

85A

Tire trouble has always been one of the annoying features of motoring and to some extent it will always be so, but to a great extent this trouble has been reduced by improved machinery and new methods.

Tires will continue to wear and "go out" when least expected, and nails and tacks will cause punctures, but the repaired tire need no longer give trouble because of poor work. Science and invention enables us to repair a tire so well that the repair is better than the main tire body.

We Now Have ELECTRICAL Tire Repairing

We have recently installed a complete repair and vulcanizing plant, operated entirely by electricity

GOODYEAR

As usual, GOODYEAR TIRES are what we offer to our customers because we believe in them. We feel that in no other tire can we offer so much tire value as in GOODYEARS, but our repairs are not confined to this line.

WE REPAIR THEM ALL.

This equipment is the most modern obtainable and represents the utmost in tire-building and repairing machinery.

With it there is no guess-work and no mistakes. No overheating and no semi-vulcanizing. Everything works with a clock-like precision.

The plant is in charge of the best tire mechanics obtainable and when we deliver a job it is just as if it had been repaired at the factory.

When you know all the facts ✓ ✓ They point the way to La Salle ownership and motoring satisfaction

La Salle is powered with the famous 90-degree, V-type, eight-cylinder engine, developed by Cadillac. Today there are more than 250,000 cars operating with this superb type of engine.

La Salle gives you performance, unattainable in a six, and unequaled, even, in any other eight except Cadillac because of the principle employed and the perfect balance of the engine.

La Salle is remarkably easy to steer and control. It responds instantly, even to the feminine hand, with only the slightest effort.

La Salle is graced with rare beauty in line and color—a style so fresh and fascinating that it has become the symbol of good taste.

La Salle is Cadillac-designed, and built in Cadillac plants by Cadillac craftsmen, which means quality, through and through, of the highest degree known to motordom.

A product of General Motors—an assurance of unmatched value made possible only through unequaled facilities and resources.

A complete line—a wide variety of Fisher and Fisher-Fleetwood bodies. Select the car that meets your needs. Drive it. Then ask yourself if there is any reason why you should be deprived of the satisfaction that La Salle ownership gives.

Progress of Southern Negro Lauded by Dr. E. H. Brookes

"More than anything else, the League of Nations needs the participation of some great power not directly interested in European politics, a part which the United States could play better than any other nation," according to Dr. E. H. Brookes, of Pretoria, South Africa, one of the three delegates from the South African union to the recent League of Nations assembly, who spent a few days this week in Atlanta. "In general I was quite well satisfied with the recent league assembly," continued Dr. Brookes, "feeling that it did all that could be expected under the circumstances. More than ever I was impressed with its necessity and its permanence, though conscious, of course, of its imperfections. I was impressed with the tremendous respect felt ove rthere for your great president, Woodrow Wilson, and with the feeling that America's absence from the assembly is a distinct misfortune for the league."

Dr. Brookes is head of the department of political science in the University of South Africa, located at Pretoria, and is spending several weeks in the United States, studying educational conditions, with special relation to negro education and the study of race relations in white colleges. Asked for a statement as to his observations of interracial conditions in this country as compared with those in the South African union, Dr. Brookes said:

Impressed With Progress.

"I have been especially struck with the magnitude of private benefactions and state appropriations for the education of negroes in America, and with the remarkable educational and economic progress which the race has made in this country. In South Africa native education is still largely in the hands of mission boards, with schools heavily subsidized by the government. Most of these schools are elementary, of course, but there are a few good high schools and one government institution of college grade. The enrollment of the latter, however, are responding just as other students do, and even in the native college the same examinations and the same degrees are given as in the case of white students. We have reason to be quite optimistic as to the ability of the native to acquire education and profit by it.

"As yet we have nothing that parallels at all the remarkable economic progress which negroes have made in America—no negro business or financial enterprises, and not yet very much entry into the field of skilled labor. Heretofore I had not been confident of the native's ability to succeed in business, but I am going back very much more optimistic on this point because of my observations here.

Preserve Native Language.

"Our effort is to preserve the native languages and culture with a view to making of the people good Africans rather than poor Europeans. To this end the churches are contributing greatly. Nearly half the population are nominally Christians, and the native churches are rapidly moving toward self-support and self-direction. The A. M. E. church of your county ha sestablished one of the most important of the independent denominational groups, and Max Yergan, an American negro representing the Y. M. C. A., has done a widespread and excellent work.

"Having observed the effectiveness of the interracial movement developed in your south land, leaders in South Africa have for three or four years been promoting a similar movement for the improvement of local conditions, the influencing of helpful legislation, and the removal of bitternerr and antagonism. This movement has the support of the government's commission on native affairs, and has been achieving very satisfactory results. Our experience leads us to believe that the principles and ethods of this movement are sound and effective."

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

Negro Achievement week is being observed by the Omega Psi Phi fraternity from November 15 through November 20. During this week members of the fraternity will appear before various groups for the purpose of relating the outstanding contributions negroes have made toward American civilization. Many newspaper and magazine articles are also conveying this message of the negro's struggle for a higher place of recognition. There are sixty-seven chapters of this fraternity, distributed throughout the United States and Canada.

In all economic fields participated in by the negro there are steady and consistent gains with the exception of agriculture perhaps. Recent migrations north and to the cities are no doubt responsible for fewer purchases of farm land. Report on urban property purchases show a decided increase. Despite these movements to urban centers, negroes still own about 25,000,000 acres of land. According to the negro year book in 1923, negroes in Georgia owned 1,632,863 acres of land assessed at $15,567,057, the value of their city property was $20,179,465; and the total assessed valuation of all their property was $18,233,541. The negroes of Virginia, in 1923, owned $20,065,409 worth of city property, while the total valuation of all their property in 1923 was $68,354,407. The negroes of North Carolina in 1923, owned 1,652,389 acres of land assessed at $18,343,205, the value of their city property was $30,332,118, and the total assessed valuation of all their property was $107,435,004.

Truxton, Va., built by the United States government during the recent war at a cost of more than $1,000,000, located just over the city line of Portsmouth, Va., was purchased by a syndicate of negro financiers for approximately $145,000. The transaction was a cash one. The town is served by the Portsmouth electric line and other transportation facilities are furnished by a belt line that connects with all of the main lines entering Norfolk and Portsmouth.

In Dermatology there is Dr. Theodore K. Lawless, of Chicago, who has contributed much in this field and is assistant to the professor of dermatology at Northwestern university and dermatologist for the Provident hospital.

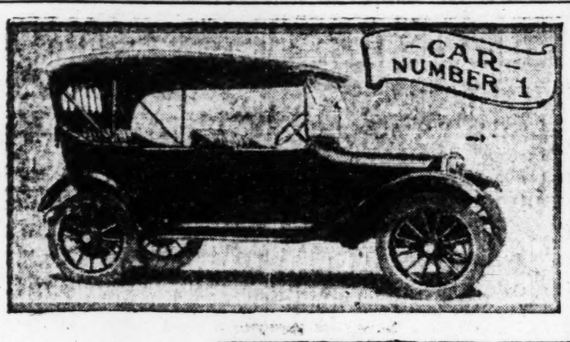

In neurology Dr. S. C. Fuller, of Boston, has attracted such attention that he has been selected associate professor of neurology at Boston university.

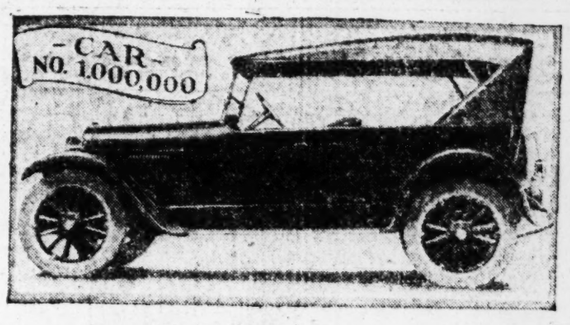

In embryology there is Dr. Ernest E. Just. It was announced at the convocation of the University of Chicago that Dr. Just had come "nearer the primary event in life than any other scientist." A group of celebrated world scientists under the guidance of a German biologist are writing a book. The editor has asked Dr. Just to use as much space as he desires in discussing his particular contribution. Lately, the national research bureau has been trying to get him released from some of his work at Howard university in order that he may devote more time to making researches for the bureau.

The first clock constructed in America was invented by Benjamin Banneker, a noted negro astronomer of Baltimore, Md. The late Granville T. Woods, of New York, took out some 50 or more patents. These inventions principally relate to electrical appliances. According to patent office records, several of Woods's patents have for valuable considerations been assigned to the General Electric company, of New York, Mr. Woods devised an incubator, a steam boiler furnace and a mechanical brake also. Elijah McCoy, of Detroit, Mich., obtained more patents on inventions than any other negro inventor. McCoy's lubricating cup made a reputation as a necessary equipment for all up-to-date machinery over 40 years ago. John Ernest Matzeliger, a negro born in Dutch Guiana in 1852 and later of Lynn, Mass., invented the first machine that performed automatically all of the operations involved in attaching soles to shoes. His invention marked the beginning of a distinct revolution in the art of making shoes by machinery. This patent resulted in the organization of the United Shoe company, the largest and richest corporation of its kind in the world.

Beginning today at 4 p. m., the week following up will be observed as International Week of Prayer and World Fellowship for the World's Y. W. C. A. to be observed everywhere by special meetings and contributions for the world's work. The public is invited to all the meetings. The Y. W. C. A. will close World Fellowship week Thursday evening, November 17, at 7:30 o'clock, with a world fellowship party. At this time representatives of the Y. W. C. A. will be dressed in the costume of some foreign country in which Y. W. C. A. work is carried on. Some special feature or activity of each country will be given which will add much to the international occasion.

Two Millionth Dodge Shows Great Advances Over Early Models

The first Dodge was built November 14, 1914, every detail of its construction having been personally supervised by John and Horace Dodge. They modeled the body design in clay. When the car was placed on the market it met with a remarkably enthusiastic reception.

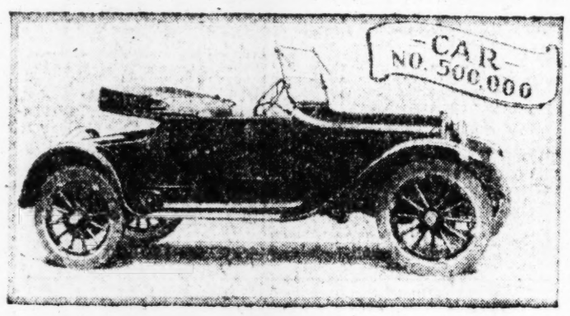

The 500,000th car was completed June 30, 1920, and was considered one of the snappiest roadsters of the day.

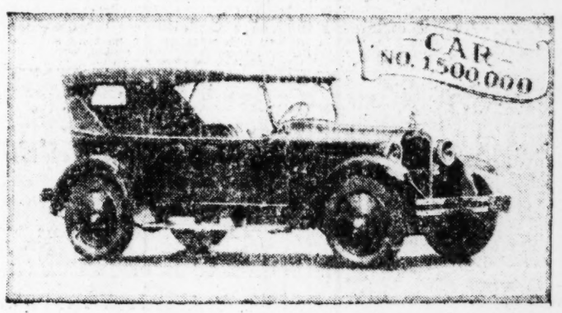

No. 1,000,000 came off the line December 12, 1923, showing great refinements in beauty over previous cars.

No. 2,000,000, "The Fastest Four in America," establishes a production record that is unsurpassed by cars in or above its price class, having been built in just nine days less than 13 years from the date of the first Dodge.

No. 1,500,000 was assembled January 14, 1926, 11 years and 2 months after No. 1.

Community Chest Leaders Confident as Subscriptions Boost Total to $435,000

Systematic Effort To Bring in Erstwhile Donors to Drive Will Be Begun Monday Morning.

Indication that Atlanta believes in the Community Chest as the most efficient and economical means of administering the city's funds for charity and human development is to be seen, according to a statement Saturday by officials of the Chest, in the steady increase of contributions to the Chest and its 35 agencies since the campaign for public support closed on November 1.

In response to the appeal of the city's 35 social welfare agencies as embraced in the Chest, which set at $500,000 the minimum amount with which they could operate without loss of efficiency in 1928, voluntary contributions since the campaign closed have increased the fund from $420,000, which was raised by [illegible] campaign workers, to $435,000.

Systematic efforts to complete the $500,000 fund which has been declared absolutely necessary will begin Monday. A group of young women workers on the administrative staffs of the Chest agencies will undertake to call by telephone every person who has given to the Chest in previous years but whose suscription was not received this year.

The telephone campaign will seek also as its objective the solicitation of new subscribers, and to every person called there will be related briefly the message and the purpose of the Community Chest—how its single appeal, consolidating the needs of 35 agencies, reduces greatly the expenses of collecting and administering charity funds; how it prevents duplication and waste, how its budgeting and planning combine expert business methods with human sympathy; how its great object is preventive charity, building self-reliance and character, rather than "hand-outs" which serve no good beyond the immediate moment.

According to officials of the Chest, those who are called in this final appeal for necessary funds will be told also that there has never been a greater need for relief than is seen this year.

"Atlanta faces a winter of unusually hard conditions among its poor and unfortunate," asserted the announcement which told of plans for the final appeal. "The number of applications for employment through the Community Employment service, which is one of our agencies, and the number of appeals for aid through other agencies, are abnormal. Many of these are from heads of families who under ordinary conditions would be making their own way.

"In this connection Atlanta should be grateful for the prospect of relief which is held out in a large measure by the proposed viaducts construction work. This project will provide employment for many who otherwise would be dependent on public relief. Without this, conditions would be even far worse than they appear likely to become this winter.

"Under any conditions, Atlanta cannot afford to neglect its obligation to its unfortunates; but particularly does this obligation apply in times when unusual distress is likely, when many worthy people become dependent by force of dire necessity and not by shiftlessness or lack of character."

Offices of the Community Chest are maintained on the third floor at 263 1-2 Peachtree street.

Defunct Georgia Banks Pay Creditors Total of $191,816

Dividends and preferred claims paid by the state banking department to depositors, preferred claimants and other creditors by banks in liquidation amounted to $191,816.53 during the last 10 days, the state banking department announced Saturday.

The statement follows:

Elberton Loan & Savings bank, dividend 2, 10 per cent to depositors, $19,395.18, making a total of 25 per cent paid to depositors.

Farmers bank, Doerun, dividend 2, 10 per cent to depositors, $6,196.75; preferred claims, $2,408.62, making a total of 20 per cent paid to depositors.

45 Years of Faithful Service and Value-giving

Couch-Nixon Wedding Is Beautiful Church Event

Among the loveliest of the autumn weddings was that of Miss Marian Gregg Couch and Herbert Giles Nixon, society assembling at 6 o'clock Saturday evening at the Druid Hills Methodist church, where the ceremony was solemnized amid a setting of floral beauty.

The Rev. Dr. R. L. Russell, pastor of the church, read the marriage service in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

Giant white chrysanthemums, standing in relief against a background of tropical foliage, formed the decorations of the church. The organ loft and altar were banked with palms and tall Australian ferns, among which graceful floor baskets filled with white chrysanthemums alternated with massive cathedral candelabra holding burning white tapers. The chancel rail was twined with garlands of smilax and the tall white columns ranging the length of the church were festooned with smilax. The ceiling and side lights were softly shaded, and the pews reserved for the members of the family connection were designated by clusters of chrysanthemums caught with bows of white satin ribbon.

Joseph Ragan, organist of North Avenue Presbyterian church, rendered a program of nuptial music preceding the entrance of the wedding party. During the ceremony he played "To a Wild Rose," using the march from "Lohengrin" as a processional.

Wedding Party.

The ushers, Carl Greene, Westerfield Born, Carroll McGaughey and Arthur Westerfield, entered the church first, coming in pairs down separate aisles.

They were followed by the bridesmaids and groomsmen, Miss Martha Powell entering with Winfrey Pollard, of Asheville, N. C., down separate aisles, and Miss Mary Jernigan, with Ralph Schyler, also of Asheville.

Miss Elkin Wright, the junior bridesmaid, entered the church alone, followed by the matrons of honor, Mrs. Westerfield Born and Mrs. Carl Greene, sisters of the bride.

Miss Louise Nixon, of Asheville, sister of the groom, acted as maid of honor, entering the church alone, just preceding the bride.

All of the attendants were gowned alike in shell-pink chiffon, fashioned with close-fitting, sleeveless bodices and full bouffant skirts, the uneven hemline being a smart feature of the gowns. The diagonal neckline, cut low on one side, was finished with a wide shawl effect of chiffon, draped low over one arm and caught at the side back with a rhinestone ornament, the ends extending to the bottom of the skirt. Pink satin slippers completed the costumes, and the attendants carried gorgeous cascade bouquets of roses, delphinium, ageratum, dahlias, sweet peas and valley lilies tied with French blue ribbons and showed with narrow ribbons of silver.

The lovely young bride entered the church with her father, Maxie Gregg Couch, who gave her in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, James Nixon, of Asheville.

Beautiful Bride.

The youthful beauty of the bride was emphasized by her wedding robes of softest white velvet, its sheer transparency being admirably adapted to the soft drapery of the model, which was caught at the side back with a handsome ornament of seed pearls, forming a graceful uneven hemline. Featuring becoming straight lines in front, the gown was finished at the round neckline and armholes with a delicate tracery of seed pearls. Her court train, falling from the shoulders, was showered with narrow ribbons of silver, and finished with duchess satin, embroidered in a graceful pearl design, sprays of orange blossoms forming an effective finish where the tulle and satin were joined. Arranged in becoming cap effect, the bride's tulle veil was banded across her forehead with rare rose point lace, terminating over each ear in long clusters of orange blossoms. A 12-inch border of princess lace finished the veil, which ended in a wider band of lace, tiny sprays of orange blossoms being caught at intervals to the veil.

Mrs. M. G. Couch, mother of the bride, was handsomely gowned in rust-colored crepe combined with cut velvet of the same shade and fashionably draped. A shoulder spray of orchids and valley lilies completed her costume.

The groom's mother, Mrs. W. B. Nixon, of Asheville, N. C., wore peach colored chiffon beaded in crystals. Her flowers were orchids and valley lilies, worn on her left shoulder.

During the evening Mr. Nixon and his bride left for a wedding journey to Washington, D. C., and other points in the east, after which they will make their home in Asheville, where Mrs. Nixon will be a notable addition to social circles.

The bride traveled in a smart two-piece costume, developed in shades of brown and tan wool georgette. Her hat was a becoming, close-fitting model of brown French felt.

Among the prominent out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Nixon, Jr., and Miss Alma Cawood, all of Asheville, N. C.; Mrs. Earl Harwich, of Miami, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Greene, of Wetumpka, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Westerfield, of Birmingham, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. George Brown, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Bridgers, Miss Mildred Brock and Miss Ruth Brock, all of Asheville, North Carolina.

A Trio of Attractive Brides-Elect and a Recent Bride

At the left of the group is Miss Mabel Dumas, lovely young daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Dumas, whose engagement is announced today to Douglas Crenshaw of Clinton, Tenn., formerly of Atlanta. The marriage will take place December 20 at the Ponce de Leon Baptist church. At the upper center is Miss Mary Jane McCarson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. McCarson, whose engagement is announced to Roy Brannon Brewer. At the lower center is Mrs. J. A. Barone, of Birmingham, Ala., who before her recent marriage was Miss Rose Cefalu, of Atlanta. Mrs. Barone is well known for her lovely soprano voice. The figure at the right is Miss Mary Catherine Lafferty, of Jacksonville, Fla., whose engagement was recently announced to Charles Joseph Lynch, Jr., formerly of Atlanta. Miss Lafferty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Lafferty, her marriage to Mr. Lynch to take place in December. School of Civics of Women Voters To Be Continued November 14

The third class of the "school of civics," under the auspices of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, will be conducted by Miss Eleonore Raoul at the Georgian Terrace at 10 o'clock on Monday, November 14.

Interest is being expressed in the large attendance at each session of the course by women from all over the city. The last class of this series will be held on Thursday, November 17, and will be followed by similar courses in other sections of the city during the next few months.

These courses are to arouse those people who do not usually vote and to bring the women as voters into realistic touch with public issues and train them to think independently and intelligently.

The course is free to all who are interested. For further information, phone league headquarters, Walnut 8264.

Finance Committee to Meet.

The finance committee of the league which has done such splendid work recently towards raising its budget will hold an important meeting at headquarters, 356 Candler annex, on Wednesday, November 16, at 10:30 o'clock.

The league's monthly educational meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce hall Friday, November 18, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. R. L. Turman, president of the league, will preside. An attractive program with interesting speakers has been arranged. The amendments to the city charter will be discussed, especially the one involving the schools, which is to be voted on in the general city elections of Wednesday, December 7.

Georgia State College News.

Valdosta, Ga., November 12.—The Dramatic club was entertained Tuesday night by the new members, who are Laura Milton, Margaret Middleton, Erma Cowart, Doris Fleming, Florris Woodard, Myrtle Mae Head and Margaret Littlefield.

At vespers Sunday evening the Y. W. C. A. choir, under the direction of Estha Freeman, gave a musical program. Those taking part on the program were Estha Freeman, accompanist for the choir, Sara Hall, Jessie Mae Prescott, Dorothy Bashee, Iterille Armstrong, Cora Bergbaud, Helen Ryon, Cappie Bush, Bertha Fersell, Grace Cooke, Mary Smith Hodges, Talbiah Johnston, Myrtle McArthur and Lois Sharpe.

Miss Gladys Warren, head of the music department, gave a piano recital Tuesday evening.

The Phi Lambda Athletic association won in the race with the Phi Kappas for the first association to have 100 per cent of its dues paid for the year, and thereby won 25 points toward the plaque which will be awarded on points later in the year.

Card Party and Barbecue Set For Nov. 17 by Welfare Group

An event of unusual interest in the activities of the Atlanta Woman's club will be the card party and barbecue luncheon which will be held by the public welfare department Thursday morning, November 17. Cards will be played at 10:30 o'clock and the barbecue will be served at 12:30 o'clock. Numbers of those who are unable to attend the card party will be pleased to know that the luncheon will be served.

Mrs. George Ripley, Jr., chairman of the department, will be assisted by Mrs. T. J. Ripley, Dr. Elizabeth Broach, Mrs. George Jewett, Mrs. R. C. Jessup, Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, Mrs. Houston Johnston, Mrs. R. M. McFarland, Jr., Mrs. John Maden, Mrs. T. G. Dolph, Mrs. W. W. Murphy and Mrs. J. A. Carlisle.

The tables are $2 each, including the barbecue luncheon, or 50 cents for a single reservation. All those who will attend are requested to bring their own cards and pencils, and anyone interested may get information by calling Mrs. Ripley, Hemlock 6766-J, or Mrs. Simmons at the club, Hemlock 0225.

Those present were Misses Lila Boswell, Claudia Crockett, Catherine Taylor, Katie Moore, Elise Stanley, Caroline Scott, Martha Morgan, Mildred Powell, Novine Holcomb, Mary Carson, Frances Hall, Margaret Copeland, Elizabeth Tolbert, Mary Lou Barnhart, Beatrice Mullins and Maitie Musselwhite.

Educational week has been observed at G. S. C. W. with the following chapel programs:

A debate was sponsored Tuesday by the class in government under the direction of Dr. Amanda Johnson. The subject was "Resolved, That Georgia Should Adopt a Unicameral system of legislature." The affirmative side was upheld by Miss Jimmie Dock, of Dalton, and Miss Marie Smith, of Blakely. The negative supporters were Miss Catherine Brantley, of Roswell, and Miss La Verne Stewart. The decision was rendered in favor of the negative.

On Wednesday a musical program was given with Miss Alice Tucker and Mrs. Allen. The program consisted of several musical numbers, among which were vocal solos by Miss Florence Rogers, Miss Nancy Heard and Miss Irma Matin. Piano solos were rendered by Miss Helen Dasher, of Fort Valley.

Thursday morning the chapel exercises were devoted to a lecture by Dr. J. L. Beeson on "Know Your School," in which he gave interesting information of a historical nature of this college.

Dr. G. H. Webber entertained his Bible study class Saturday, which is composed of senior students, at a rock party at his home. Among those present were Harlowe Thompson, of Comer; Dorothy Roberts, of Columbus; Elinor Ennis, of Lakeland, Fla.; Myrtle Godlee, Annie Moore Greer, of Blakely; Marguerite Clark, of Chauncey; Ruby Brightwell, of Weston; Harriet Berry, of Griffin; Frances Brooks, of Lakeland, Fla.; Frances Adams, of Atlanta; Nellie Shipp, of Reidsville; Maude Willson, of Lyons; Mary Fort, of Hamilton; Sara Jones, of Cartersville; Mattie Musselwhite, of Reynolds, and Margaret Lumpkin, of Crawford.

John Laurens D. A. R. Presents Book.

An interesting and instructive book, "Homes of Famous Americans," by Chesla C. Sherlock, has been presented to the Carnegie library in Dublin by the John Laurens chapter, D. A. R. This book was purchased by the chapter and used as a basis for study last year when the chapter used for a course of study the same one as suggested for 1927-28 by the state chairman of programs, "Homes of Famous Americans." Very interesting papers were written on the history of Craigie House, home of John Alden and Priscilla, home of John Howard Payne, the story of "My Old Kentucky Home," Bulloch Hall, Wren's Nest, the Hermitage, Monticello and the home of Betsy Ross. At each meeting appropriate music suggested by the home under discussion was given, and the year's study was both interesting and instructive.

The new regent, Mrs. John S. Adams, began the work of 1927-28 with a program on LaFayette at the September meeting, and the programs for the year are based on the outline suggested by the state chairman of programs for 1926-27, "The Enduring Spirit of '76," and gives promise of being as helpful as the one used by the chapter last year, which was "Homes of Famous Americans." This chapter anticipated by one year the study suggested by the state chairman of programs.

EXCLUSIVE IN ATLANTA WITH CHAMBERLIN-JOHNSON-DUBOSE

Silk Net Hose

Are worn with sports shoes. Heretofore, these stockings have been confined to afternoon and evening costumes, but now smart women find it practical (these stockings cannot run) as well as chic to wear silk net stockings of a rather large mesh with their sports shoes.

Silk Net Hose at Chamberlin's, $3.95 Street Floor

Oxblood Red

—is one of the newest colors for evening. Chanel has always been fond of red. Every season she brings out a new one that is just as popular as was her red of the previous season. This season she introduced a red which she calls Oxblood, for evening wear. It is a deep, rather bright red, with a yellow cast in it.

At Chamberlin's—Skinner's Crepe, $2.95 Satin Back Crepe, $3.50 Street Floor

All-Black Coat

With the reign of black throughout the costume world, the all-black coat for afternoon is at once an established fashion. Equally smart collared and cuffed with natural lynx, red fox, or badger.

Black Coats at Chamberlin's $59.50 to $298.50 Second Floor

Girls at School

Autumn days find the younger members of New York's socially prominent families at school, dressed simply and appropriately for the demands of their school activities. The idea of dressing sisters alike, even when there is a great disparity in ages, grows increasingly popular at schools like The Spence, Miss Chapin's, and Scudder.

At Chamberlin's "Miss Junior" Dresses, $25 Second Floor

Luminous Whites

For evening, the new luminous whites are first! Whites that look as if some sort of marvelously flattering light were shining on them, are one of the most exciting fashion contributions of this season. White satin as full and rich and faintly golden as real camellias. White satin with a faint mauve cast. White sheer velvet with faintly rosy glow—a radiantly becoming tint.

At Chamberlin's— White Crepe Satins, $2.95 to $5.95

White Velvets, $9.50 to $10.50

Honey Tones

Very close after white comes the new honey tones—some very little darker than the creamy whites.

W. F. Slaton P.-T. A. Daddies' Meeting Is of Interest

One of the most interesting assemblies of the W. F. Slaton P.-T. A. was the annual daddies' meeting held at the Grant Park Baptist church Tuesday evening. Rev. A. W. Reaves, pastor of Grant Park Baptist church, opened the session with prayer. W. A. Sutton, superintendent of the public school system, brought an interesting and helpful message. Mr. Sutton informed the large gathering of patrons of the financial conditions now facing the schools for the year 1928. He stated that the enrollment is larger than at the same time a year ago and the teaching force less.

Miss Thrasher's sixth grade presented a program.

Mrs. Jackson, president, introduced Mrs. Cola Spears, principal of the school, who introduced other members of the faculty.

Mrs. S. F. Lee gave a brief report of the parent-teacher council meeting. Mrs. J. W. Anderson urged promptness in having the dental certificates properly filled out and returned. Mrs. H. B. Boyd stated that additional property had been purchased and a new building unit would be erected soon. Mrs. C. L. Lozier and Mrs. W. E. Vondergrad reported a sum cleared from the picture shows and candy pulling held during the month. Pictures will be shown every Friday afternon in the school auditorium at 2:30 o'clock. All children and grown-ups in the community are invited to support these shows which will be of the best type. A committee of mothers and teachers will chaperon the children. Mrs. H. S. Lockridge announced a pre-school meeting at her home, 928 Cherokee avenue, S. E., on November 28. Mrs. J. C. Hill requests those wishing to enroll in the Smith-Hughes classes to register.

Rev. A. W. Reaves, J. N. Wilson, A. C. Hopkins, M. M. Martin and J. O. Young were chosen to represent the Slaton school community in serving with a larger committee and the board of education in working out the financial problems of the school system.

The attendance prizes were received by Miss Cheely's high kindergarten class and Miss Thrasher's sixth grade.

Smillie P.-T. A. Reports Meeting.

"Cooperation" was the subject of an inspiring talk made by Willis A. Sutton before a large group of daddies and mothers assembled for the November P.-T. A. meeting at Smillie school Friday evening. Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state P. T. A. president, gave a talk, waking up the assembly to their responsibility of being parents, counselling them to be "real, not quack parents." She explained that the P.-T. A. was behind law enforcement, better picture shows, and understanding between teachers and parents.

Madame Louise Varkonyi rendered two songs. There were 65 daddies and 145 mothers present, low first and low fourth won the prizes for attendance. The better films tickets were awarded to low fourth. All playground equipment has been put in good condition, and two new slides added, putting the school yard in splendid condition. A benefit party to be held Monday, November 21, at Habersham Hall, was announced and an appeal for cooperation made.

O'Keefe P.-T. A. Is Addressed By Rev. N. R. H. Moor

Mrs. C. F. von Herrmann, president of O'Keefe P.-T. A., in planning her year's program had in mind the growing need of parental education in child guidance and all the speakers for the monthly meetings have been asked to choose subjects along that line. In harmony with this idea Rev. N. R. H. Moore, who was the speaker on last Thursday evening, chose for his subject "Holding."

Miss Mewhorn, school librarian, made an appeal for books for the library, announcing a book shower next week, when the pupils will be asked to bring books for the library. Reference books, biographies, history and poetry are preferred to fiction.

Mrs. Klausman made an appeal for an endowment fund for the use of those children whose parents are not financially able to keep the children in school. She also appealed for furniture for the teachers' rest room.

Mr. Hastings announced the inaugural exercises of the new president and vice president of student government November 23 at the Tabernacle Baptist church at 10 a. m. He also invited the patrons to attend the junior industry exposition at the school Friday, November 11, from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

Reports from the recent cooking school showed a substantial sum added to the treasury. Grade B 9-50, Mr. Slapper, teacher, won the theater tickets.

James L. Key P.-T. A. Chairmen Make Reports.

The James L. Key P.-T. A. met Tuesday, Mrs. Howard McCutcheon presiding.

The need for an auditorium is more evident each meeting as many of the patrons had to sit out in the hall due to the fact that the room where the meeting was held was so extremely overcrowded and entirely inadequate to take care of the membership of the patrons.

All committees made encouraging reports. The chairmen are: Better films, Mrs. E. W. Gunn; welfare, Mrs. H. Mallory and Mrs. J. L. Saul; house and grounds, Mrs. J. L. Mitchell; Smith-Hughes classes, Mrs. Mayfield; safety, Mrs. E. H. Lipman; camp fire, Mrs. R. F. Crames; pre-school, Mrs. J. J. Cserniglia; hospitality, Mrs. A. C. Cansselle; junior Red Cross, Mrs. J. Friedman; juvenile production, Mrs. A. R. Fink; social representatives, Mrs. T. R. Finley, Mrs. J. A. Huggins, Mrs. Greer and Mrs. Johnson.

Mr. Barron, president of the Atlanta Teachers' association brought some very interesting as well as startling facts to the notice of the school patrons, such as: "There are 122 less teachers than last year, yet there are 1,000 more pupils in the schools." He stressed the need of more money to run the schools properly, as this program of economy was hurting both the children and the teachers. Mr. Barron further stated that the teachers' equipment was entirely inadequate and that it was a necessity for more money to be appropriated next year to run the schools properly.

The orchestra of the Jewish orphans' home, under the direction of Guy Hornsby, rendered a very pleasing program.

Edgewood P.-T. A. Sponsors Bazar.

Edgewood P.-T. A. will hold a bazar in the school auditorium Friday afternoon, November 18. There will be all kinds of dainty handmade articles suitable for gifts. There will be lots of pretty dolls to delight the little girls. There will be one booth for aprons, both dainty and useful. The teachers of the school will furnish a fish pond. The country store will have all kinds of canned fruit and fresh eatables. There will be candy, sandwiches, pies and homemade cakes, as well as many other attractive articles for sale. All friends and patrons of Edgewood school are invited to attend and help make the bazar a financial success.

College Park P.-T. A. To Sponsor Carnival.

College Park P.-T. A. will have a Thanksgiving carnival at Temple avenue school November 18. Drinks, cakes and candies will be on sale. There will also be a contest to select a queen. The girl securing the largest number of votes will be crowned queen of the carnival Friday evening.

Parent-Teacher Meetings

Tuesday evening, November 15, at 7:30 p. m. at the school auditorium the Highland P.-T. A. will hold its next meeting for the daddies as well as the mothers. Mrs. Willis A. Sutton will render a violin solo and Professo Field, of the Georgia School of Technology, will give a talk.

The R. L. Hope P.-T. A. will meet at the school Tuesday afternoon, November 15, at 2:30 o'clock promptly. All interested mothers are cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. George Ripley, Jr., has called a meeting of the R. L. Hope school P.-T. A. board Monday morning, November 14, at 10:30 o'clock at the school. The board is composed of the officers, chairmen of the various committees and the grade sponsors. Each one of these is urged to be present.

The Boys' High School P.-T. A. meets Tuesday evening, November 15, at 7:30 o'clock, in the new portable building, which is accessible from Ninth street. The program on this occasion will be of unusual interest to the parents, as military training and athletics will be the subjects under discussion. Colonel W. R. Dashiell and Sergeant Short will speak on military activities and Ben Read will have charge of the brief talks to be made on athletics. R. I. Doyal and D. W. Johnson will be in attendance to speak of their work as coaches for athletics. John Hancock, president of the association, requests the parents to attend this meeting.

The preschool circle of the Whitefoord Avenue school meets Tuesday at 3 o'clock. There will be a round table discussion of health habits, and a large attendance of mothers is urged.

The Bolton P.-T. A. will have daddies' night Friday, November 18, at 8 o'clock, in the school auditorium. An interesting program has been arranged and a full attendance is urged.

W. A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools, and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale will be the speakers of the Edgewood P.-T. A. daddies' meeting which will be held in the school auditorium Tuesday evening, November 15, at 7:45 o'clock.

The executive board of the Edgewood P.-T. A. meets Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the school auditorium.

S. M. Inman P.-T. A. meets Wednesday at 3 o'clock, November 16. An interesting talk will be made by Mrs. Effie Allbright, explaining the aims of school program for this year at Samuel Inman school. This promises to be a very instructive and interesting program.

The Samuel M. Inman P.-T. A. executive board meets at 9:30 o'clock at the school Monday morning, November 14.

All mothers and members of the Rock Springs P.-T. A. are urgently requested to attend the meeting November 17 at 2:30 o'clock at the Rock Spring school. An Arbor day program will be featured with Mr. Harvey, of the State College of Agriculture, as the principal speaker. Important business will be discussed and refreshments will be served.

The Kirkwood P.-T. A. meets Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. Mrs. R. R. Ritchie, fifth district chairman of children's reading, will speak.

The State Street school P.-T. A. meets at 3 o'clock November 18, the regular time having been advanced one week so as not to conflict with the Thanksgiving activities. All friends invited to be present.

Daddies' meeting of Moses W. Formwalt P.-T. A. will be held in school auditorium Tuesday evening, November 15, at 7:30 o'clock. Most important issues will be discussed. All daddies are urged to attend.

Girls' High school P.-T. A. meets Tuesday afternoon, November 15, at 2:30 o'clock. A rather unique and interesting program has been arranged and will include community singing by the assembly, led by the Glee club and directed by Mrs. Cleve Webb. The Fresimen Dramatic club will present a play entitled "Tony's Decoration." This will be quite entertaining. All patrons and friends are cordially invited.

North Ave. Presbyterian P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The North Avenue Presbyterian school P.-T. A. met Tuesday afternoon in the school auditorium. After a very short business session, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. J. H. Mullins, program chairman, who had arranged a delightful "musical afternoon."

All numbers were rendered by students of the school.

An interesting talk was given by Mrs. De Los Hill, former president of the Atlanta Music club, on "Religious Education in Music." She urged the school to enter the song memory contest for religious songs.

The count of mothers gave the prizes to the first grade, junior high 2-2 and the senior class.

District P.-T. A. Meetings Are Of Wide Interest in Georgia

The fourth district parent-teacher associations will meet at LaGrange High school November 19, at 10 a. m., the hostess associations being those of the LaGrange High school, Mrs. R. S. O'Neal, president; Dawson Street school, Mrs. George Sargeant, president, and Harwell Avenue school, Mrs. Echo Doss, president. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock.

In addition to district and local speakers the following state officers and chairmen will appear on the program: Mrs. P. H. Jeter, president Georgia division P.T. A.; Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, second vice president in charge of organization, and Mrs. P. G. Hanahan, state chairman of Church P.-T. A. The district meetings enable many members of P.-T. A. groups unable to attend the state conventions to meet the state officers and chairmen and receive information and inspiration for their work. This is the fourth annual conference of the fourth district. The officers of the district are: Mrs. Roy Martin, Columbus, president; Mrs. L. H. Crowell, Columbus, first vice president; Mrs. H. C. Smith, Columbus, second vice president; Mrs. J. O. Langdon, Woodbury, third vice president; Mrs. Bion Williams, Woodbury, fourth vice president; Mrs. James Johnson, Manchester, fifth vice president; Mrs. W. L. Camp, Moreland, sixth vice president; Mrs. Shade Patillo, West Point, seventh vice president; Mrs. George Caldwell, LaGrange, secretary.

Second District.

The Second District P.-T. A. convention will be held in Arlington November 18, with the vice president, Mrs. H. J. Maddox. The program will be song, invocation, address of welcome, response by Mrs. J. E. Hudspeth, P.-T. A. song, reports of district president and other officers; address, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, president Georgia division P.-T. A.; talk by Mrs. Simmons, state chairman social standards, with girls to demonstrate the good and bad in dress, manners and habits; reports of associations; talks by Miss Gilbert, district chairman of music; Mr. Bower on rural schools; Mrs. Davison, Alice Hilburn fund; publicity chairman; election of officers.

Eighth District.

"The Wise Use of Leisure" was the theme of the address of Miss Erna Proctor, of the child health center of Athens, before the eighth district P.-T. A. conference at Social Circle November 5. The importance of directed recreation, the changing times in which parents must keep abreast of the children, the pointing out of the fact that old as well as young were moving at a swifter pace, all pointed to the speaker's thought that the answer to the question of our young people was understanding participation in their activities. Miss Proctor showed the value of pre-school work by citing a grade in the Athens schools which went into the first year 100 per cent perfect physically from summer round-up work and which in the third year is still holding its high average of physical well being.

Mrs. P. H. Jeter, of Decatur, president Georgia division, P.-T. A., gave a splendid address on standards of the P.-T. A., after which she conducted a round table assisted by Mrs. Ira Farmer, state chairman publicity; Mrs. Charles Center, state chairman magazines, and Mrs. P. G. Hanahan, state chairman church P.-T. A. From the officers and local presidents many worth-while suggestions were received, which will be taken up in detail at a later date for state use.

An invitation was accepted to meet with Elberton in March. A barbecue dinner was served by the hostess association.

Health Story To Be Broadcast.

Mrs. John W. Neil of Marshallville, Ga., story teller in the Marshallville schools, and known to hundreds of children as "Aunt Hannah," will tell the children of the south a story over WSB, "The Voice of the South," Thursday morning, November 17, at the radio school hour at 10:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Neil, a graduate of Wesleyan Female college in the '70s, and of Chautauqua, New York, in 1926, has given practically all her life to the occupation of entertaining children, studying almost continually for a part of each year. In wit and humor she is a match for any young college graduate of the present generation, and yet she retains the charm of the "old-fashioned girl."

Mrs. Neil speaks at the invitation of the child health department of the fifth district, Mrs. M. T. LaHatte, chairman of child health; Mrs. George H. Slappey, chairman of child hygiene, sponsoring her introduction. Supt. Willis A. Sutton has accorded her a place on the school program, and 80,000 Atlanta children will listen in, as well as many other schools who tune in on WSB as a part of the regular chapel hour. It is to be hoped that many others who do not make it a practice to listen in will rig up a loud speaker to hear "Aunt Hannah" tell a delightful story that will teach one of life's most important lessons—the value to a boy and girl of good health.

Muscogee Council Reports Meeting.

The Muscogee county chapter of P.-T. A. met Thursday afternoon at the public library, Columbus, Ga., the president, Mrs. W. Cooper, presiding. This October meeting was featured by reports of president and tinfoil chairman, and plans for P.-T. A. participation in city beautification and for the fourth district P.-T. A. conference.

The president's report was replete with accounts of various activities of the past month; visits to P.-T. A. in city and county, work in the interest of the state P.-T. A. cook book and year book, and in plans for Columbus centennial and for city beautification. Mrs. T. Hicks Fort, Mrs. Ausfeld and Mrs. Dupont Kirven will represent the council on the general committee in this work and Mrs. A. N. Dykes will represent the council as one of the judges.

Fire prevention week and community safety were discussed. The exceptional work of Miss Martha McAlpin, a pre-school worker from Athens, was presented to the council. An invitation will be extended to Miss McAlpin to visit Columbus at an early date. A splendid tinfoil report was made by Mrs. Mike Fox, showing the Rose Hill school to have won first prize for securing the largest amount of tinfoil. November 7 to 13 was announced as educational week and November 17 to 24 as child book week, and P.-T. A. programs for November should present these subjects.

Mrs. Roy Martin, president of the fourth district, was present and made an enthusiastic talk in regard to the one-day conference to be held in LaGrange high school, LaGrange, Ga., November 19. All associations in the district are urged to send their presidents and at least two delegates. Mrs. P. H. Jeter, Mrs. Z. V. Peterson and Mrs. Hanahan, state officers, will be present and will appear on the splendid program. A large delegation of Columbus P.-T. A. leaders will attend.

Avondale High P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

A large and enthusiastic crowd of mothers and teachers were present at the meeting of the Avondale High P.-T. A. Thursday. This meeting brought to a close the contest which has been running in the school for two weeks to see which room could secure the largest per cent membership to the Parent-Teachers association. Mrs. George Turk's room, 8-B, won the contest, and in addition to winning the half holiday they were served a surprise lunch Monday, November 7, by the P.-T. A.

A count of mothers was taken. Miss Mildred Cowan's room, 8-A, won the prize. Miss Addie Pharr's room, tenth and eleventh grades, which is on the library committee, presented the P.-T. A. with $10 with which to buy some new books. Other plans were discussed for the purchasing of more library books.

Glennwood P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Glenwood school P.-T. A. met in the auditorium Wednesday afternoon. A very interesting program was rendered by the children of the different grades on "Armistice Day," a poem, "In Flanders Field" and "America's Answer" by two girls of the fifth grade were given. Mrs. Holmes class, the first grade, gave a beautiful costume play. Mrs. William J. Sayward gave an instructive talk on "Books and Libraries."

Bass Jr. High P.-T. A. To Start Student Loan Fund

Over $4,000 of the $5,000 quota was subscribed by Bass Jr. High parents at the meeting held Wednesday evening. This fund is to start the W. A. Bass student loan fund. Harold Hirsch, chairman of student loan fund, spoke on its value to education. Professor Smith handed over to Mrs. Kingdon, president, a check for $2,000, this amount having been in his possession for a trust fund.

George Powell, member of the board of education from the ninth ward, urged the parents to vote at the coming election.

A quartet from the Emory Glee club delighted the audience with their songs.

Rev. N. H. R. Moor, "Daddy of the P.-T. A.," brought a message long to be remembered. He urged the parents to watch the mental diet of the child. Miss Frank Taylor of seventh grade won the prize.

St. Luke's P.-T. A. Holds Fathers' Meeting.

St. Luke's P.-T. A. held a father's meeting Tuesday evening, November 7. The president, Mrs. Frank Henry presided. The rector, Rev. N. R. H. Moor gave a very interesting and inspiring talk.

Calhoun P.-T. A. Hears Rev. Moor.

Calhoun P.-T. A. met Tuesday afternoon with a splendid attendance. Dr. N. R. H. Moor, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, was the principal speaker. He took as his subject "Religion," not as it pertains to any one church but as a link between the home and the school. He urged the parents to realize their responsibility that could not be left for anyone else. He stressed the great importance of boys and girls having real homes and companionship with their parents.

Georgia University Campus Notes.

Athens, Ga., November 12.—The South Carolina Gamecocks will furnish music for dances Friday and Saturday evening at the University of Georgia in connection with the festivities centering around the Mercer-Georgia football game.

John Cowper Powys, English essayist, novelist and poet, who addressed students and faculty of the university Wednesday morning, was entertained at a luncheon which was attended by a group of the faculty.

Gamma Alpha chapter of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority entertained Saturday evening at a costume dance at the chapter house on Hill street, honoring the pledgees.

The Phi Mu sorority was hostess at a wiener roast this week, which honored the pledges of that organization.

Hugh Hodgson, Atlanta musician, was the chief attraction on the program of the Music club Tuesday evening at War Memorial hall.

Members of the Red and Black staff were entertained at a local hotel Tuesday evening by the business manager of the paper.

Edwin Everett, instructor in English, will address members of the Zodiac club, a group of women students of the university, Tuesday afternoon on Glenway Westcott's "The Grandmothers," in 1927 prize-winning Harper novel.

Sponsored by the staff of the Georgia Cracker, university literary and humorous magazine, poetry written by students of the institution is to be printed in book form this spring. Professor R. P. Walker, of the English department, and Miss Louise Hollingsworth, of the library staff, will aid the Cracker staff in the undertaking.

Robert Young, Macon, has been elected president of the sophomore class at the university, to fill the vacancy created when John R. Gunnels, Hull, did not return to the college in September.

Captain Ira C. Nicholas, army officer stationed at the university, will address members of the International Relations club Tuesday evening.

"The Old Soak," a three-act play by Don Marquis, has been selected by the Thalian Dramatic club for the first number it will present this year. Not only will the number be given in Athens, but in Atlanta, December 2, and in other Georgia towns.

Rev. Graham Speaks Next Sunday Afternoon.

Rev. Eleanor G. Graham, field secretary for the International New Thought alliance, and district president of Louisiana, speaks Sunday afternoon, November 13, at 3 o'clock, at Central Congregational church in the ladies' parlor, 9 West Ellis street. She has chosen for her subject "Acknowledging the Christ." Mrs. C. H. Rowland will render vocal selections and Mrs. Arthur Jacobson will give the opening silence. The public is cordially invited. No charge, love offering only.

Commercial P.-T. A. To Sponsor Concert On November 18th

A program of concert numbers will be presented under the auspices of the Commercial High P.-T. A. Friday evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Commercial High school auditorium, 138 South Pryor street.

Mrs. Susan Bowden Johnson, soprano; Solon Drukenmiller, tenor; Mrs. A. L. Slaton, solo pianist and accompanist, and Miss Dorothy Collier, a young reader of charming gifts, constjtute the group of entertainers. Piano numbers will also be rendered by Misses Jewel McNair, Barbara Baker and Dorothy Saunders. Miss Baker and Mrs. Slaton will play several piano duets. Tickets for this concert are on sale at Cable Piano Co.

"Better financial support we must have," said Professor Willis A. Sutton, who was the principal speaker at the Commercial High School P.-T. A. meeting held Tuesday in the school auditorium, Mrs. J. D. Coleman presiding. Professor Sutton spoke on "the financial condition in the city school system" and "character building for children."

W. C. Slate, commissioner from the second ward, gave a brief description of the new building to be erected at Commercial High. The plans, he said, have been drawn and construction will begin soon. One of the many conveniences of the new plant will be elevators.

W. C. Lowe, principal of Commercial High school, gave the mothers who had braved the rain to attend the meeting a hearty welcome.

The class attendance was won by Miss Parks' class, C-2, second honor going to Miss Steinheimer's class, C-1.

Refreshments were served during the social hour and the mothers were entertained by the Commercial High Glee club, which offered two selections. This was the first public appearance of the Glee club, which is directed by Miss Edna Whitmore, music teacher of Girls' and Commercial High schools.

Joe Brown Parents View School Work.

Mr. Slaughter, of the faculty of Joe Brown Junior High school, invited the parents of Capitol View section to the demonstration of school work to be held at that school Friday evening, November 11. The membership drive is progressing, a keen rivalry existing between the grade chairmen, as to which grade will be first to report 100 per cent membership. A carnival will be held soon for the benefit of the school. Plans were discussed, the date of the carnival to be announced later.

The Low second grade again won the attendance prize with 24 mothers present, this being the third consecutive month this grade has won.

"Training for Citizenship" was the subject on which Miss Postell talked to the members of the Capitol View P.-T. A. at its November meeting. Miss Postell presented in a most interesting way the different stages of development in the training for and assuming of citizenship first in the home, in school and adult life. A violin solo was given by Jack Jackson of the third grade, and several selections by the school harmonica and ukulele club.

Teachers' Day

Today, November 13, is Teacher's day. Mrs. P. H. Jeter, president Georgia division, P.-T. A., asks every member to express in some personal way her appreciation for the teacher who has so large a part in the training of the children.

Pre-School Department Holds Meeting of Interest

At the monthly meeting of the pre-school age department of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council held Wednesday in M. Rich & Bros.' schoolroom, Dr. Newdigate Owensby made the statement that 51 per cent of all sick beds were occupied by nervous and mental diseases and that most all nervous and mental disturbances began in childhood. Other features of the meeting were the study class of Miss McAlpine; a talk on the importance of the work by Mrs. Charles Foster; discussion of a pre-school library, to be started by each circle, thereby causing the work to be begun each year without delay, as has been the case before, owing to lack of study and reading material.

Mrs. J. C. Malone, former pre-school council chairman, offered as a prize each month a study book on child welfare to the circle having the largest attendance at the pre-school council meetings.

Thirty-one of the 40 elementary schools of Atlanta has a pre-school age circle, Mrs. H. G. Parks having organized five the past month. Reports of the various circles showed much work being accomplished along this line.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. reported three circles, two child welfare magazines being subscribed for each circle, taking 10 children to the dental clinic, 15 babies attending the health center last month. An added activity of this circle is taking pre-school age literature and news of the happenings of the circles to an invalid mother who is unable to attend.

The December pre-school meeting will feature constructive and proper books and toys with a display of same under the following committee, Mrs. T. C. Bazemore, Mrs. J. C. Caldwell and Mrs. L. H. Fitzpatrick.

Benefit Picture At Fulton High.

On Tuesday afternoon, November 15, at 2:30 o'clock, there will be a benefit picture show at Fulton high school auditorium, sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Sneider of Hapeville for the county council. The chaperons for the afternoon include Mrs. Butler, Lakewood; Mrs. Carmichael, Grove Park; Mrs. Scheinck, Hapeville; Mrs. Miller, Rock Springs; Mrs. Hemperly, East Point; Mrs. Rooke, Perkerson.

Mrs. Deseseaux of Grove Park and Mrs. Sheils of Lakewood have charge of the tickets. Admission will be 10 cents.

The program consists of an interesting prologue, the feature of which will be a one act skit by Fulton high students, and two pictures, "Let It Rain," featuring Douglass McLean, and "Felix Busts Into Business," a comedy. All school children are especially invited to attend.

Oakhurst P.-T. A. Meeting Featured By Literary Talk

More reading and better reading by the children in the home was the theme of the talk given at the Oakhurst Parent-Teacher association Wednesday afternoon by Miss Nina Morgan, librarian of the Atlanta Normal school. Miss Morgan showed how a beautiful companionship between parents and children may be built up through the reading of good books. She gave valuable suggestions to mothers on the psychological guidance of children's reading.

Mrs. T. N. Fulton, probation officer of DeKalb county, spoke interestingly of her work throughout the county. She explained that the fact that a child comes under the care of the juvenile court does not always mean that the child is guilty of a misdemeanor. She stated that more often it means the placing of a child in better environment. Mrs. Fulton is a most capable and interested worker and renders valuable assistance to the rural schools of DeKalb county.

Mrs. John Ridley spoke in behalf of the Decatur library, urging the mothers to support it.

The teachers' lunch was served by the fourth grade mothers, Mrs. Homer Thompson, Mrs. H. H. Holt and Mrs. F. S. Prickett.

The attendance prize was won by Mrs. Mackin's second grade.

Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

Mrs. Julius Lennard, new president, presided over the Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. last Wednesday and introduced Professor Floyd Fields, who made an address on the problems of today.

The chairmen of committees and class mothers were introduced to the association.

Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., program chairman, announced that the December meeting would be the fathers' night meeting.

Mrs. Malcolm Wilks and Mrs. Fulcher, fifth grade class mothers, entertained the president, Mrs. Julius Lennard; the principal, Miss Emmie Davis, and Miss Connie Canswell, Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Julius Harris, Miss Verna Methvin, Miss Mann, Ponce de Leon teachers, at a lovely luncheon at the home of Mrs. Wilks on Wilton drive preceding the P.-T. A. meeting.

John F. Anderson, safety expert of the Hartford Life and Indemnity company of Hartford, Conn., talked to the children on "Safety" Wednesday, giving them the accident statistics and warning them of the kind of accidents occuring at home and away from home.

Mt. Vernon P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Mount Vernon P.-T. A. met in the school auditorium Friday. A large number of mothers were present. Third and fifth grade received $1 each for most mothers. Flowers were voted to be sent the sick members which were reported.

A cooking school was discussed for the mothers and girls desiring the course. Apple week was observed. Second grade entertained with a play.

Does your daughter attend school regularly?

MANY GIRLS are absent from school for a few days each month because of illness. In many cases this is unnecessary because young girls — as well as older women — can be strengthened by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Girls suffering from run-down condition, sleeplessness, nervousness, and loss of appetite, should gain new strength and vigor from this Vegetable Compound.

NERVOUS AND DIZZY

Charleston, Illinois:— "I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She was nervous, weak and dizzy. At last she was so bad off that she was out of school for four months. The Vegetable Compound has improved her in every way and she has gone back to school. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be." Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

Remember this package. None genuine without the signature of Lydia E. Pinkham.

SICK AND WEAK

Camden, New Jersey:—"When my daughter was twelve years old she was hurt at the play-ground. She was sick and weak for some time after that and was not able to go to school regularly. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her wonderfully, and she now goes to school every day. She has gained in weight and has a better appetite than she had before taking it." Mrs. Ada McKim, 1044 Linden Street, Camden, New Jersey.

The Value Of Prayer.

Communion with God in quiet thoughtfulness and prayer is essential to a strong and fruitful Christian life.

Dr. Sherwood Eddy once said: "Have you the regular habit of meeting Him each morning in real communion, as He speaks to you, through His word, and you speak to Him in prayer? If not, this alone is a sufficient cause of all your failure. Henceforth, this one thing I do: I will give to God the first place in each day and in all my life. I will begin each day in communion with Him, and then by that constant faith-touch, which reckons upon His mighty, restful presence, even when I am occupied with my daily task, I will trust Him to keep what I have committed unto Him, for 'He that abideth in Him, sinneth not.'"

Dr. S. D. Gordon said: "The power loosened out through prayer is as tremendous as the power of a true fragrant life, and may touch not one spot, but wherever in the whole round world you may choose to turn in."

Peachtree Baptist Church To Hold School of Mission

An excellent program will feature the Church School of Missions to be held at the Peachtree Baptist church November 21-25, according to an announcement by Mr. Burnett, pastor. the W. M. U. of the Atlanta association and the W. M. S. of the church.

The list of speakers and teachers is worthy of any church in any city of the state. Beginning with Monday evening at 7:20 o'clock Mrs. James D. Rhodes, mission study chairman of W. M. U. Atlanta association, will teach Dr. Love's book, "Today's Supreme Challenge to America." "Method Courses" will be taught to young women by Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary of Georgia B. W. M. U. "Please Stand By" will be taught to juniors and intermediates by Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader of Georgia W. M. U. Mrs. C. W. Pruitt, returned missionary from China, will teach a class of junior and intermediate boys. Inspirational addresses will be made by three returned missionaries from China, Dr. C. W. Pruitt, who has given over 40 years of service; Dr. N. A. Bryan, medical missionary, and Miss Mary Crawford, who received her appointment when a member of Druid Hills Baptist church, and is now in Atlanta on her first furlough. The music will be in charge of A. J. Hall and the pianists are Mrs. Homer Greer and Miss Mary Lou Stephens.

Second Baptist Dinner.

An unusually large crowd attended the dinner Wednesday evening at the Second Baptist church and enjoyed the delicious meal prepared by Mrs. Fred W. Paterson, hostess, and the delightful program arranged by Mr. Patterson, originator of the "Patterson plan" for the forward movement of the Second Baptist campaign, and Phil McDuffie.

Mrs. Joseph A. Hall entertained the Women's Bible class at a reserved table, and Miss Rosa May King, superintendent of the beginners, etertained the workers of this department of the Sunday school. The pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, and Sunday school superintendent, John S. Spalding, were honor guests at Miss King's table.

The following women composed the committee assisting Mrs. Patterson: Mesdames Charles Barker, John Burress, Estelle Cooper, A. C. Evins, Davis Fitzgerald, J. Furniss Lee, Ned Mellett, J. S. McCullough, J. T. Pearson, O. L. Rudisail, Ed Veatch, Misses Elzie Grace Brown, May Walker and a bevy of Y. W. C. A. girls, of which organization Mrs. Patterson is the leader.

Yellow chrysanthemums formed the decorations of a beautiful Thanksvging dinner given by Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon to the executive board of the Business Women's league, of which she is president. The next regular meeting of the league will be this afternoon in the Sunday school auditorium at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary and treasurer of the Georgia Baptist Missionary Union, will be the speaker. Circle D, Miss Margaret Haynesworth, chairman, and Miss Elizabeth G. Shepard, co-chairman, will be in charge. Wednesday evening, November 16, the league will be in charge of the church dinner with Mrs. G. E. Cooper, chairman of the committee. Monday evening, November 21, will be known as "Bluebird night," and all members of the league are cordially invited to attend with friends a dinner in the Atlanta Athletic club at 6:15 o'clock. A delightful program has been arranged. Tickets to this dinner will be $1 each, none free, it was stated. Fruit and provisions will be brought for Thanksgiving baskets at this time. Miss Elsie Koettner is chairman of the decorating committee for "Bluebird night." The committee on entertainment is composed of the circle chairmen. Other important business was transacted at the dinner. Guests present at the dinner were Misses Jessie Campbell, Earl Carter, Margaret Haynesworth, Elsie Koettner, Josie Rice, Elizabeth Shepard, Elizabeth Taylor, Mary Ella Yancey, Lucy M. Zachry, Mesdames E. Cooper, W. A. Dedmon, W. S. Haralson, W. C. Hutt and Colonel and Mrs. Paxon.

Mrs. John Burress recently entertained the Druid Hills circle of the Girls' auxiliary with a luncheon in the church. The following members were present: Elzie Grace Brown, Elizabeth Camp, Geraldine Camp, Margaret Darrington, Marion David, Carolyn DuVall, Carolyn Geer and Elizabeth Spalding. Mrs. Gordon Singleton, leader of the G. A.'s, is visiting relatives in Texas.

Mrs. Anderson Entertains.

Mrs. W. P. Anderson, as chairman of the committee on hospitality, was hostess to the north central divisional institute November 8-9. The children of the Baptist Orphans' Home were bright and happy. Mrs. Ben Thompson, Madison, Ga., chairman for Georgia, spoke enthusiastically on the "Ruby Anniversary," which is to be celebrated in 1928, that being the 40th year of the existence of Woman's Missionary union. Much interest is being displayed over the state in the movement.

Mrs. C. H. Terry, Y. W. A. leader, reported a "Grace McBride" Young People's association organized recently among the nurses at the Georgia Baptist hospital.

Mrs. H. Gordon Weekley, counselor of the Girls' auxiliary of B. W. M. U. Atlanta association, reported 40 organizations; 10 new ones since June.

Mrs. Athena White Caldwell, new R. A. leader of B. W. M. U. Atlanta association, made a strong appeal for more Royal Ambassador organizations in the association and in the division. Mrs. Caldwell will assist in organizing a R. A. in any church in the association.

Child Health Authority To Speak Here Saturday.

Attention of Federated Church Women is called to the following announcement:

Mrs. Walter McNab Miller, chairman of public welfare of General Federation of Women's Clubs and associate director of publications and publicity of American Child Health association, of New York city, will speak at the Atlanta Woman's club luncheon Saturday, November 12, at 12:30 o'clock. She will speak on our "Public Health" program and tell how Georgia can win the national prize—one month's expert service—offered by American Public Health association and American Child Health association. Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Decatur, Ga., urges that you make reservation immediately ($1 per plate).

If you cannot come, please send representative of your organization.

Ladies Review W. B. A. To Have Supper.

The ladies of Review No. 18 of the W. B. A. will have a supper at the Cecil hotel at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday, November 16. This supper is free to all members and they are requested to make reservations not later than Monday by calling West 0188-W. A meeting will follow the supper.

Speaker at Synod

Methodist News of Wide Interest Throughout the State of Georgia

Self denial and prayer was observed in two whole day sessions Tuesday and Wednesday by the women of Druid Hills Methodist church. These services followed the regular business meeting of the Women's Missionary society, which was held Monday afternoon. The offerings at both meetings will be devoted to enlargement of the work at Palmore Institute in Japan and the Valley Institute in Texas. A most interesting program was presented each day. The address on Wednesday by Mrs. James Hitch, who is a returned missionary from Korea, was of interest. The afternoon service Tuesday was given over to the young people and Wednesday afternoon to the children who presented a beautiful pageant under the leadership of Mrs. Russell. The special services were brought to a close at the regular Wednesday prayer service, at which time Dr. Russell made a splendid address on world peace. Large attendances were had at all the meetings.

SAINT MARK'S SOCIETY.

The Women's Missionary society of St. Mark's Methodist church held an all-day meeting in October at the church with about 100 members attending. The program, which began at 11 o'clock, was in charge of Mrs. George Knott, chairman of the Bible and mission study. Mrs. Clarence Johnson gave the Bible lesson. The most interesting feature of the meeting was the poster contest. Each circle presented a poster depicting the phase of "Women and Missions" which seemed to them most important. There were 12 lovely posters on display. To select the best one was an extremely interesting and most difficult task for the judges, but after careful consideration and deliberation it was decided to award first place to the one presented by Circle No. 6, Mrs. Albert Dunson, chairman. This poster was indeed a work of art. In shades of blue, orange and black, it depicted the results in 1927 of the dream which four women had in 1873 when the Woman's Missionary society was begun.

The second place was unanimously awarded to the poster presented by Circle No. 9, Mrs. Y. Frank Freeman, chairman. The title of this poster was "Women and Missions." It represented the beginning of the Women's Missionary society as a tiny spring which gradually developed into a mighty river. This river was fed by streams representing the home mission work and the work in foreign countries. It flowed into a sea called the Sea of Universal Sisterhood.

A delicious luncheon was served by the circles, after which a beautiful pageant called "A Straight Way Towards Tomorrow," was presented by a number of the younger members of the society.

Briefly Told

An inspirational meeting of diocesan churchwomen was held Monday afternoon in All Saints Episcopal church. Reports of the recent synod at Columbus, Ga., were made by Miss Lucinda Snook, Mrs. Thomas H. Johnston and Mrs. A. H. Sterne. The different parishes in Atlanta were well represented.

Mrs. George Westmoreland, president of the executive board of the Baptist Orphans' home at Hapeville, made the address of welcome at the North Central Divisional institute, which was held there November 8-9.

Addresses by Miss Emma Leachman, field worker of the home mission board (S. B. C.) and Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer of Georgia Baptist Woman's Missionary union, were outstanding features of the annual North Central Divisional institute held in Hapeville November 8-9.

Miss Lucile Wilson, of Lawrenceville, Y. W. A. counselor of B. W. M. U., of Mulberry association, gave an optimistic report of young people's work in her district at the North Central Divisional institute at Hapeville.

During the month of November the subject outlined by "Royal Service" for study by the Women's Missionary societies of the southland is the "Questioning Jew." Dr. W. M. Seay's recent book, "The Tale of Two Peoples—Gentile and Jew," is recommended as throwing much light on past history and presenting optimistic views of the problem today.

Mrs. J. L. Jackson, supervisor of the Kate Pendleton Dawson good-will center, announces that there will be no meeting in November. The last meeting of the year will be held Friday, December 2, at 10:30 o'clock.

The ladies of Clarkston held their semi-annual sewing for the Methodist Orphanage at Decatur in October, at which time a most profitable and enjoyable day was spent at the Woman's clubhouse.

The Woman's Missionary society of Clarkston held their business meeting Monday at the Methodist church, Mrs. Reid Hunter presiding. Rev. Hutchinson gave the devotional from the book of Joel.

The Clarkston society observed the week of prayer with an all-day session on Tuesday. It is with regret that the friends of Mrs. V. G. Ward give her up, her duties carrying her into another field of usefulness.

It is with regret that we note the passing of Mrs. R. E. Barnes. Mrs. Barnes was a faithful member of the "Mothers' class" and also the Lily Nelms circle No. 6 of Park Street church. She was ever ready and willing to serve, and she will be greatly missed among her co-workers.

The week of prayer was observed by Park Street Missionary society on Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday at the church.

Of Such Is The Kingdom.

Dr. W. C. Sturgis in his recently published book, "A Church Awake," relates the following incident:

"At the close of a lecture showing conditions in Japan before and after the catastrophe of 1923, a little mountain boy of 13, whose family I knew to be devoted church people, but desperately poor, came to me and said that he wanted to give something to help the rebuilding of St. Luke's hospital in Tokyo, to cost a million dollars.

"From the pocket of his blue overalls he extracted a little worn purse, put some coins in my hand and walked off. When I came to look, the coins were a half dollar and a quarter. Knowing the conditions, I was astounded, and meeting the boy the next day, I said to him:

"'Did you mean to give both these coins to St. Lukes?'

"'Why yes,' he said, in rather a surprised tone. 'It was all I had.'

An unreasonable child, of course! But of the kind that makes up the kingdom of heaven.

T. E. L. Class Plans Tacky Party.

The T. E. L. class of the Oakhurst Baptist church will give a tacky party at 165 Cambridge street Monday evening, November 14, at 7:30 o'clock in honor of the Builders and Alathean classes.

Rev. G. L. Lucker To Deliver Series Of Bible Lectures

The Rev. Gardiner L. Tucker, educational secretary, Province of Sewanee, will deliver a series of Bible lectures at 10:30 o'clock, November 14-19, at Eggleston hall, West Peachtree street and North avenue. He will deliver the lectures through the instrumentality of the woman's auxiliary, diocese of Atlanta.

Dr. Tucker's reputation as a Biblical scholar insures an appreciative attendance at each session. An invitation is extended to those of other denominations who may wish to hear this eminent teacher.

Rome Bed Fund.

The churchwomen of Rome are doing an interesting work through the church hospital bed fund. This is an inter-denominational organization of th women of the Rome churches, and provides medical care for charity cases in the McCall and Harbin hospitals.

The work was begun in 1922, when a board was formed with a general chairman and a representative from each contributing denomination. The present members of this board are: Chairman, Mrs. G. P. Weathers, Episcopal church; Mrs. B. F. Archer, Christian church; Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, Methodist; Mrs. C. B. Caperton, Presbyterian, and Mrs. Luke McDonald, Baptist.

The committee receives funds from their churches and a yearly appropriation of $750 from the Rome Community Chest. Free ambulance service is given by two firms of Rome.

The financial report from January 1, 1927, to October 1, 1927: Balance on hand January 1 $80.88; received from churches $808.97; received from Community Chest $570; total received $1,468.85. Expenditures for 42 hospital cases $1,388.10; cash on hand October 1 $80.75.

Diocesan Institute To Be Held at All Saints'.

Under the supervision of W. W. Davison, of All Saints' Episcopal Church school a diocesan institute will be held in All Saints parish house November 14-18, inclusive. Instructors will be Dr. Gardiner L. Tucker and Miss Margaret Stout.

Acid Scalp

How many carefully coiffured heads can stand the test of eyes only inches away, and reveal not a speck of dandruff? How many women can warm to the dance, and know their hair will have no taint for the partner who holds them close?

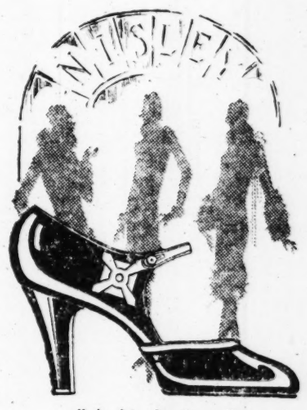

No one can be sure who has acid scalp.

If you even suspect this acid condition of the scalp, it is time for Danderine. This scientific preparation will neutralize any acidity; and dissolve all dandruff if there is any. And it always gives the hair itself a lovely softness and sheen. It will wave better, hold a wave longer, and behave better all the time if you just occasionally apply a few drops of Danderine. Try it! Every drugstore has this perfect conditioner of the scalp and hair, and a thirty-five-cent bottle lasts for weeks.—(adv.)

THREE MODERN GRACES

Elegance
Excellence
Economy

"Madelon"

PARISIAN CHARM is Parisian charm whether you take it from the enchanted gardens of Les Ambassadeurs on the Champs—Elysees or the bizarre gypsy cave of the cabaret Bi-Ba-Bo on the hill of Montmartre. "Madelon," a current Nisley pattern, has a charm representative of the best that has come from Paris this year. It is shown in bright, black, patent leather with a skeleton trimming of black suede. High, Paris heels.

Parisian chiffon stockings in preferred tones $1.50

Imported French Buckles 50c to $5

ELEGANCE and excellence have been feminine graces since time began. So has economy for that matter. In the past, however, elegance and excellence have always been associated with extravagance and not with economy. Modern methods of manufacture and distribution, such as are pursued and executed by the Nisley group of thirty-four stores and two factories, have made economy the play fellow of elegance and excellence to the almost total exclusion of extravagance.

That is why you see Nisley stores, in the most exclusive shopping centers of America's principal cities, filled with the type of women who are accustomed to the maximum in elegance and excellence. They have found the secret of keeping these first two graces and replacing the third (extravagance) with the modern and more pleasing grace—economy. Nisley's Beautiful Shoes are shown in—

Mrs. Williams Holds Conference At State W.C.T.U. Headquarters

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta, president of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance union, spent the past week at the state headquarters of the organization in Macon, holding conferences with various officers and groups and formulating plans for the prosecution of the year's work as outlined at the recent Savannah convention. An official board meeting was held Wednesday and besides Mrs. Williams there were present Mrs. Dudley Smith, of Eastman, vice president; Mrs. J. L. McGarity, Monroe, recording secretary; Mrs. W. G. Cotton, Columbus, corresponding secretary; Miss Josephine Hammond, Monroe, treasurer; Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Tate, advisory, and Mrs. August Burghard, Macon, editor of the Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin. The members sat for a group picture at Warlick's studio, to be used in the annual soon to be published, and to enjoy a luncheon at the tea shop where they were joined by Miss Mary Cotton, of Columbus; Mrs. P. C. Brown, of Richland; Mrs. Reynolds, Monroe; Mrs. S. L. Carter, Miss Ruby Rivers, Mrs. D. A. Warlick and Mrs. A. W. Voight.

Visits Georgia.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Tate, national W. C. T. U. lecturer, whose itinerary the past few months has taken her to Pennsylvania, Indiana, Minnesota, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas, where she addressed state gatherings and other audiences, spent a few days this week in her home state, speaking in Columbus and Camilla, and attending the meeting of the official board of the state W. C. T. U. in Macon and going on to Florida to fill lecture engagements under the auspices of the Florida W. C. T. U. in the principal cities and at the state W. C. T. U. convention. Mrs. Armor states that "if the democratic party insists on nominating Governor Al Smith, Governor Ritchie, Senator Jim Reed or any other 'wet' as a presidential candidate, that action would not split the party—it would wreck it. Ten million women in this country are going to vote a dry ticket. They will not vote for Al Smith or any other similar candidate."

Remarks like that brought thunderous applause from her audiences. In every state she made a plea that the state would send delegates to the national convention who would be pledged to vote dry candidates only and to vote against the abolition of the two-thirds rule. She said in her speeches: "The wets talk of 'government control' and they have given it the right name, but do not entertain the idea that they intend for the government to control them. They mean that the liquor gang shall control the government. It is gall and wormwood to them, that the center of political influence has passed from the saloon to the church. Some folks are afraid of politics in the church. So am I, but there is as much difference in the church in politics and politics in the church as there is in a boat in the water and water in the boat." Mrs. Armor will speak in Georgia a week the latter part of the month or early in December and again in March.

Columbus Branch Active.

The young people's branch of the Columbus W. C. T. U., with Mrs. B. F. Register, Mrs. R. B. Buxton, Mrs. R. B. Zeigler, Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. H. B. Harper the enthusiastic officers, entertained Mrs. Mary Harris Armor at a beautiful tea in the parlors of St. Luke Methodist church Monday afternoon. A talk by the honor guest was a feature of the occasion. Mrs. Armor was the speaker at a prohibition rally at the Rose Hill Baptist church that evening.

The November meeting of the Y. P. B. was held at the First Baptist church Tuesday afternoon, with the president in the chair. The devotionals, with which the program opened, were conducted by Mrs. R. B. Zeigler. The other numbers on the program, which was prepared by Miss Mary Stone, director of the department of anti-narcotics, were: A discussion of the pledge of the young people's branch of the W. C. T. U. by Mrs. H. B. Harper; a reading entitled "Failure," by Miss Jewel Register. Miss Mary Cotton told "The Effect of Tobacco on the Human Body." "The Evils of the Drug Habit," a talk by Mrs. R. L. Buxton, was filled with startling facts as well as a warning and an urge to aid in preventive measures.

Miss Charlotte B. Fraser, of New York, one of the national W. C. T. U. field secretaries, who specializes in the work of the young people's branch and in work among the foreign born, is again to visit this state. Her vivacity, her youth and enthusiasm, her extensive knowledge and her ability as a speaker and a singer make her welcome to audiences, especially those composed of young men and women. In Macon she will speak to Wesleyan college students and to the young people's church federation. In Columbus she will address a rally at St. Luke church on Sunday morning, the 20th, and speak at the Rose Hill Methodist church that evening. Mrs. W. G. Cotton, of Columbus, has arranged engagements for her in a number of cities. She is speaking in Florida now.

Demorest Prohibition Service.

Among the scores of prohibition sermons and services held in the churches in the state on the last Sunday in last month, known as World Temperance Sunday, was one sponsored by the Demorest W. C. T. U. at the Congregational church. The primary and intermediate departments of the Sunday school gave an interesting exercise, which was followed by a strong sermon on the wisdom of prohibition by the pastor, Rev. J. C. Pryor.

A Valuable W. C. T. U. Bouquet.

At the recent state convention of the Iowa W. C. T. U. meeting in Indianola the state president, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, rounded out 25 years of intelligent and untiring service. In celebration of this anniversary she was presented with a bouquet of handsome roses showered with 51 crisp, new dollar bills attached by white ribbons. Mrs. Smith, who is a national as well as a state leader in the cause of prohibition, is best known in this state as the vice president of the National W. C. T. U.

A Marriage of Interest.

Of interest to white ribboners is the marriage of Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, of Syracuse, N. Y., to Dr. Slaton, of Birmingham, Ala., which occurred last week. She has often visited Georgia as college secretary and general secretary of the young people's branch of the national W. C. T. U. During a long period of service she has initiated and carried forward to success many lines of effort, has endeared herself to the young people and led them to new heights of patriotism and enthusiasm for the temperance cause.

Bulletin Exhibited.

At the request of Dr. Robert Hercod, of the international bureau against alcoholism, of Lauzanne, Switzerland, copies of the Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin have been sent to be placed in an international press exhibit. Dr. Hercod wrote the editor: "There is to be held at Cologne, next year, an international press exhibition. It is proposed to collect the title pages of all the temperance journals in the world and to display them on panels in as attractive a manner as possible. A statistical table will supply the indications as to the number of journals in each language and for each country and as to the total number of copies issued each year. You would greatly oblige us by sending us your journal as soon as possible, so that we may reserve the space we require." In a report of the recent congress of the World League Against Alcoholism, it was said of Dr. Hercod: "One of the interesting characters was Dr. Robert Hercod, of Lauzanne, Switzerland. Dr. Hercod is a master of twenty languages and has the reputation of being a veritable bureau of information concerning the drink traffic in every country."

Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Armor represented Georgia at that great gathering by appointment of Governor Hardman and spoke of him in words of praise. A few years ago he was honor guest at a banquet in Atlanta, when Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, then state W. C. T. U. president, was one of the speakers.

Mu Phi Epsilon Celebrates With Luncheon at Hotel

Founder's day and the silver anniversary of Mu Phi Epsilon was celebrated Saturday by Mu Omega chapter of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, Mu chapter of Brenau College conservatory, members of the Atlanta Alumnae club and patrons of the sorority, in the form of a luncheon given at the Henry Grady hotel.

A U-shaped table was arranged in the green room of the hotel, and the color scheme of purple and white, the sorority colors, was used in the decorations. A touch of silver commemorated the twenty-fifth birthday, and white chrysanthemums filled three large silver vases on either side of which was a silver candle stick holding white candles. A broad band of purple satin ribbon was laid down the center of the table and at each plate there was a boutonniere of violets, the sorority flower, tied with silver ribbon. Place cards were white, edged with silver and lettered in purple.

Miss Mary Whitson, national treasurer and member of Mu chapter, Brenau, was honor guest at the luncheon. The program opened with an address of welcome by Miss Eugenie Dozier, president of Mu Omega chapter, Atlanta. Response was made by Miss Bertha Thalley, president of Mu chapter. The closing talk was made by Miss Mary Whitson. The celebration closed by the singing of sorority song, "The Triangle," lead by Mrs. Bess Merrell Smith.

Active membership of Mu Omega chapter include Misses Agnes Adams, Mrs. Louisa W. Allensworth, Madelin Banton, Mary Brown, Eugenie Dozier, Madelaine Dunsieth, Ruth Caines, Anna Harwell, Dosia Hayden, Martha Jarrell, Irene Leftwich, Mrs. Blanche Lawhon, Dorothy Perkins, Verdery Rosenbusch, Ella May Shilkett, Marie Sims, Mrs. Bess Merrell Smith, Ruth Dabney Smith, Dorothy Thompson, Mrs. Mayme Shipley Ware, Frances West, Gertrude Wilson, Hazel Wood and Mrs. Lucille B. Social Notes From Brookhaven.

Mrs. C. J. Dusenberry returned to her home in Louisville, Ky., last Friday after a pleasant visit with Mrs. D. K. Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Green spent last Sunday with relatives in Macon.

Mrs. Mary Phillips, of Highlands, N. C., is a pleasant visitor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wright on Colonial drive.

Rev. Lester Kingman preached his farewell sermon last Sunday evening in the Brookhaven Methodist church. It is deeply regretted that he has joined the South Carolina conference and will not serve the church here another year. The lives he has touched are the better for his ministry here and his friends wish him God-speed in his new field.

There will be held in the school auditorium Thursday evening at 8 o'clock a "Variety Entertainment" for the benefit of beautifying the city park. A splendid program has been arranged.

Last Thursday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Folds and the occasion was celebrated with a dinner to their friends at their home at 7 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Folds are among Brookhaven's most beloved citizens.

Little Harold Sills celebrated his sixth birthday last Saturday afternoon with a birthday party at his home on Thornwell drive. Those present were Douglas Wright, Roy Palmer, Dannie Cadora, Dorothy and Doris Poyas, Frankie Streckfuss, Frances Sills, Jack Stuart, Jack Sills and Harold Sills.

Mrs. J. R. Wright entertained at a spend-the-day party Thursday in honor of her aunt, Mrs. Mary Phillips, who is her guest.

Hadassah Chapter Plans Annual Ball At Biltmore Nov. 15

The Atlanta chapter of Hadassah will hold its annual ball at the Biltmore hotel Tuesday, November 15, at 9:30 o'clock.

Among the various activities which Hadassah sponsors in Palestine is the clothing of children. Two thousand children received clothing, 200 of them orphans, in Tel Aviv. In answer to an appeal from the government of Palestine, Hadassah recently cabled $500 to Dr. E. M. Bluestone, director of the Hadassah medical organization in Palestine, to be applied to the government relief fund for earthquake sufferers. The school hygiene department is the children's clinic, in which the school physician receives children sent from various schools by teachers, nurses or by himself, and it has been found that through this medium there exist considerable numbers of infectious cases among their parents, who, when it is found necessary for them to remain at home, are always put in the hands of private physicians. Special medical supervision is given at the clinics to children suffering from malnutrition and tuberculosis. Most of the children are poor and they pay only for the medicine given, not for the visits. More than 2,700 babies were treated in June at the 15 infant welfare stations maintained by Hadassah in Palestine.

Jewish Woman's Club Sponsors Grand Concert

The Jewish Woman's club will sponsor a concert and open meeting Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the auditorium on Washington and Clark streets, to which there will be no admission charge.

Through the efforts and interest of C. B. Bearden it became possible for Meyer Segal, well-known orchestral artist and conducter, to plan and arrange a splendid program featuring such numbers as Rossini's "William Tell," Max Bruch's "Kol Nidree," Glink's "The Lark" and "The Doubt," Dargonvsky's "Casatschoque," Shubert's "Serenade," Grainger's "Mock Morris" and Shubert's "Unfinished Symphony." He will present twenty of the best musicians from the symphony orchestra. Professor I. M. Mayor and Nora Allen Volpi will add the finishing flourishes to the entertainment. Nora Allen Volpi, lyric soprano, with Eignor Emilio Volpi at the piano, will sing Love and Music from "La Tosca," and "Only a Rose," from "Vagabond King."

Henry Alexander will be speaker and his topic will be "Social and Cultural Activities."

Mrs. Sarah L. T. Spector is social director of the club and is organizing classes in social and educational subjects which begin to function next week.

State Federation Will Observe Book Week Nov. 13

Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will observe book week, November 13 to 19. Book week is an effort to stimulate the love of good reading among boys and girls, and older people, too. More than 5,000 communities observed it last year. Women's clubs throughout the country are taking an active part in book week plans, arranging discussion of young people's reading for club meetings, and assisting librarians and teachers in their efforts to make reading play a vital part in the lives of American children.

Approves Tallulah Industrial School.

The following letter, written to Miss Ann Carrington Davis, principal of Tallulah Falls school, will have a tendency to prove to Georgia clubwomen and the general public the excellent value of Tallulah Industrial school, and the approval of the work of the beloved principal. It reads:

My Dear Miss Davis—As I have not had the pleasure of seeing you, will write. Suppose I had first best tell you that I am Helen's mother, and also Hazel's, Frances', Gladys', Lalicand Helen's exteacher. I know that you must indeed be very happy if you realize the good work you are doing in the religious, moral and literary training you are giving your girls. Even the talks you give them in the dining room (Helen tells me of them) are just an inspiration to me, an old mother at home with lots of babies and domestic duties to perform.

You are sowing good seed in the hearts and minds of your girls that in due time will make them the right kind of wives, mothers and business women our country needs. I am simply filled with appreciation and pride over the improvement Helen has made, and I am sure she is only a normal sample of what your school is doing. My sister had occasion some time ago to visit your school when her husband was making some kind of investigation of schools when he served in the Georgia legislature and she says she has never seen a school system she admired or approved more than yours. I wish you continued success and much happiness in your work.

Middleton, Ga., Route No. 1, Elbert county.

The pages of the convention were Misses Thelma Green and Josephine Davenport.

Mrs. Brantley's Address.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley gave a very timely address, using as her topic "Developing Leadership by Knowing Your Federation." All clubwomen know Mrs. Brantley as an able speaker and that a topic such as she used on this occasion is very easy for her as she is a living example of one who knows the federation both state and general, and leadership as she has displayed in her state federation work is the ambition of every club president.

The credentials committee reported 14 clubs represented; eight state officers and chairman of departments; 31 presidents club delegates and district chairmen present, with a total of 100 guests. Mrs. C. E. Pittman, chairman of revision committee reads revised constitution and by-laws. Mrs. L. B. de Jarnet, chairman of committee on resolutions, reads resolutions. Mrs. G. K. Bagwell, chairman of time and place, announces an invitation from Jefferson Woman's club to hold seventeenth annual convention in Jefferson with a motion made to accept invitation. Mrs. Fitzpatrick, past presidet of Georgia federation and member of the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls school, told of the school and its progress. Mrs. Rosa Woodberry, beloved state parliamentarian of state federation, was also introduced and asked to help with any parliamentary tangle that should arise.

Report from nominating committee was received, with Mrs. Ed Shaefer, of Toccoa chairman, with four other members from four clubs in the district. The report was as follows: Mrs. J. E. McElroy, president; Mrs. Hiram Flannigan, first vice president; Mrs. Morris M. Bryan, secretary; Mrs. Henry Pledger, treasurer.

Club Institute.

After luncheon the convention convened in the church for the club institute which Mrs. Arthur De la Perrien is chairman and who planned the program. She opened the institute by introducing Mrs. Brantley, state president, who had charge of the question box. Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Georgia director for general federation, then made an address, "What Is the Matter with Georgia Legislators?" Mrs. Richardson frankly admitted at the beginning that she did not know, but when she had given a review of the summer legislature and that only one of the children's bills was passed, she did not need to tell the women "what is the matter with Georgia legislators"—they had opinions of their own. Miss Rosa Woodberry conducted a parliamentary drill. The next institute has been invited to meet in Canton next spring, as the guest of Canton Woman's club.

Hartwell Woman's Club Holds Meeting.

The Hartwell Woman's club met Monday afternoon, October 17, at the Hotel Hartwell, with Mrs. J. G. Craft, Mrs. J. B. Magill, Mrs. J. B. Shaw and F. T. Kidd as hostesses.

Mrs. F. T. Kidd, president, presided over the business session. Attractive year books with programs for the year were distributed by the program committee.

The garden committee submitted plans for a flower show with prizes and blue ribbons offered for exhibits and will also sponsor a plant exchange.

The child welfare committee reported assistance to the P.-T. A. in giving toxin, antitoxin to over 200 white and colored children. The citizenship committee reported the registration of all the club members. The junior membership committee announced the organization of two new clubs, actively at work and the observance of a Tallulah Falls birthday party by each. Twelve dollars was given to the near east relief fund.

Mrs. J. L. Teasley, chairman of Tallulah Falls fund, presented the program for the afternoon. A sketch of the Tallulah Falls school was read. A special offering was taken. Each club member contributing to it. Five new members were wecomed into the club.

Tenth District Club Activities.

Tennille Woman's club met at the clubhouse, with Mesdames Wilbur Smith, H. C. Carroll, Henry Sheppard, and W. B. Stokes as hostesses. Mrs. Roy Smith, first vice president, presided in the absence of the president. Plans were made and committees announced for the bazar to be held by the club on December 1 and 2.

Mrs. C. R. Hutchings was elected official delegate to represent the club at the district convention in Louisville, and Mrs. George Franklin, second vice president, was made the president's appointee. Other members who will attend are: Mrs. W. B. Smith, district president; Mrs. Roy Smith, district chairman of music; Mrs. W. C. Little, chairman of memorials; Mrs. H. M. Franklin, chairman of budget and treasurer; Mrs. C. W. Crump, president of the Fine Arts club; Mrs. B. T. Comer, Mrs. A. S. Brown, Mrs. A. P. Meriwetter and Mrs. F. T. Brock.

Tennille Fine Arts club met last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. H. M. Franklin. Mrs. C. W. Crump, the new president, presided. Mrs. Graham Franklin, treasurer, reported the purchase of two new books of current literature. The following program from the artistic new year book was given: Subject, "The Operas of Giachino Entonio Rossini." "William Tell," Mrs. W. B. Smith; overture from William Tell, Mrs. C. W. Crump; "Rossini As Composer," Mrs. S. C. Knox; piano solo, Mrs. Loula K. Rogers.

Sandersville Woman's club met Friday at the home of Mrs. T. A. English, with Mesdames Alex Gilmore, Forrest Sessions, George Mayo, J. F. Mozo, D. C. Harris, C. D. Redding, Ray Hatch, Phil Freedman, Misses Elizabeth Rogers and Mildred English acting as hostesses. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. S. G. Lang, Sr. After the business meeting an interesting program was rendered. Mrs. Walter West gave a reading on "Home," stressing the need of home training today. Miss Calude Wynne, fourth grade teacher, made a most interesting talk on the school and its improvement. The club heartily responded to some of the needs of the school and a committee was appointed to make investigations and cooperate with the necessary needs. Miss Elizabeth Rogers gave a vocal selection.

Mrs. K. G. Hess Issues Greetings To Fifth District Clubwomen

Franklin County Federation Meets In Lavonia

The Franklin county federation met Friday, October 14, in Lavonia at the school building, with the Lavonia Woman's club as hostess.

Dr. Joe Bowden, from the state board of health, Atlanta, gave a talk on conditions in every county and told of the wonderful resources of Franklin county; what preventative measures meant for the health of a county; how much could be done by following the advice of the physicians and working with them to better conditions.

The business session consisted of officers' and chairman reports. The motion carried to make all superintendents and principals of the schools in the county, the two editors, and county agents, honorary members. A motion presented by Mrs. S. D. Brown, president of the Royston Woman's club, to make Mrs. Phil Davis an honorary member and chaplain of the federation was unanimously carried. Committees were appointed to cooperate with the county board of education.

Mrs. D. T. Barnes reported 350 children examined by physicians and nurse with healthmobile.

Two dollars and ninety cents in dimes was sent to Mrs. A. M. Wilkinson, chairman of Tallulah school, by Mrs. Gholston. The federation voted to give $5 on prize for community booth won by Line No. 1, Woman's club, and consolidated school. Mrs. J. P. Aderholt, of Line Woman's club, was appointed delegate to the eighth district federation to be held in Athens November 18, Mrs. J. E. Thomas, alternate.

The eighth district president, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, brought a message of love and good will to the members. Mesdames C. B. Ayers, W. A. Rowe, Charles Rowe, Pierce Maxey and R. M. Jetton were the distinguished guests. A guest who delighted the audience with her message of May day and health programs was Mrs. C. A. Ver Nooy, of Athens.

Mrs. F. B. Cheek and her committee presented a program. Colonel M. L. Allison gave an address on a woman's civic responsibility. During the social half hour tea was served.

Carnesville Woman's club will entertain the federation in January, at which time the music teacher, Miss Bowers; Mrs. L. F. Lenhardt, president of the Carnesville Woman's club; Mrs. B. T. Smith and Miss Ellie Smalley, home demonstration agent, will have charge of program.

Turner County Fair Showed Woman's Progress

Turner county fair showed the progress made by women of the county made possible through the county club work. It opened with prayer by Rev. W. E. Towson, pastor of the Methodist church. The high school students, led by Superintendent G. S. Roach, Professor W. O. Dorough and Mrs. J. J. Story were on hand at the opening and sang several songs led by Mrs. Story. Saturday morning Rev. T. M. Calloway, pastor of Ashburn Baptist church, opened with prayer. C. H. Bishop, head of the bureau of markets, at home on this occasion, gave an interesting talk to the 4-H club girls, who were present in a body and sang several inspiring songs.

The exhibits were the results of patience and caretaking work in every department of women's work. There were home-made dresses made from materials purchased from Ashburn merchants for which these merchants offered prizes for the best made from materials bought. Fancy work of every description and use, jellies, preserves, pickles, canned goods and fresh vegetables were on display. Old-fashioned quilts and hand-made spreads showed the painstaking work of mothers and grandmothers and were a stimulus to better work on the part of the younger folks. Splendid cakes and biscuits competed for prizes offered by our grocers.

Most interesting was the Snow Drift cake contest conducted by C. A. May, of Fort Valley, district manager for the Southern Cotton Oil company, of Savannah. Twenty-six cakes were entered in this contest and were afterward sold, a number being auctioned by Deputy Sheriff Story, realizing a tidy sum. The display of the 4-H club girls reflected much caretaking work on the part of the girls and their leader, the county demonstration agent.

The difficult task of judging these displays was undertaken by Miss Rosa McGee, district home economics agent, and Miss Ruby Holbrook, home demonstration agent of Crisp county. The better babies contest was most interesting and showed about 25 of the finest, healthiest and happiest babies of the county between the ages of one and two years and under one year of age.

The Ashburn Woman's club served sandwiches, pies and drinks both days. Ladies having charge of a registration book made an effort to get all names but at such times it is almost impossible to get all but the book showed about 600 ladies registered. Especial credit should be accorded Mrs. May J. Betts, Miss Gladys Ellerbee and Miss Victoria Evans, of Ashburn, who planned and undertook the putting over of the fair; also Mrs. Charlie Fountain, president of Sycamore Woman's club; Mrs. W. E. Paulk and Mrs. J. H. Davis, of the Rebecca club, and to every girl and woman who helped by giving time and work toward making this fair a splendid success.

Removes Skin Defects By Absorption

Smart society women of today peel away the ugliness of faded, aged, blemished skin with pure mercolized wax. It removes the whole surface by absorbing the lifeless scarf skin, secretly. In just a few days, the clear, smooth healthy under skin is revealed with all the charm of youth. The wax cleanses the pores of all impurities, removes excess oiliness and is the sensible way to aid nature discard freckles, pimples, blotches, blackheads, etc. Get an ounce at any drug store with full directions and see your face get years younger. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and age signs, use as face lotion 1 ounce powdered saxolite dissolved in 1 half pint witch hazel.—(adv.)

Worthwhile Club Of Moultrie Celebrates 20th Anniversary

The Worthwhile club, of Moultrie, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of the club's organization. The president, Mrs. H. McDowell, in her annual address, briefly reviewed some of the activities of the club last year and spoke of plans for the coming year. She touched on the blessings that have come to the section in a material way this year, calling attention to the bountiful harvests and the splendid prices received for the products of the section.

Mrs. H. H. Welchel, chairman of the literary program committee, and Mrs. W. R. Latham, chairman of the music committee, very cleverly gave an outline of the year's study course. This outline was given in dialogue form. Other numbers on the program were a vocal solo, "Just a Cottage Small," sung in her usual delightful manner by Mrs. Grady Clements, and a pleasing piano number by Miss Miriam Trimble.

As a feature of the club's birthday celebration Mrs. L. R. Barber and Mrs. J. B. Coyle in interesting talks told of the early days of the club, of some of its outstanding accomplishments and reviewed briefly the administrations of its various presidents.

Mrs. L. R. Barber, Mrs. L. L. Dickerson and Mrs. H. McDowell were hostesses for the afternoon, and one of the enjoyable features of the social hour was the cutting of the birthday cake, encircled with 20 burning tapers.

Eleventh District Meet in Waycross.

The executive board of the eleventh district met Tuesday at the home of the president, Mrs. E. D. Dimmock, in Williams Heights, in Waycross. At the board meeting Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, state president, made very interesting reports on the recent meetings of the state executive board, the Tallulah Falls school trustees, and the biennial convention. Mrs. Brantley stated that recently forty new scholarships were needed for Tallulah Falls schools, but that 15 had already been subscribed.

The board members in attendance included Mrs. A. P. Brantley and Mrs. B. D. Brantley, of Blackshear; Mrs. Albert Tidwell and Mrs. A. B. Sheffield, of Quitman; Mrs. C. A. Poer and Mrs. Homer Ricketson, of Broxton; Mrs. Fred Brewer, Mrs. J. M. Dent and Mrs. Rod Davis, of Douglas; Mrs. R. G. Rickerson, Mrs. W. C. Wooten and Mrs. S. L. Bascom Anthony, of the Thomasville district; Rev. C. W. Curry, of the Valdosta district, and Rev. N. H. Williamson, of the Waycross district, will hold a session on Tuesday for the completion of the work of making the ministerial assignments for the ensuing conference year.

Bishop Beauchamp and his cabinet met in Macon on November 2 and 3 and made a careful survey of the appointments of the ministers to their charges for 1928 and this work is to be completed during the conference session to be held in Valdosta.

Opens Wednesday.

The routine business of the conference beginning on Wednesday and continuing through Saturday will be dispatched during the mornings and the afternoons will be devoted to board and committee meetings, with an hour interval each afternoon for the preaching service to be conducted by Rev. J. T. Wardle Stafford, D. D., the famous British divine. The evenings will be featured by anniversaries of the various conference boards.

Rev. C. W. Curry, presiding elder of the Valdosta district, is closing four years of successful service and will have a splendid report. There have been approximately seven hundred and fifty additions on profession of faith during the present year, with an equal number by certificate; finances are in advance of last year by a good percent.

The district, with the pastors, has supported the work in white Russia as a missionary special. The full quota—$4,850—will be paid and so will the general benevolent claims; during the four years the church at Adel has been completed and dedicated, Tifton has erected a $30,000 Sunday school building that is modern in every respect. The first session of the Sunday school will convene therein Sunday, November 13. This was begun and completed this year.

A consolidated church near Lakeland has been erected this year, and a revival is now in progress in this building. Lakeland will begin the erection of a church in the town at an early date; more than $1,500 is now in the bank to be spent on same. Many churches have been repaired, repainted and otherwise improved during the four years. For all purposes the district will raise this year more than $100,000, and for the four years it will go far beyond $450,000.

Fine Report.

Rev. G. E. Clary, of Americus, conference Sunday school superintendent, has wrought a monumental work in teacher training during the current year. Combining the credits for the standard school work and that of the Cokesbury, the districts show the following totals: Americus district, 189; Columbus district, 124; Cordele district, 130; Dublin district, 123; Macon district, 337; McRae district, 224; Savannah district 252; Thomasville district, 238; Valdosta district, 125; Waycross district, 130. Total 1,902, as against 1,029 last year, or an increase of 873. These schools cost the board this year $472 outside the aid given by the funds for the promotion of missions. This amount was $185. Under the old plan these schools would have cost from $1,800 to $2,000. We held 16 standard and 8 Cokesbury schools, making a total of 24.

Rev. Harry S. Allen, of Macon, general evangelist, has held 17 revivals during the year in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky and Texas. Eight hundred and seventy-two applied for church membership during these meetings; received $4,250 net as remuneration.

The other general evangelists, Rev. J. M. Glenn, D. D., of Young Harris; Rev. N. M. Lovem and Rev. J. A. Harmon, of Macon, and the conference evangelists, Rev. G. M. Spivey, of Macon; Rev. C. B. McDaniel, of Atlanta, and Rev. F. A. Ratcliffe, of Stillmore, and the district evangelist, Rev. O. C. Mingledorff, of Douglas, have held a number of successful revivals and will report a large number of additions to the church.

Columbus will invite the South Georgia conference to hold its 1928 session at St. Luke's church. This historic church will celebrate its 100th anniversary in 1928, it being only one year younger than the city of Columbus.

Lovely Marietta Belle Weds Mississippian

Brenau Girls Entertained At Rich Fashion Display

Pretty Brenau college girls, 140 in number, were entertained at a brilliantly staged fashion show tea Saturday afternoon in Rich's tea room, having been invited to Atlanta for this special social event preceding the performance of "The Only Girl," Victor Herbert's opera, presented at the auditorium Saturday night.

The Alumnae club of Brenau college, including Mesdames Carl Brittan, Omar Elder, Irving Thomas, Norwood Griffin, Harlan Snyder, A. G. Maxwell, William Owens, Arthur L. Brooke, P. G. Winter and Miss Ethel Smith, acted as official hostesses, receiving the visitors and the members of the college faculty.

Attractive models, chosen for their small stature, paraded in exquisite costumes, displaying those in which a college girl should be correctly garbed to meet every requirement of the day. Particularly charming was a roma crepe afternoon gown in Napoleon blue, introducing the Vionnet neckline, with collar and cuffs of Alencon lace. A stylish practical three-piece sports model introduced a blouse of gray and blue striped jersey in sweater effect, a pleated skirt of dark blue jersey, topped with an unlined coat of the same solid material in blue. A youthful evening coat of cerise velvet, entirely untrimmed, matched a graceful gown of a lighter shade of chiffon, the full skirt showing the fashionable uneven hemline.

Metal Cloth Model.

Rose and gold metal cloth made into a two-piece model, with belt of gold, fastened with a rhinestone buckle, was intended for afternoon wear, while a morning gown of topaz crepe was entirely self-trimmed. A stunning apple green taffeta, of a robe de style combined with apple green tulle, was strikingly ornamented at the side by a bow of orange velvet ribbon and lotus flowers. A black satin gown, without which no wardrobe is complete, was ruffled at the bottom of the skirt, and a graceful bow of satin, lined with beige georgette crepe, and the inevitable rhinestone ornament decorated the front of the gown. Top coats, suitable for warm or cold days, trimmed with badger and fox fur, were in brown, tan and black imported materials, and elegant fur neckpieces tempted the onlookers.

Bride Gives Thrill.

Just to give the thrill attendant upon a wedding scene, a bride and her bridesmaid walked in stately measure to the wedding march from Lohengrin, rendered by an orchestra. The bridal costume, of regal white satin, had a cape of princess lace, and a deep flounce of the same lace finished the bottom of the bouffant skirt.

A gorgeous veil of princess lace, worn in cap effect, was held in place by clusters of orange blossoms, and the bride carried orchids and valley lilies in a shower bouquet. Her maid of honor wore the charming apple green outfit described above and carried a bouquet of sweetheart and Ophelia roses.

Tea was served at effectively appointed tables and the Brenau students afterward attended the presentation of "The Only Girl" at the Woman's club auditorium.

THE "Garden of Allah," an intensely beautiful and gripping production surpassing all other Rex Ingram pictures, is to be shown at Loew's Grand this week. The original "Garden of Allah" described in the famous Robert Hichens novel is still intact, not having deteriorated to any extent since the novel was written. It is one of the show places of northern Africa, and numbers of tourists visit it each year. For the garden, considering its unique desert surroundings, is one of the most beautiful estates in the world and certainly the most artistic in Africa.

From it you get a wide scene of the Sahara. The garden itself is a mass of towering palms and rich growth of grass and fruit trees so thickly planted that the tropical sun can hardly penetrate. It takes in about eight acres. The original designer and owner was Count Landon, a Frenchman. He is now 85 years of age, and still living. He gave the estate to his sister on her betrothal. When she died the magnificent present was left to her niece who now occupies it part of the year.

The picture, "The Garden of Allah," at Loew's Grand this week, which Rex Ingram filmed in the original Garden of Allah in Biskra, Algeria, is by far one of the finest pictures shown in Atlanta this year, and I am sure that you will agree with me when you see it. Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovich play the leading roles in this Metro-Goldwin feature picture. Others in the cast are Marcel Vibert, French actor; H. Humberston Wright, Mme. Parquette, Ben Sadour, Armand Dutertre, Gerald Fielding and Michael Powell.

This picture is a classic, filmed without changing the ending. Rex Ingram refused to change the conclusion of the picture for the simple reason that Hichens wrote it that way.

This is truly an extraordinary picture and one that will be of interest to every theatre-goer.

THE TRICHO SYSTEM.

REMOVES forever superfluous hair. Hundreds of society women, theatrical women and professional women who are embarrassed by unsightly growths of hair have taken this treatment and have been pleased with the results. The Tricho System is absolutely painless, does not scar the skin in any way—the results are permanent.

Tricho System treatments destroy the hair roots forever, leaving the skin in perfect condition.

Women who are afflicted by unsightly growths of hair should take these treatments as many Atlanta women are doing.

If you wish to see a practical demonstration, free of charge, call at the Tricho System of Atlanta, 622 Candler building. The efficient lady operator will give you any information as to the system and the cost of the treatments, which I am sure is within the reach of every woman.

MR. RICH says: "The personality and the charm of a delicate finger wave requires the services of a specialist.

In this day and time there are specialists in every line of work, and one must be efficient to succeed. That is the answer to the extraordinary success of Mr. Rich of the Artistic Bob Shop, located on the balcony of Jacobs' main store at Five Points. He has achieved success because he is an expert and an artist. He is an artist and has reached a degree of perfection in his work that few ever attain, because he knows just what style of coiffure is best suited to each individual and not only cuts the hair into a becoming bob, but arranges the hair by finger-waving it into beautiful, soft, lengthened waves. It becomes more than an ordinary haircut; it is a finished coiffure.

There are no two people alike, they each have their individual personalities and characteristics and so the same haircut would not suit everybody. Each chic young miss and smart matron have a style of their own and so the coiffure must suit their particular style, must be individual, different.

Mr. Rich can look at you and decide what style of haircut would be best suited to your particular type, and I think that Mr. Rich is a past master in the art of hair cutting and dressing and so long as there are artists such as Mr. Rich the bob will always predominate.

There are twelve expert operators at the Artistic Bob Shop, trained in all of the modern methods of beauty culture. Permanent waves, manicures and facial massages are all given with that expert care and efficiency that is characteristic of the operators of the Artistic Bob Shop.

BEAUTIFUL new arrivals in rugs recently received from the leading rug manufacturers of the east are being shown in Keely's rug department. These rugs have never before been displayed in the south and are exact reproductions of antique Persian designs. The same dyes and colorings are used in these reproductions that are used in the genuine Oriental rugs.

If you will visit Keely's rug department you will agree with me that the skillful imagery of the storied patterns and the tonal balance of the pleasant colors of these rugs make them more than desirable, and should you purchase one or more of these rugs for your home you will have the satisfaction that comes to all home lovers with the consciousness that in these heavy seamless rugs from Keely's you will have long years of usefulness and sound standards of value, because under ordinary conditions one of these rugs should last from 15 to 20 years. They are 9 feet by 12 feet in size and sell for $57.50.

One rug that especially attracted my attention had a sand background, and two-toned rose border. Sprays of Oriental flowers artistically woven into the body of the rug in such a fashion that they looked like brocade or hand work.

In another part of Keely's rug department I saw a gorgeous display of French and English pillows of every color and design. Some of the pillows were made of taffeta decorated with hand-made French flowers, and dainty French ruffles. Some were of gold cloth combined with gold brocade. They range in price from $1.39 to $4.98. These pillows are some of the most beautiful that I have seen anywhere in Atlanta for the price. They would make an ideal Xmas gift. Don't fail to visit Keely's and see them before selecting your Christmas gifts.

I HAVE some wonderful news for Atlanta housewives. Beginning Monday, November 14, Monsieur Roussey, authority on foods and their relation to health, will lecture at M. Rich & Bros. Company on Waterless Cooking. The new form of culinary art, whereby the essentials of the health properties of vegetables, the minerals and carbohydrates are retained and not thrown away as when water is used.

Monsieur Roussey is a famous French chef, and is known in Europe as an authority on the preparation of foods. He has had 35 years of experience in Europe and in the finest hotels in America.

In his health talk he covers such vital points as child feeding, bone and tissue building, economy in the preparation of foods, the correct use of various cuts of meats, garnishing and flavoring, colors in cooking.

This world-famous chef will give recipes for dinners and luncheons, for individual dishes and for special seasonings which he has perfected. He will do actual cooking during these daily lectures in Rich's lecture room on the fourth floor in the house furnishings department. The lecture room is large and seats are arranged to accommodate a large crowd. Monsieur Roussey will talk from the stage of the lecture room so that all who attend can hear and see every detail of his demonstration.

Monsieur Roussey specializes in fireless cooking, and is touring the United States for the Wagner Aluminum company. He will spend the entire week in Atlanta and give a daily lecture each day at 2 p. m. at Rich's, for the benefit of the Atlanta women.

Every woman who can should not fail to attend these lectures because the knowledge they will glean from these demonstrations will help one to be a more competent housewife and will teach much that will be a help to you in the planning and preparation of foods.

Kress-Huger Wedding Plans Are of Social Interest

Cordial social interest centers in the announcement of the plans for the marriage of Miss Betty Kress and Daniel Elliott Huger, which takes place in New York in the Lady of St. Patrick chapel at 11:30 o'clock Wednesday, November 23, with a brilliant reception afterward in the crystal room of the Ritz-Carlton hotel.

The charming bride-elect who has often visited her aunt, Mrs. Joseph Moody, at the Georgian Terrace and has a wide circle of friends and relatives in Atlanta. Miss Rosalind Kress will be her sister's only attendant and Edward Kern will act as Mr. Huger's best man. Lee Carroll Raymond Keenan and Holcomb Henderson will be ushers and Miss Kress will be given in marriage by her father, Claude W. Kress.

Miss Kress numbers among her ancestors some very noted men. One Charles Muskerry, a viscount, who was an officer in the English navy and fought with signal success in the war of 1665, having been buried with great honors in Westminster Abbey. Another was Sr George Macartney, England's first ambassador to China, having received his appointment in 1792. The great John England, who became in 1820 the first Roman Catholic bishop of the Carolinas and Georgia, a man noted for his zeal and learning, was also a relative of Miss Kress. Other Atlanta relatives include her aunts, Mrs. James A. Branch, Mrs. Mollie S. Moran and Mrs. E. W. More.

Mr. Huger is a direct descendant of Arthur Middleton, signer of the Declaration of Independence and twice a member of the continental congress, whose father, Henry Middleton, was president of the continental congress and also of the provincial congress of South Carolina.

Wellborn will be host Thursday evening, December 8, introducing to society his lovely debutante daughter, Miss Mary Wellborn. The ball will take place at the Piedmont Driving club and will assemble several hundred members of southern society.

Miss Wellborn is one of the most popular and admired members of the season's array of buds. She received her education at the fashionable Ogontz school in Philadelphia and has had exceptional advantages of wide travel, having spent much time touring Europe and places of interest in this country. Her bow to society will be the signal for much entertaining, a series of formal and informal affairs having been planned in her honor for the winter season.

Hotel Candler To Give Dance.

The second dinner-dance of the fall and winter series of the hotel Candler, Decatur, will be held Friday evening, in the handsome ballroom of the hotel. The tea and dinner-dances of the Candler are interesting events in the social life of Decatur, following the success of the opening dances during Halloween.

A number of parties have been already arranged for this event, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Sloan are in direct charge of arrangements.

Hapeville Woman's Club To Sponsor Bazaar.

The bazaar tea, sponsored by Hapeville Woman's club, Mrs. H. A. Allen and Mrs. Jere Wells, chairmen, will be held Thursday afternoon, November 17, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Allen, instead of at the Hapeville auditorium, as previously announced. The public is invited to contribute anything salable. Miss Elizabeth Lisle, chairman of fine arts, has arranged a program consisting of a reading by Mrs. Thomas Lewis and music by Mrs. S. E. Treadwell.

Mrs. Treadwell has arranged for the College Park Music club and chorus to present a benefit musical concert at Hapeville auditorium on the evening of November 29.

The club spent two days last week at the home of Mrs. Jere Wells, sewing for the Needlework guild.

Young matron's division of the club met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Claude Bailey and arranged for a pancake supper and Christmas tree.

Yaarab Temple To Give Dance.

Local and visiting Shriners are invited to attend the third of a series of dances given by Yaarab Temple at the Druid Hills Golf club Friday evening, November 18. The potentate urges that all nobles take advantage of these unusual entertainments and that they dress formally, presenting the current card at the door. These entertainments are growing in popularity and a very large attendance is expected.

Symphony Orchestra Concert Attracts Attention of Society and Music Lovers

Musically inclined Atlanta will journey to Keith's Georgia theater Sunday afternoon to listen to the divine symphonies rendered by the Atlanta Symphony orchestra, which makes its only appearance, taking the nature of a benefit to efface the deficit left over from last year. Conductor Enrico Leide and his 60-odd musicians are all giving their services in an effort to clean off the financial slate in order that a fresh start may be made for the season of 1928-29. Soloists for Sunday's concert include Mrs. W. J. Morrison, famous pianist; Miss Eda Bartholomew, organist, and the famous harp ensemble composed of pupils of Mrs. W. B. Griffith.

SADLER—BAILEY WEDDING.

The sincere interest of fashionable society throughout the south centers in the wedding of Miss Mary Sadler, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie Sadler, to Nathaniel Hammond Bailey, of Griffin, which will be brilliantly solemnized at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church on Peachtree road. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Sadler will entertain at a reception at their home on Thirteenth street.

World Fellowship Reception To Take Place at Y.W. Nov. 18

The world fellowship reception takes place on Friday evening, November 18, at 7 o'clock at Y. W. C. A. headquarters, 37 Auburn avenue. Fifteen countries, where the Y. W. C. A. is organized, hold similar receptions in their respective fashions.

The program include a general reception in the front parlors of the Y. W. C. A., from which guests will be ushered into various rooms, each one under the direction of a particular club or department of the Y. W. C. A. and each one representing a certain country, showing the customs of that country. The program culminates in a pageant at 8 o'clock in the gymnasium.

Mrs. Bugg Is in Charge.

The membership committee, of which Mrs. B. L. Bugg is chairman, is in charge of the reception assisted by Mrs. James E. Carlton, head of the committee on music; Mrs. B. H. Palmer, chairman of the reception committee, including Mesdames Glenn Ryman, Charles Hoke, R. N. R. Bardwell, W. E. Campbell, Frank Fair, Mrs. Y. H. Shahbaz, dressed in the costume of Persia, will preside at the tea table assisted by Mesdames M. L. Stimson, J. E. Dance, J. B. Kincaid, J. B. Ridley. The decoration committee is headed by Mrs. J. E. Springer, assisted by Mrs. G. A. Veach and Mrs. Ralph Sims.

Through the courtesy of M. Rich & Bros. costumes from Austria, Italy, Hungary, Ireland, Germany, Switzerland, Holland and Czeko-Slovakia will be worn by employees of the store. Members of the membership committee will wear Asiatic costumes. Tea will be served from a Russian samovar by Mrs. Shahbaz. Music will be furnished by the Mandolin club from the Girls' High school. Oriental decorations will be furnished by Shahbaz & Sons.

Following the reception guests will be shown into rooms representing the following countries by the accompanying organizations: South America, Girl Reserves; Turkey, S. I. S. P. club; Japan, health education department; India, Old Glory club; Palestine and Persia, membership department; Syria, Clover club; China, Business Girls' league; Mexico, industrial department; Esthonia and Latvia, girls from the Y. W. C. A. residence. Beginning at 6 o'clock, genuine Mexican hot tomalas will be served by the industrial depatment.

The Girl Reserves will represent South America. A large map of the continent will be hung on the wall and an exhibit of products from that country will be shown. Each high school club will represent a different country in South America, Decatur being Brazil; Fulton High, the Argentine; Amicus club, Chile; East Point, Uruguay, Paraguay and the smaller countries. The dancing of the Argentine tango will be a feature of the evening and coffee will be served in the Girl Reserves' room.

From the tour of these rooms the guests will go to the gym, where at 8 o'clock the pageant, "The Folks in Our Neighborhood," written by Miss Martha Jarrall, will be presented. Miss Jarrall, a graduate of Randolph-Macon, is one of the most enthusiastic Y. W. supporters and has had charge of the program for the world fellowship evening, working under Mrs. J. W. McEachern. The pageant brings out two speaking parts: World Fellowship, portrayed by Miss Sue Hill; the American Girl, Miss Martha Crowe. The elves steamship and railroad bring to the American girl, who is preparing a repast for expected friends, products from the various countries represented in the pageant. Groups from all nations are on the stage at the close of the pageant and, in demonstration of true world fellowship, sing "In Christ There Is No East or West" and "The Hymn of the Lights."

Important Meeting.

Three important meetings take place at the Y. W. C. A. Monday, at 10:30 o'clock the board of directors, Mrs. S. F. Boykin, president, presiding, at headquarters, 37 Auburn avenue.

The publicity committee, headed by Miss Susie Wailes, meets Wednesday evening at 5 o'clock at the Y. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock.

Miss Martha Jarrald, chairman of the program for world fellowship, announces a rehearsal of the pageant Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Y. W. headquarters.

The Girl Reserve department gives a tea on November 16 in honor of the Girl Reserve committee and advisers, at which Mrs. Calvin Prescott will be hostess at her home on Clifton road.

Introducing Miss Raine.

Brilliance and social importance will attend the elaborate reception at which Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wardlaw will entertain Thursday afternoon, introducing to society Miss Edna Belle Raine, lovely debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine. Mr. and Mrs. Wardlaw will entertain at their handsome new home on Peachtree circle, the event to assemble several hundred members of prominent Atlanta society.

West End Woman's Club News Is of Interest.

The program at the West End Woman's club Wednesday, November 16, will be one of unusual interest. Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, one of the outstanding ministers of the city, will deliver an address before the literature department on modern fiction. Andrew Arnean, tenor, will render a group of selected numbers, and George Waters, Jr., 8-year-old pianist, a pupil of Mrs. W. L. Wood, will interpret "Rustic Sketches" by Morrison, and "Scenes in Forest at Sunset;" "Meditation" by Morrison, and "Rock of Ages," a transcription. Mrs. Alice E. Means and Mrs. A. R. Burt sponsor the programs on the third Wednesday of each month and friends and members of other clubs are welcome. Visitors may take the Cascade Heights bus at the end of the car line without extra charge. The program is at 3 o'clock.

A "Georgia Products" barbecue will be given Friday evening from 6 to 8 o'clock. Georgia products will be used exclusively. Eugene Talmage, commissioner of agriculture, and Mrs. Norman Sharp will be among the guests of honor, and will speak briefly upon the state's agricultural resources. The barbecue and Brunswick stew will be prepared by experts.

Visitors may play cards and other games in the lounge. Mrs. Mamie Bray, well known Atlanta singer, and little Margaret Wakefield and others will feature the program. Transportation to the clubhouse from the car line will be arranged. Information and tickets may be obtained by calling West 2924, West 0302-J, West 4236, West 3644-W and West 2615, or any member of the literature or music department.

Miss Triplett Weds Marion Fontaine.

The marriage of Miss Berdie Triplett and Marion Fontaine was solemnized in the presence of friends October 30, at 3 o'clock, at Cooper Street Baptist church.

IN AN exceedingly clever and apt short story, relative to much ado about angling, and captioned "The Flying Tactics of a Famous Fisherman," Mrs. Omar F. Elder will be introduced to the literary world under the musical sounding pen name of Marielen Elder, in a future edition of Outdoor America. In accepting her story, Marguerite Ives, editor of the magazine devoted to the defense of the woods, waters and wild life of our country, wrote to the author saying, "I have your most delightful story of your famous fishing husband, and I shall be happy to publish it in Outdoor America in the very near future. Am I to run this simply as by 'His Wife,' with no name? Please let me know. I hate to not give you the credit for writing so good a tale, but should dislike to indiscreetly involve you in what may be a delicate situation."

The narrative deals with the muchly discussed problem of whether it's profitable to fish with the lowly angleworm or the artificial fly of feathers and silk, disclosing the actual experiences of Dr. Elder, who as a means of relaxing from the taxing duties imposed upon a physician, turns to angling every time the opportunity is presented. Likened unto one young officer of the late world war on departing for France, who packed sufficient de luxe equipment to have served five generals in the war between the states, Dr. Elder, laying aside for a time the cares of duty, carried to the Blue Ridge mountains last summer an elaborate and carefully selected assortment of fishing tackle, of a size and weight for every casting choice. It was the first fishing expedition pretty Mrs. Elder and Junior, their son, had been invited to join, and although she wanted to do so, she refrained from commenting upon the bulk of the baggage. It's hardly fair to go further into her brilliantly constructed story dealing with the Elder family in its general outline, because the public will soon have a chance to see it in print, and judge of its charmingly couched phrases, and scintillating dialogue. It clicks with humor at the end of the tale, and turns the spotlight upon the doctor-fisherman, whose wife has caught the slant of the fisherman's mind, and the reader's imagination travels with the author.

Acceptance into the pages of so well-established a magazine as Outdoor America, along with such writers as Gifford Pinchot, often called the conservation governor; Ellis Parker Butler, Herbert Hoover, William L. Finley, director of American Nature association; Hal Kane Clements, newspaper and magazine writer, who wrote the 'Letters of a Little Lady Vagabond," telling of her adventures traveling alone in a far north country, and Donald Hough, leading writer on outdoor subjects, places Marielen Elder's name in a magazine read from one end of the land to the other. Her understanding and appreciation of the fisherman will appeal to all anglers, and besides all that it's told in a fascinating, natural and captivating style, entirely due to Mrs. Elder's unique conception of her subject.

She writes extremely well, and with impeccable construction, treating her story in a moving style, carefully buildin- to a captivating climax.

During the desperate illness last winter of her mother Mrs. Elder spent almost every waking moment at her hospital bedside, and wrote a 40,000-word novelette entitled "Black Walls," which has received the commendation of noted critics. She has been requested to expand it into a 60,000-word serial, destined to place her among the foremost of American writers.

THOSE assembled to witness the ceremony uniting Mrs. Nell Bigby Wilkins and Dr. Asa Gaston De Loach last Thursday afternoon, heard one of the most impressive of marriage rituals spoken by Dr. L. O. Bricker, pastor of Peachtree Road Christian church, who many years ago compiled this special service according to his own ideal.

It is taken from the first chapter of Ruth, wherein Naomi tries to dissuade her two daughters-in-law, Orpah and Ruth, to turn their own ways and not accompany her to her people back in the country of Moab. Orpah kissed her mother-in-law and returned to her people and her gods, but Ruth clave unto her saying: "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people and thou God my God."

Based upon such divine and steadfast devotion expressed in the sixteenth verse of the first chapter of Ruth, Dr. Bricker builded the service used in the many wedding ceremonies at which he is invited to officiate.

NEXT in importance to a bride of the forthcoming week is her trousseau, exquisitely selected to adorn her youthful silhouette, be it worn at the famous Virginia Hot Springs, the first lap of her wedding journey, or in gay little old New York, where a part of the time will be spent, thence to the future western home of the Atlantan, whose fiance is a leading figure in the social as well as financial life of C—. After the holly wreaths, mistletoe and Christmas bells have been removed and packed away, this same elaborate trousseau will meet the requirements of smart resorts in Florida, where the bride and groom first were introduced to one another and will return to the balmy land of orange blossoms the first of January.

Like starlight on snow is the all-white Lanvin gown, its vermicelli bead-embroidery entirely covering the white crepe foundation and a fish-tail train completing the newest, most effective note of the modern ballroom costume in which the lovely lady appeared Saturday evening at the Piedmont Driving club. A respendent evening wrap of metallic brocade and regal blue-green velvet, sumptuous with fur, matched the gown built of the same combination of materials. Flesh and black chiffon, embroidered in crystal drops fashioned a marvelously becoming dinner gown, and an aqua-marine blue velvet, finished at the throat and cuffs with rose point lace and rhinestone buttons, is suitable for a reception. Black evening frocks of lace and chiffon have not been ignored in the planning of this trousseau, flashing with brilliant rhinestone embroidery on the corsage, while another arrested attention by a dashing white ostrich feather ornament at the left side.

The piece de resistance in this gorgeous wardrobe is expressed in the lustrous shell pink velvet wedding gown in which the ravishingly lovely bride will plight her troth. Outlining its graceful, uneven hemline skirt, the waist, and introduced in intricate design in the long sleeves, is priceless rose point lace. An unspoken tribute to the discriminating woman planning the details of this ensemble is the headdress, built entirely of real lace, from which misty, shell pink tulle hangs in billowy folds, touching the gown just below the waistline in the back, held in place with clusters of pink apple blossoms, while small clusters are fastened in several places on the veil.

When she departs on her bridal tour, she will travel correctly garbed in a two-piece model in biege jersey topped by an english tweed coat, introducing a double collar and cuffs in badger fur, and a modish hat of felt. Brown kid and reptile shoes, harmonizing gloves, pocketbook and hose, and the most intriguing collapsible brown silk umbrella are important accessories to a perfect unity of ensemble.

OUT OF Armistice day has come much. But one of the most interesting things that Four Women have discovered, which seems quite in keeping with this Peace day of the eleventh, is the first birthday party of little Catherine Pritchett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Pritchett, whose brief existence seems to have revolved about the number eleven.

There are those who are born on the thirteenth, and in consequence, it is conceeded, life is uncertain indeed. But for those who first saw the light of day on the eleventh and first breathed the air amid the announcement of peace by whistle and horn and the gala celebration of the city at large, surely there is something in store.

Little Miss Pritchett was born on the eleventh month, the eleventh year and eleventh month of her mother and father's marriage. She is named for her aunt, Miss Catherine Lyon, who was also born on the eleventh day of the eleventh month. And to complete the circle of events which already have been crowded into this young lady's life, she stood alone and took her first step at eleven months old, leaving little doubt that she has just begun to live her life around this number which on the eleventh day of the eleventh month of 1927 proved such an eventful day in the life of Atlanta.

THE WORD IS OUT! Last week we told you of the wooing and winning of a lovely middle western belle by a popular Atlanta bachelor. Today you'll notice the Elwood-Scott engagement in the list of announcements, and perhaps, you have previously noticed that Miss Lois Elwood, of Menominee, Mich., arrived Saturday to be the guest of Mrs. William Randolph Smith at her home on Penn avenue. Not being able to spare the time from his law office, Tom Scott could not run up to Michigan for a week-end visit and the announcement of his engagement, so, reversing the order of things, his charming bride-to-be sweetly consented to come to Atlanta. Foretelling the popularity of the bride-elect in her home city is the fact that Sunday evening will terminate this hurried visit, provided, of course, that an impromptu wedding ceremony does not cancel railroad reservations and elaborate plans for a brilliant marriage scheduled for December 27 at the handsome Elwood home on Green Bay.

INSPIRATION to artistic enthusiasm lies in the fact that Mrs. W. J. Morrison, who will be the solo artist with the Atlanta Symphony orchestra in its only concert this season Sunday at the Georgia, is one musician who keeps her standard of performance up to professional standard for the pure love of music and her regard for sincerity in art. Her new duo-art record of Edward McDowell's "To the Sea," has been published, this to be followed by others, and Mrs. Morrison's royalties will go to the McDowell art colony fund at Peterborough, just as do all profits from her McDowell lecture recitals.

A BRIEF note received by Four Women last week informed us of the engagement of two popular Atlantans, the formal announcement to be made in early December. Their presence together at the large social functions for the past year caused us to suspect their admiration for each other. Consequently we were not surprised to hear that ere spring returns they would be numbered among the young married contingent.

The wedding is scheduled for February and no doubt will take place at the handsome Druid Hills home of the bride-to-be's parents. As a debutante of only a few winters ago, she enjoyed wide popularity which has continued throughout her social career. In athletic circles she is equally popular and successful. In the many matches won by this lovely young belle—both romantic and otherwise—she lost her heart to ———? But that would be telling.

Many Weddings Interest Griffin.

Griffin, Ga., November 12.—Mr. and Mrs. William Nicholas Briscoe, of Knoxville, Tenn., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Carolyn Mace, and Lucius Drewry Gray, of Griffin, November 2 at 4:30 o'clock at the Second Presbyterian church in Knoxville.

Miss Briscoe will be given in marriage by her father and will have as matron of honor her cousin, Mrs. Ralph Davidson, of Knoxville. The bridesmaids will be Miss Elizabeth Johnson and Miss Ina Briscoe.

Mr. Gray will have as his best man Ramsey Black, of Valdosta. The groomsmen will be Otis Barnes and Harris Drewry, of Griffin; Jessie Jamerson and Russell Briscoe, of Knoxville, brother of the bride. A reception for the members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests will be held following the ceremony.

Miss Newby Craig and Thomas Barfield were solemnly married Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Craig, in Sunnyside. The bride wore a gown of tan and brown crepe with a close-fitting hat and other accessories to match. The bride and groom left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip to Florida, where they will make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. James Alfred Lane announce the engagement of their daughter, Myrtle, to Thomas Cody Underwood, of Jacksonville, Fla. The marriage to be solemnized in December.

LaGrange College News Is of Cordial Interest.

The poetry contest, started for the purpose of obtaining a poem carrying out the dominant theme of the Quadrangle, the LaGrange college annual, came to a conclusion Tuesday morning with the announcement of the winner. A prize of a $10 gold piece was awarded Miss Hattie McDougald, of Gaddistown, for her poem "Treasure Voyage." Miss Mary Head, LaGrange, and Miss Mae Beall Yancey, Carrollton, received honorable mention. The announcement was made in the chapel by President Thompson.

State U. D. C. President's Annual Report Completed Today

The following article published below completes the yearly report of Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, retiring president of the Georgia division, United Daughters of Confederacy, made at the state convention recently held in Covington:

On November 3, the Valdosta chapter celebrated its silver anniversary. Your president, with the wife of our newly-elected governor, and other chapter members of the chapter, were guests of honor. Antebellum costumes were worn and it was a most festive and interesting occasion. On this trip your president was feted at a dinner party by the executive board and a luncheon by the ex-president of the chapter and a buffet supper by the president. From Valdosta an auto trip to Quitman was made with the past treasurer for a consultation on the financial affairs of your division.

On November 14 we left for Richmond (having stopped in Atlanta for our famous incollegiate game, previous to this a special U. D. C. committee meeting was held and some very important matters attended to). The report of the general U. D. C. convention has been given in your year book, but your president fain would repeat that it was a most educational, historic and delightful convention of six days. The report of your division was read at 12:30 a. m. yet it was with pardonable pride that we received many expressions of commendations of the work of our division. Following Richmond, we visited Fredericksburg and with the guidance of a veteran of Virginia visited the famous battlefields of Chancellorsville, Salem Church and the very spot where our intrepid leader, Stonewall Jackson, was killed, and many other points of Revolutionary and Confederate interest in and around Fredericksburg. Your president was particularly interested in Kenmore. After a rest of two weeks in New York, strenuous work on plans for a new year began. We assisted the recording secretary in reading proof on the year book. December 31 addressed local Kiwanis club, and a message to every chapter and State official in the shape of a calendar compiled by your president was issued early in January. On January 14 at the home of your past President General, your president received with Mr. Harrold honoring former Gov. and Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Walker, Sr., at a brilliant reception.

On January 19, after a meeting of the trustees at the Soldiers Home, Atlanta, your president addressed the Veterans, honoring the birthday of Gen. Robert E. Lee—had lunch there and addressed the World War Veterans at Hospital 48 by invitation of the Fulton Chapter (Atlanta).

January 21, Jackson's birthday was observed locally by an address to the Phil Cook chapter at Montezuma.

January 27. Your president addressed the chapter at Cordele, including many visitors. Members of this chapter pledged at this meeting to read ten histories each and our president likewise pledged and has kept the pledge and enjoyed the reading.

On January 28, the executive board Georgia division, U. D. C., met at the Dempsey hotel, Macon. Forty-two members were present. Much business dispensed and the board members were guests of the president at luncheon. The board was entertained at a lovely tea at the home of Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, ex-president Georgia P. T. A. While in Macon your president was the guest of Mrs. N. J. Lamar and was also entertained by the Rotarians. In rapid succession the following visits were made. At each place your president addressed the chapter and was entertained.

February 1—Americus, at the home of your president general with the Americus chapter. The Ellaville chapter members were also guests.

February 5—Your president entertained a U. D. C. committee at her home, discussing the work in detail.

February 11—Address at Montezuma Consolidated school under the auspices of the Phil Cook chapter on Alex Stevens. More than 500 children were present.

February 12—Guests of Athens chapter's president, our honored historian, at a luncheon in Athens.

February 13—Accompanied by Mrs. Horace Holden, chairman, visited Crawfordville, the home of Alex Stevens. A special meeting was called at the old home of Stevens and a visit to the school was made. Your president was presented by the president of Crawfordville chapter with some bulbs and plants from the yard of our vice president of the Confederacy and a gavel made from the limb of a cedar tree in the yard.

February 18.—An auto trip in pouring rain was made to Fitzgerald where we addressed Kiwanis club at noon and the U. D. C. chapter in the afternoon.

February 22—Your president entertained local chapters D. A. R. and U. D. C. celebrating the birthday of the father of our country. A week of rain followed and to our regret engagements at Milledgeville, Monticello, Madison and Athens had to be cancelled, as the trip was started in an automobile and the roads were impassable.

March 11-19—Was spent at Bainbridge, where your president was honor guest of the Rotarians, Fine Arts club, Social club and the U. D. C. chapter. Social attentions included receptions, teas and a trip to Tallahassee. En route home your president was entertaining at Radium Springs by members of Albany chapter.

March 15—An official visit was made to Marshallville. The James D. Frederick chapter, hostess. This chapter is named for your president's father and she is an honorary member of the chapter.

March 16.—A large and enthusiastic meeting of Sergeant Clinton chapter; Perry was addressed. A special feature work of this chapter is the Confederate picture on exhibit, which will be explained by the chairman later.

March 28, 29 and 30—You were represented by your president at the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in Albany, Ga., and received with the local president U. D. C. at large reception honoring the officers of the Georgia Federation of the national president. In the early spring at the request of the general U. D. C. a call for aid for flood sufferers was sent to every chapter. Most generous were the responses. A gift of $5 was sent from the division to the Albert Sidney Johnson Memorial, Washington, Mason county, Kentucky.

April 4.—Veterans reunion at Tampa. Your president was matron of honor for Georgia division, U. C. V., Mrs. Anna Bryan Lane, of Macon, was sponsor. This gala occasion was so wonderful in every detail that pages could be written descriptive of the honors bestowed upon our Confederate heroes. We were presented at the reunion of Sons of Veterans and at the S. M. association. During a ten-day stay in Florida your president was invited to speak to many local, civic, patriotic and religious organizations.

April 14.—At 10 a. m. your president represented Georgia division U. D. C. at the P.-T. A. convention in Macon and at the unveiling of a boulder erected to honor the Women of the Confederacy, in the public square in Barnesville, at 2 p. m., when your president was one of the speakers. Approximately 800 school children were present. Later she addressed the Willie Hunt Smith chapter U. D. C. in their chapter house. Preceding the exercises your recording secretary, Mrs. Powell Cotter, entertained your president and corresponding secretary with the executive board of her chapter at a luncheon.

April 19.—A brilliant meeting was held in Waycross, where your president addressed the Francis S. Bartow chapter, followed by a large reception at the Country club. Many school children were addressed also.

April 18.—The president of the chapter entertained the executive board at a dinner party in our honor. At a meeting of the Rotarians your president gave a short address and the first vice president of the chapter also entertained the executive board at dinner to meet your president. Leaving Waycross at midnight. We attended a meeting of the executive board at Confederate Soldiers home on the 20th and had lunch at the home.

April 24.—Under the auspices of the Woodrow Wilson chapter, C. of C., your president was the speaker at the unveiling of 78 markers on Confederate soldiers' graves at the old cemetery at Knoxville, Ga. Your third vice president and director of C. of C. was mistress of ceremonies and entertained your president at a reception at her ho mefollowing the exercises, when the C. of C. as well as U. D. C. were invited.

April 26—Memorial Day.

Though many days seemed busy this was perhaps the busiest. At 10 a. m. your president spoke briefly at the auditorium in Montezuma, when her father's cross of honor was presented to her by the Phil Cook chapter; several hundred children were present. Leaving at once by automobile, the memorial address was delivered at Albany. Many children were present here, also. A visit was made to the cemetery, graves decorated. A dinner party was given by our hostess, Mrs. John R. Whitehead, an active member of the chapter, and in her home a large evening reception was given honoring your president by the Dougherty County chapter U. D. C. A number of veterans were present. An unusual feature of the memorial exercises at the auditorium was talks by veterans and the presence of young Mr. von Weller, aged 6, as mascot to the speaker, wearing a perfect Confederate uniform.

April 27.—Your president was entertained at Quitman, the guest of the Quitman chapter, at the Country club. While in the city we (the corresponding secretary accompanied your president) were entertained by your chairman of extension and former treasurer, Mrs. Charles Tillman.

April 28.—A call was made on officers of Thomasville chapter (as the president was ill) and at the chapter house in Pelham a splendid meeting of the Pelham chapter was addressed. In Pelham we were entertained by Mrs. N. C. Twitty and Mrs. J. L. Hand.

April 29—Official visit and reception at Vienna.

On May 2 at the suburban home of Miss Obie Manry, the Cabannis chapter of Forsyth were entertained honoring your president. Miss Manry entertained the local U. D. C. at a luncheon preceding the meeting.

On May 9 the Lizzie Rutherford chapter of Columbus was hostess at a seated luncheon for 100 at the Ralston hotel honoring your president. In the afternoon your president was one of the speakers at the ceremonial of unveiling the handsome gateway at Camp Benning. Later the president of the chapter entertained at a tea.

May 11. The O. C. Horne chapter, Hawkinsville, entertained us at a luncheon and later at a large and enthusiastic meeting at the school auditorium.

May 12. The Charles D. Anderson chapter, of Ft. Valley, for the second time entertained your president.

May 13. An official visit was made to the Marion county chapter, Buena Vista, when a large audience greeted us, followed by a reception.

May 19. At Chapter house in Marietta, your president was entertained by the Kennesaw chapter. Mrs. Anderson was our hostess.

May 20. Your president was invited to meet William Randolph Hearst at Stone Mountain and at a luncheon given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hollins Randolph.

May 21. At Oglethorpe university your president again was invited to meet Mr. Hearst and in the evening at a banquet at the Biltmore hotel, where Mr. Hearst was honored by the president of Oglethorpe university.

May 23. Dalton chapter was your president's hostess at a large meeting and reception. A historic ride was made along General Johnston's line of retreat.

May 27, 28, 29, 30. At class reunion at Wesleyan college and expressed greetings from Georga division.

Addressed Phil Cook chapter on Jefferson Davis on June 1.

June 3. The birthday of vice president of the confederacy—address was given at Upson chapter, at Thomaston, to a large audience at the chapter rooms. Prior to the meeting a luncheon was given by Mrs. Obie Black.

June 5. A trip was made to Flemington.

June 6. A visit was made to many historical places, including old cemetery and Old Midway church and an address made in Hinesville school auditorium under the auspices of Hinesville chapter. Your former recording secretary is president of chapter and was our hostess. Preceding the meeting a luncheon was given by this president when the executive board of the chapter were invited to meet your president.

June 7 to 11. Your president represented you at the Good Roads association and gave an address (as mentioned) on "Patriotic Highways." While in Savannah we were entertained by your second vice president, Mrs. Frank Exley and Mrs. J. D. Weed. She was invited to meet president general at a luncheon given at De Soto hotel by Mrs. J. A. Roundtree, general chairman, Insignia of Confederate Descendants in World War. At a reception given by the Savannah chapter to the visiting U. D. C. at their chapter house, honoring our president general, your president received with the distinguished guests.

June 21, 22, 23. The state convention C. of C. met in Elberton, Ga., and your president was the guest of honor and spoke several times to the C. of C.

June 27 to July 2. At the Phi Mu (your president's sorority) convention in Macon, your president was honor guest and expressed greetings from Georgia division.

July 13. Attended executive board meeting of the Soldiers' Home, Atlanta. After lunch at the home met the special legislative committee at capitol for conference.

July 14. Was honor guest at a luncheon given by the better film committee, Atlanta, and expressed greetings.

When in Jackson, Tenn., from August 1 to 8, your president was entertained by several U. D. C. groups including the ex-president of the Tennessee division.

August 30. Made official visit to the Wallace Edwards chapter, Butler, where an enthusiastic meeting of the chapter was held in the Methodist Episcopal church followed by a large reception in Sunday school rooms.

September 7. Addressed local chapter on "Life of Admiral Semmes."

September 11. Was speaker at exercises in cemetery when the Phil Cook chapter, of Montezuma, unveiled 54 markers on Confederate graves.

September 28. Convention call and general U. D. C. call were mailed in two groups including 15 leaflets to each address.

September 30. As honor guest of Tallahassee chapter your president attended unveiling of a boulder honoring General Robert E. Lee near Tallahassee on Dixie highway. In the evening a reception was given at the hotel when your president shared honors with the president of the Florida division. The commander of Florida veterans and commander of Sons of Veterans, Miss Sallie Blake, treasurer of Tallahassee chapter, was our hostess.

Official Letters and Visits.

The most accurate account your president can give of the exact numbers of letters written might be told by a nice little callous spot on the writing finger and by the empty boxes that once in January held two thousand stamped envelopes, besides the empty stamp books, dozens and dozens uncounted, because confiscated from her family. The use of a typewriter has been undertaken, but for lack of speed, mostly supplanted by longhand, hence the impaired chyrography. The only available stenographer has been of most invaluable assistance, her books show she has written more than a thousand letters dictated by your president, mimeographed several hundred letters at three different times. She is a member of our organization, is perfectly familiar with the personnel of our organization, both state and general, so that your president heartily recommends her services to the coming administration.

Your president went from the last convention to Savannah, where she was the guest of honor and addressed the Savannah chapter and also of the League of Women Voters. Following your last convention additional general U. D. C. credential blanks were sent to every chapter not having replied, so as to strengthen Georgia division's vote. The response was most gratifying. Letters have been received and answered from friends of the three candidates for president general. Your president has made no pledge, waiting to find out the choice of Georgia division, and messages of condolence have been sent to our members who have known great sorrow and also some messages of congratulation.

October 4 your president addressed large meeting of Fulton chapter at Old Ladies home. Many guests, including members of home and Confederate veterans, were present. Later same afternoon we addressed special meeting of the Robert E. Lee chapter, No. 1157, at College Park.

October 5 your president met with a group of Atlanta women and gave explicit instructions as to how a chapter could be organized. They were most enthusiastic and grateful for this assistance and by the splendid cooperation given were organized in record-breaking time. President has called attention in every address to the five phases of the U. D. C. work—membership, care of Confederate veterans and Needy Confederate women, education, world war records, general welfare of the division, and emphasized southern patriotism.

Your attention is called to the date of the general U. D. C. convention, November 14-17, inclusive, at Charleston. Full information and credentials have been sent each chapter.

If our work has meant anything to the organization be assured that the influence of its ideals and the friendship of the personnel of its splendid membership will ever be a benediction in the life of your president.

Our president general, in her report thus quoted the president of the United States, and your president begs to pass the same message on to you as apropos of our sentiments. "It would be difficult for me to conceive of any one being able to administer the duties of a great office like the presidency without a belief in the guidance of a divine providence. Unless the president is sustained by an abiding faith in a divine power which is working for the good of humanity, I cannot understand how he could have the courage to attempt to meet the various problems that constantly pour in upon him."

On all official trips, when a return was possible the same day, your president has been pleased to take two to four members of her chapter with her, each of whom made short patriotic talks at the meetings; (generally) your corresponding secretary has accompanied your president on many trips, driving over five hundred miles on one trip.

In a brief resume, your president has visited 89 chapters in the two years of her administration and represented you to the best of her ability at many other organization meetings.

Many thousand miles, night and day, have been traveled in your interest and time, thought and energy given to the enlargement and progress of our beloved organization. Many invitations from chapters and other organizations had to be declined because of conflicting engagements.

Twelve editorials, concerning our work, have been written for the state and local papers. Greetings and information sent your state editor on request. Essays submitted in state and general competitive writing. Six official messages have been sent out during the past year to every chapter in the state. All inquiries pertaining to our work, as well as inquiries from members on many other topics, have been promptly answered and as understandingly as possible and in the past three weeks over 4,000 letters have been received and not one is now unanswered. And even yet your president wishes she could tell you at more length of the many lovely flowers and dainty gifts, of delightful courtesies and most gracious southern hospitality extended to your president. We are a recognized factor for good in the great "scheme of things entire" and all of the wonderful attention were honoring the great organization, your president has the honor to represent. May the wise Father increase our strength and usefulness to our state and our country.

In conclusion, your president wishes you to know she will ever hold the work of Georgia division dear to her heart. She leaves no instructions or unfinished business to her successor, but a desire always to assist when needed in the promotion of Georgia division U. D. C. She bespeaks the continued good will and cooperation of every loyal daughter.

U. D. C. Convention Headquarters.

Anticipating a large delegation who will pass through Atlanta on Sunday, November 13, the management of the Hotel Ansley has set aside a large parlor restroom for use of the U. D. C. ladies en route to Charleston, and others desiring to spend a day or so in Atlanta, either going or returning, can also obtain reservations at this hotel.

General Convention U.D.C. Meets This Week in Charleston, S. C.

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS
Georgia U. D. C. Editor

Upon the heels of the state U. D. C. convention, which was staged recently at Covington, comes the general U. D. C. convention, which convenes in Charleston, S. C., this week—that city rich in southern traditions and historic lure. One thousand women are expected to attend this convention.

This convention will be the central point of interest from the standpoint of patriotic enterprise. The election of a president general will be a feature of paramount importance. The members of the Georgia division will be interested to know that the Fulton chapter, U. D. C., has made plans to extend an invitation to the general organization to assemble in Atlanta in 1928. The city of Atlanta is cooperating in many plans to make this event the most outstanding of patriotic and municipal achievement—should the invitation be accepted when presented by Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, president of the Fulton chapter. General headquarters for the convention in Charleston will be located at the Frances-Marion hotel.

Armistice Celebration.

The day, November 11, which has immortalized the poppy as the vivid spot in our remembrance of the valor of the world war, was celebrated most fittingly on Armistice day by the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C. Patriotic services were held in the state capitol at 2:30 o'clock. The chapter presented 14 crosses of honor to Confederate veterans and 52 crosses of military services to the veterans of the world war. Mrs. Stafford Seidell presided most ably at the presentation, assisted by Miss Lillian Henderson, custodian of crosses for the Atlanta chapter. The writer felt it a distinct privilege to be present on this occasion, made sacred by the remembrance of service and recognition of true valor.

Special U. D. C. Trains To Charleston.

The Georgia railroad will operate U. D. C. special trains from Atlanta to Charleston, S. C., this week on the following schedules:

Leave Atlanta 8 p. m. (central time) Georgia railroad Sunday, November 13. Arrive Augusta 2:15 a. m. (eastern time) Georgia railroad, Monday, November 14. Leave Augusta 4:30 a. m. (eastern time) Southern railway Monday, November 14. Arrive Charleston 9:10 a. m. (eastern time) Southern railway Monday, November 14.

Other important information is issued by the Georgia railroad:

Atlanta, Ga., will be used as point of concentration for U. D. C. delegations from the following state divisions: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Mexico, Ohio, Texas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

The natural route to Charleston from the states named is through Atlanta and Augusta. Be sure and have your ticket routed via Atlanta, thence Georgia railroad to Augusta, and Southern railway to Charleston—the official route.

There will be a sufficient number from certain state divisions for special sleepers to start at some central point and operate through to Charleston. State transportation chairmen or division presidents will be instrumental in organizing special parties. Please notify the undersigned or any special Pullman party that is being arranged so that we may arrange to attach same to the U. D. C. special at Atlanta.

Chapter Reports

Quitman Chapter.

The meeting of the Quitman U. D. C. chapter Monday afternoon was full of interest and important business discussed. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Lawton Donaldson with Mrs. Harry Rives as assistant hostess, and was presided over by the president, Mrs. Hugh Oglesby. A feature of the meeting was the conferring of life memberships on four members. In the large membership chapter only four members are real "daughters" of the Confederacy, others being descendants. These are Mrs. A. E. Bowman, Mrs. S. H. Pollard, Mrs. W. W. Walker and Mrs. J. W. Haddock. The three first are widows of Confederate veterans and Mrs. Haddock is the wife of a veteran, Capt. J. W. Haddock, who is commander of the local camp, J. G. McCall. The chapter sent all the veterans to the reunion at Thomasville.

Each of the woman's organizations participating in the fair will have a committee to take charge of the Red Cross booth one day and the U. D. C. chapter appointed from their chapter to represent them Mrs. Hugh Oglesby and Mrs. J. W. Oglesby, Sr., and Mrs. C. H. Myers. The sum of $40.50 was reported from rummage sales recently held. The chapter's quota of eight volumes of "Women of the South in Wartime" was sold at this meeting.

Phil Cook Chapter.

Montezuma, Ga., November 12—At a meeting of the Phil Cook chapter, U. D. C., held at the Woman's club house the following delegates and alternates to the convention at Covington were elected: Delegates—Mrs. D. W. Easterlin and Mrs. H. A. Dover; alternates; Mrs. C. H. Richardson and Mrs. J. D. Lester. Mrs. Pringle Willingham was elected to represent the chapter at the general convention in November. In the absence of the president, Mrs. W. H. McKenzie, Mrs. C. H. Richardson presided. Features of the program were a vocal quartette by Mesdames B. R. Adams, Larry Chastain, Edna Reid and Ed Marshall and a piano solo by Miss Aline Hicks.

Francis Bartow Chapter.

The Francis S. Bartow chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, has elected as delegates to the national convention in Charleston November 14-17, Mrs. P. N. Harley, Mrs. G. P. Folks, Mrs. J. R. Whitman and Mrs. R. E. Brown. The alternates are Mrs. J. M. Fesoerman, Mrs. R. H. Husbands, Mrs. A. L. Bowden and Mrs. H. H. Daugherty.

The O. C. Horne chapter met in the chapter room Thursday. Splendid reports of the year's work were given by the various chairmen of standing committees. Miss Emma Caldwell, chairman of old soldiers' home committee, announced that Admiral Semmes' birthday, September 27, was celebrated in a unique way. In addition to the celebration in the school, which was sponsored by the chapter, the chapter sent pound cakes, cigars and money for ice cream to the old soldiers' home in Atlanta, in order that they might have a party on this date.

An outstanding work of the year has been the 100 per cent registration of the chapter in every detail. Announcement was made that the chapter goes on record as being 100 per cent in essay writing in the school.

Another feature was the presentation of a gold star medal, to be sent to Henry Kibbee of New York, who once lived in this county, and who was a member of one of Pulaski's companies, thus enrolling Mr. Kibbee in the gold star memory book at Stone Mountain.

The chapter will co-operate with the D. A. R. in sponsoring a booth at the county fair, which will be held in November.

The following officers were elected: President, Miss Lillie Martin; first vice president, Mrs. Mell Knowles; second vice president, Mrs. L. A. Jordan; third vice president, Mrs. G. R. Coley; recording secretary, Mrs. J. L. Mims; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Grace Watson; treasurer, Mrs. L. C. Ragan; registrar, Mrs. J. H. McCrary; auditor, Mrs. Ruel Anderson; historian, Miss Maude Jelks; recorder of crosses, Mrs. Alger Haskins; custodian of scrap book, Miss Claud McDonald; press reporter, Mrs. Walker Jordan.

Hartwell Chapter.

The Hartwell chapter, U. D. C., held an interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. Owen Meredith. The meeting was presided over by the new president, Mrs. Claude Herndon. Twenty-two members were present. The president gave a very interesting talk, asking the co-operation of every member.

Interesting reports were heard from each officer. The registrar reported that four papers had been returned and two sent off.

Four new members were elected to membership in the chapter. After the business session, Mrs. Guy Norris gave a sketch of Abraham Badwin and Mrs. H. W. Bingham gave a tribute to Admiral Semmes. Mrs. Claude Herndon also gave a sketch of the "Herndons."

Music Club Sponsors Forum Series And Piano Recital

The Atlanta Music club, with Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president, holds the monthly "forum series" Wednesday morning, November 16, at 11 o'clock, at the residence of Miss Ruth Hinman, 923 Piedmont avenue, N. E. Miss Hinman is leader of the program, the subject being "Mediaeval Music." The illustration of the "Development of Musical Instruments" by the means of pictures thrown on the screen will be featured. The musical program includes Gregorian chant, "Nunc Dimittis," T. G. Seidell, cantor; Mrs. H. E. Storms and Mrs. Charles Bellingrath, the choir, with Mrs. T. G. Seidell, pianist and director. A group of songs given by Miss Cara Hinman, "Summerlied" by von Reuenthal, a famous Minnesinger; "Quaint li Rosignol Jolis by de Couey, a Troubadour, and "L'Autrier par la Matinee" by Count Thibaut of Champagne, King of Navarre (1201-1253).

Guest tickets may be purchased at the door. Copies of the club newspaper will also be on sale.

Wednesday evening, 8:30 o'clock, at the city auditorium, Guy Maier and Lee Pattison will be presented in a recital of music for two pianos. These internationally famous exponents of two piano art are making their second appearance under the auspices of the Atlanta Music club. The program will include Bach's "Fantaisie and Fugue;" variations on a theme of Beethoven by Saint-Saens; Brahm's "Six Love Waltzes" arranged by Guy Maier; "Tears" by Rachmaninoff; Dohnanyi's "Valses" from "The Veil of Pierrette," arranged by Maier; "Rondo in C Major" by Chopin; "Two Etudes in G Flat," by Chopin; "Prelude" by Poulenc and "Reminiscences of 'Don Juan,'" by Liszt.

Tickets go one sale Monday morning, November 14, at Phillips and Crew Piano company.

Welfare Chairman Addresses Meeting At Woman's Club

By-products of a wrong civilization—so were characterized ill health, delinquency, the narcotic evil, and bad social and industrial conditions, by Mrs. Walter McNab Miller, chairman public welfare, General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the Atlanta Woman's club Saturday. Mrs. Miller held a conference with the public welfare chairman and the divisional chairmen of this department which was attended by women from all parts of the state, the meeting being sponsored by Mrs. H. G. Hastings, state chairman child welfare and chairman of federation of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Stating that the object of the public welfare department of the federation was to seek to induce communities to demonstrate an interest and assume responsibilities in community welfare, Mrs. Miller said the first step was to survey the needs of the community and called attention to the small number of counties in Georgia which had sufficient funds for proper handling of the problems cited.

W. E. Christie, assistant commissioner of commerce and labor, said the laws requiring employers to furnish seats for female employees and fixing the maximum weekly working hours were difficult to enforce and should be so amended as to make the violation a misdemeanor which could be handled promptly.

Mrs. Frank Woodruff stated the first industrial survey in the south was made in Atlanta in 1908, the committee appointed by Mayor Joyner to make the survey being Mesdames Woodruff, D. L. Carson, David Marx and J. N. McEachern.

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK.

Books are keys to wisdom's treasure;
Books are gates to lands of pleasure;
Books are paths that upward lead;
Books are friends. Come let us read.
—EMILIE POULSSON.

November 13 to 19 are the days set aside for the ninth annual celebration of children's book week, the motive of this is to increase an interest in the need for books and in the kind of books boys and girls are reading. This event is beginning to be an important event and of national character, with widely different organizations cooperating for its success—among them being the Boy Scouts, the Y. M. C. A., the Girl Scouts, the Parent-Teacher Federation, the Federation of Women's clubs, the public libraries, the School Librarians' association and the bookstores. In Atlanta, as elsewhere, the bookstores are much interested in the success of this celebration.

Parents should be careful in the kinds of books their children read, especially now when the market is flooded with all kinds of cheap though attractive literature. The mental health of children is one of the most important things in life. It can be readily understood why boys and girls are not eager readers of what they have to read, but they have a quenchless thirst for library books, fairy tales, tales of history and adventure, something to do books by the many popular writers of books for boys and girls.

The Newbery medal awarded yearly by the American Library association for the most distinguished American contribution to children's literature has challenged successfully the old idea that literary standards could be more lax.

The book week displays by our Atlanta book stores and Carnegie library, with its branches, will be found most attractive as the old classics and the new books for children are presented to their view.

It is to be hoped that book week will soon find a place all its own—one that will make children just as happy as Christmas or birthdays—a day to be remembered in the homes, the schools and even in the churches.

Here's to book week. May it be a success this, November, 1927!

THE BOY SCOUT YEAR BOOK

The Boy Scout year book is a yearly visitor and one all the scout boys are looking forward to from the publication of the last book to the next, which always arrives in time for a holiday gift. It is edited by Franklin K. Lane, Mathiews, chief scout librarian. Published by Appleton. Price $2.50.

James E. West, chief scout executive, says in the foreword that there are three things a perfectly healthy boy likes to do—play, eat and sleep. This statement will not be denied by the home which is fortunate enough to have a boy in it. And though nature has planned that a boy should sleep more than play by giving him so many hours for that recreation, it is hard to make him give up the sport of playing when the evening shadows come. Boys like sports—it is a real boys life, and the year book always selects stories of sports—scouting, football, basketball, tennis, skating, swimming, track, etc.

Among the interesting and instructive writers of the annual year book are Ralph Henry Barbour, Hermann Hagedorn, Harold Sherman, Joseph B. Ames and others who are well known writers. In the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt every boy had a friend and he was a great friend to the sport-loving boys. And first and last, comes the name of "Uncle" Dan Beard, who is an authority on sporting, camping, hiking and fishing and the friend of every boy.

What's in This Book?

Look over the table of contents and you will find the names of the writers most of which are quite familiar to the scout boy—and stories that are not only on real live subjects but can be read over and over again and each time there will be a new thrill.

Here's to the Boy Scouts!

BOOKS FOR GIRLS.

The Girl in White Armor. By Albert Bigelow Paine. This is the true story of Joan of Arc. It is written so that any lover of history or of heroines, especially the story of Joan of Arc, will find it of more than usual interest.

Mr. Paine is well known to boy and girl readers and a book on a historical story will not be doubted by anyone—it is all true from the first to the last page. He has made a study of her life, gone over the same ground in France and has studied her history for years.

The author has lived mostly in France since the great war and has written several biographies as well as travel books and all the children know him. This beautiful book is fully illustrated with photographs, the jacket in color being the work of Mr. Pape. (The MacMillan company, New York.)

A Yankee Girl at Hampton Roads. By Alice Turner Curtis. This book belongs to a set of books for a girl which have been published one a year for several years. It is the story of Betty Barstow from the North, and Bess Bridgman from the South, who formed a close friendship while living together at Hampton, Va., in '62. It is a splendid story for girls.

The Glory of Peggy Harrison. By Russell Gordon Carter and Harford Powel, Jr., with illustrations by Ada C. Williams. It is the story of a young girl whose courage did not forsake her when reverses came. She finally drifted to New York and in this great metropolis she learned the true meaning of success: To give service with a smile, to treat a poor patron as kindly as a rich one, to look upon your coworkers as friends, human workers with you instead of automatic working machines. By doing this she gained the love and friendship of everyone, and her dream of a happy future came true. (Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia.)

Louie Maude and Mary Ann. By Helen Sherman Griffith, who has written a series of stories about a little girl, Louie Maude, who, after having a siege of scarlet fever the doctor ordered her to the country, but among her many friends were Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley, who thought she would enjoy more a stay on a house-boat, the Mary Ann, which they had rented for the winter. She accepts their invitation and found living on a house-boat lots of fun. (Penn Publishing company.)

JUVENILE BOOKS RECEIVED.

Red Beard of Virginia. By Rupert Sargent Holland. Author of "The Rider in the Green Mask." Frontispiece in color and three other illustrations by Stafford Good.

"The south country of Devon was warm and sweet-scented as Nicholas Ross rode towards Plymouth that December day."

He was cantering along amusing himself with pleasant thoughts when a young and lovely girl came in view—it was the Lady Anne Brent—who Sir Basil Inchbald was determined to marry and he did not appreciate Nicholas' cordial recognition, so a duel was the next step, after which Nicholas found himself the victor but an exile to Virginia.

He was finally cast into a Spanish slave vessel, the horrors of which he endured until he was promoted to steward, which, after many adventures, he found himself steering on toward the new world. From this time on the story is filled with historical events, thrilling adventures and the crossing of each other's path by Nicholas and Inchbald, but the time came when a young couple wandered to an old site where the trees and flowers and the view were as beautiful as ever. "We will make it the fairest estate in the New World," said Nicholas. (J. B. Lippincott company, Philadelphia.)

Norma's Friends. A story of talents. By Marguerite Turney Geibel. Picture jacket in colors and illustrations by Florence J. Hoopes. This is a book in which the characters are all leaders who fully realize what future development means to a school girl or boy.

A young girl who enters high school early in the story is able to work wonders for some of the others by thinking of the right things at the right time. In the crowd of boys and girls there are many who have various talents, but the whole crowd all center about Norma, who has plenty of natural gifts which she devotes to the happiness of those around her and in which she finds happiness herself. This is a story that boys and girls from 12 to 18 will find specially entertaining. (Lothrop Lee & Shepard company, Boston.)

Cop—Chief of Police Dogs. By Reginald M. Cleveland. This is an interesting story about a wonderful dog—and a dog whose ancestors are not freely discussed in this day of German police dogs, collies, etc.

The author in the foreword really tells of the Shepherd dog about which he says the general public have so many mistaken notions. "Indeed, if you were to ask a half dozen people what they knew about a Shepherd dog they would tell you that they had not seen one in years. The dog which is called the "Police Dog" is the Shepherd dog, but he has not one drop of wolf blood in his veins and is one of the handsomest of any breed.

What are his accomplishments? He is a natural aristocrat. He loves boys. He is loyal to his friends. He loves his young master and disregards other ownership. He has flawless courage. He loves his home and his family, is faithful even unto the end. The author knows all about dogs and therefore tells an interesting story. (Milton Bradley Co., Springfield, Mass.)

High Jinks Ranch. By Louise Platt Hauck. While this story is woven around a girl of 17 who has been reared by her father who has been so companionable that she calls his "Billy," and her godfather, without any help and advice from a woman, it is an interesting study for boys as well as girls, therefore, it is included in the "Junior Books." The story of "Just Pat," as she is called by her friends, begins with the day of her graduation and ends as all real stories end, but after a merry house party in a cabin in the Rocky mountains. (The Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia.)

Girl Captives of the Cheyenne. By Grace E. Meredith. A true story of the capture and rescue of four pioneer girls—1874. It is revised and edited by the aunt of the oldest of the girl captives. (Gem Publishing company, Los Angeles, Calif.)

A Little Maid of Vermont. By Alice Turner, illustrated by Grace Norcross. This is the last book of the series called "The Little Maid Historical Books." Anne Sherwood was a brave little heroine of 1777, during which time she had many exciting adventures, at one time she carried important information to the American forces. (Penn Publishing Co.)

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

The Overland Trail. Another Rowntree Chronicle, with illustrations by Manning deV. Lee. It is one of the handsomest books for young people that has been received. This book belongs to a series entitled "The Ranger of the Susquehannock"; "Spanish Dollars"; "Seventy-six." It is a story of '49 and the great gold rush across the plains as told by Daniel Frost, who had his own wild part in it, to Reginald Wright Kauffman.

This is one of the handsomest books that has been published and every boy will be glad to receive it as a gift from a friend. (Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia.) $2.50.

The Luck of the Laird. By Albert Payson Terhune. Any book by this author receives a warm welcome from boys the country over, but this is an unusually interesting story of a young American who starts out to find a collie owned by the Laird Macbeath in the hinterland of the Scottish hills. The mystery of the great dog is of interest and the quest is full of thrills. (Harper Bros., New York.)

Jimmy, John and Junior. By Joseph Chase. This book belongs to a series called "The Happy House" books. After spending a wonderful summer at the seashore they return home for a winter of lots of fun and happiness, all of which is most interesting. Boys 7 to 12. (Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia.)

A Patriot Lad of Old Cape Cod. By Russell Gordon Carter. This is another book for boys—the last of the series. It is a historical story of two Cape Cod boys while the shore was being guarded from the raids of the British fleet. It tells the story of the valiant militiaman and unsung hero, Major Joseph Dimmick, of Dartmouth. From 7 to 12. (Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia.)

The Boys With the U. S. Navy. This being the new book of the U. S. "Service Series." By Dr. Francis Rolt-Wheeler, who is known and admired by all the young people the country over.

Every young American knows that the first line of defense in the United States lives and United States honor is the U. S. navy, and that its watchword is "Americanism," the meaning of which every school boy knows is "Be broad, liberal-minded, clear-headed and the first duty is to preserve peace at any cost." The naval career of a boy is not as fully appreciated by the men in all walks of business as it should be, they do not pause long enough to think of the intensity and dramatic interest of a naval career, the deeds of heroism, the wild and daring adventures which carry the navy to every part of the world. To know the navy is to feel the pride of patriotism of an American boy. (Lothrop Lee & Shepard Co.)

Westward to Paradise. By W. D. Hoffman, who tells with an active pen the story of Wain Adams, the young five-feet four-inch owner of Diamond ranch 4, and "Handsome" Hurd, a six-footer. All through the story the author is making a comparison of these two, and is showing the ins and outs of the lives of the two. It has a gripping mystery feature which will keep the reader interested until the last page. (McClure & Co., Chicago.)

The Starlit Trail. By King Phillips. Another western story in which the young hero is betrayed by his horse. It is a most interesting story and one in which a boy will get many thrills as he follows "Plunk" across the desert looking for his horse and when he arrives at Mule Town things begin to get interesting, and remain so until the last page of the story. (McClure & Co., Chicago.)

After School. A story of patriotism. By Laurie York Erskine. He has written a thrilling story of the American Revolution which has been given a modern setting. It is a story where school boys of 150 years ago play a most interesting part. Nathan Hale was the teacher of the school and resigned to join Washington's army. It is not only a story of the bravery of our forefathers but of our own generation when courage and bravery, fine manhood and real boys stand out today just as they did then. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

The Gnome King of Oz. By Ruth Plumly Thompson, founded on and continuing the famous Oz stories, by L. Frank Baum, "Royal Historian of Oz." The attractive illustrations with which all children are familiar, especially little boys, increase in number. (Reilly & Lee Co., Chicago.)

The story of Oz and adventures in the Emerald City have been the means of bringing pleasure to thousands of homes where the children are waiting for the early visit of the king of Oz and his doings. Something is told about the different characters so well remembered and there is plenty of pleasure and laughter for all. The author has dedicated the book to her little nephew, Richard Shuff Thompson, Jr.:

With lots of love and a little laugh,
For a little boy almost three and a half;
If I had a wish, I'd wish it quick,
And keep him always "Little Dick."

Teepee Tales. By El Comancho, an old Italian chief who lives in a teepee down by the beaver pond. The old chief has not "faked" or exaggerated in the telling of these most interesting nature stories, for his feet have followed all the old trails leading west of the Father of Waters, the old Mississippi.

This book the children will find a pleasure—in fact something new each day—and those who love nature studies, the birds and the animals will be able to gain a wealth of information for its purpose is not only to entertain, but to instruct. The illustrations are by Charles Livingston Bull and the author. (Reilly & Lee Co., Chicago.)

Alice and the Teenie Weenies. By William Donahey. All the little folks know that the teenie weenies are the littlest people in the world, in fact they are so small that only a few people have ever seen them, and nobody has the same confidence in them that the little folks have.

When they heard about Alice, a nice little girl who had to live in a house alone with a crabbed old woman, when all her life she had loved the good and sweet in everybody, they finally decided they would help her and this they did and for which she is the devoted friend of the teenie weenies.

Now Mr. Donahey is just as well known and loved as the littlest folks in the world for he has written stories about them for the big Sunday newspapers for a long time. There are pictures in color on every page. (Reilly & Lee Co., Chicago.)

Among the attractive books received by this department to amuse the tots are the following from the P. E. Volland company, of Joliet, Ill.:

The Jolly Kid Alphabet. By Tom Lamb, which in the most gorgeous colors teaches the tots the alphabet and natural history at the same time. For instance:

A—With his alligator
Dearly loves to play,
Every alphabet begins
With A-A-A.

It is a very unique book and one that any child of whatever age will enjoy—it is a book that no publisher but Volland would have attempted to design and publish. It will make a lovely Christmas gift for any child. Boxed and ready for mailing.

Tommy Tangle. By Sarah Addington, with illustrations by Gertrude Alice Kay. Another Christmas gift for a dear little boy or girl in which Tommy Tangle will help to have a good time. The coloring is bright and attractive. It is boxed and ready for mailing.

The Tarzan Twins. By Edgar Rice Burroughs, with illustrations by Douglas Grant. This is another attractive book for boys and girls in the most beautiful colors and illustrations that will catch the eye at once. The name of the author is the book's recommendation, and the little folks and the young folks who have been keeping up with the Tarzan country will realize what a treat is in store for them. The book is also in a red box, ready for mailing to some little friends for a gift. (P. F. Volland Co., Joliet, Ill.)

The Children's Year in a Happy Home. By Mary Howitt. Edited by Emilie Poulsson. Picture jacket and illustrations in two colors by Florence Young. This is an almost forgotten classic which has recently been made over for the children of today. It tells the little folks here in America how Herbert and Meggy played in their English home, and all children will delight in the reading of the story. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.)

The Piece Bag Book. A first book of sewing and weaving. By Anna La Tourette Blauvelt. With illustrations by Truda Dahl. You cannot start to teaching a child too early how to "make" things and "do" things for itself. (Macmillan Co., New York.)

The Uncle Wiggily Book. By Howard R. Garis, with illustrations by Lang Campbell. Uncle Wiggily is an old friend, a real rabbit gentleman, who has been a familiar figure in childrendom for many years, but Mr. Garis, the creator of this unique figure, has written a new set of stories about him that all the children will find to be of pure delight. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Lady Green Satin and Her Maid Rosette. The history of Jean Paul and his little white mice. By Baroness T. Martineau Des Chesnez, with introduction by Clara Hunt. Pictures by Winifred Bromhall. This is one of the best beloved of all French stories for children, and now that Miss Hunt has introduced it in America, the children here will soon know all about Jean Paul and his little white mice. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

The Moon's Birthday. By Dorothy Rowe, who has written some interesting stories for American children about Chinese children. In China on the moon's birthday they celebrate it with lanterns and with a little Chinese boy as leader thousands of lanterns are set afloat on the waters of the great lake. All the stories will appeal to the children. (Macmillan Co., New York.)

BIBLE BOOKS TO INTEREST CHILDREN.

Fifteen books to interest children in the Bible are recommended by "Children, the Magazine for Parents." In conjunction with an article on "The Home Altar," by Mrs. Mildred W. Stillman, the editors list the following books:

When the King Came. By George Hodges. Houghton, Mifflin. $1.75.

Ask Me a Bible Question. By George Stewart. Century. $1.50.

ANNUAL RED MEN MEETING NOV. 19

The Atlanta district school of instructions, Improved Order of Red Men, will meet at the wigwam, 160 Central avenue, S. W., Saturday, November 19, as guest of the Atlanta tribes and councils of the degree of Pocahontas. This will be the annual fall convention and according to announcement of Fletcher W. Laird, district chief of records, advance reports indicate one of the largest gatherings in the history of the organization.

Representatives will be in attendance from Augusta, Griffin, Newnan, Rome, Lindale, Canton, Buford, Lithonia and other near-by points. Prominent Red Men and ladies of the degree of Pocahontas will be among the principal speakers. The program will begin at 3 o'clock with public exercises.

Mayor Ragsdale will deliver the address of welcome and Mrs. Julia Tucker, of Lindale, will make the response. Following the public exercises business sessions will be held by the Red Men and Pocahontas, which will be featured by the election of officers for the new year. A banquet will be held in the auditorium of the wigwam at 6 o'clock. At 7 o'clock a competitive degree contest will be held with more than a dozen crack drill degree staffs competing for the prize banners.

Much interest is being manifested in the degree contest and it is expected that more than a thousand Red Men and Pocahontas will be in attendance at this convention. It is also announced that a meeting of the committee on arrangements will hold a meeting at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening at the wigwam to complete final plans of the convention.

Congestion on the Air.

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Congestion on the air has occurred only in the United States, Canada and Europe. In Argentina, Australia and Mexico the number of stations has not created a serious problem. Reasons are the availability of the full wave band and lack of broadcasting outside cities.

Service of The Constitution
PERSONNEL ASSOCIATION CITES SERIES OF ARTICLES
To Public, Schools Lauded

Appreciation of the service rendered to the public of Atlanta and especially to the public school system by The Atlanta Constitution was voted by the Personnel Association of Atlanta, at its monthly dinner meeting at Rich's tea room.

The Constitution is publishing each Sunday an article prepared by the Personnel association on some special phase of the public school system with a view to informing parents of pupils and the general public about the work the schools are doing and what they are trying to do. The series will cover in detail the general and special work of the school system and especially the definite training for business careers given boys and girls after the elementary courses have been completed.

Gordon Singleton, assistant state superintendent of education, was the principal speaker. He discussed the work the schools are doing in equipping young men and women for business careers, not only by the groundwork of a general education, but through the various vocational classes and schools.

The Personnel Association of Atlanta is composed of about 100 members, some of them employers of large numbers of young people and some of them officers and teachers in colleges and schools. The organization provides contact between the employer seeking well-trained assistants and the schools which train the young mind. George H. Phillips, of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, is president, and Miss Frances Hunter, of the Community Employment service, is secretary.

DUFFEE-FREEMAN CO. NOW HOLDING SALE

The Duffee-Freeman Furniture company, at Broad and Hunter streets, is celebrating its fifth anniversary with a big sale which will continue several days this week, the event featuring substantial reductions on what officials termed the most attractive stock of home furnishings ever offered by their concern.

The Duffee-Freeman company has been located throughout its commercial life in the quarters it now occupies. Members of the firm are Paul W. Duffee, George P. Freeman, Sr., Grady Duffee and George P. Freeman, Jr.

"We attribute our phenomenal success and growth," Grady Duffee said Saturday, "to the wholehearted confidence of the public in our policies and personnel. We endeavor to create such a favorable impression on everyone who visits our store that whether he buys or not, he will feel that he would like to trade where such a friendly atmosphere prevails and where his interests are always considered before the making of sales."

KNOW WHERE YOU ARE? TRY A RADIO SURVEY

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Before Marconi invented wireless telegraphy nobody knew, longitudinally speaking, exactly where he was.

Today, if Mr. Radio Bug in Kansas or a schoolboy in New Hampshire wants to know his longitudinal whereabouts, he can get an accurate computation from Uncle Sam's geodesists.

Longitude is a measure of time as well as distance. If a surveyor's watch is set by Greenwich time he can, with his instruments, fix his exact longitude. An error in the watch, however, will cause an error in the survey. Radio, traveling at the speed of 186,000 miles a second, gives practically instantaneous time signal anywhere in the world.

An expedition penetrated deep in the Amazon river basin along the upper tributaries of the Rio Branco. Explorers had gone there before with good chronometers, but members of this expedition carried a radio set. Every night they checked their watches on Arlington time signals and on resurveys it was found that maps made by the old methods were 10 to 15 miles off. Radio has been busy remapping the waste regions of the earth where no telegraph lines have been strung.

SUPER AIR PROGRAMS MONTHLY SUGGESTED

Cincinnati, Ohio, November 12.—(Special.)—A super-radio program comparable in public interest to the Tunney-Dempsey fight broadcast may be presented every month if a suggestion made by Powel Crosley, Jr., president of the Crosley Radio corporation, Cincinnati, in an address at Louisville, Ky., is carried out.

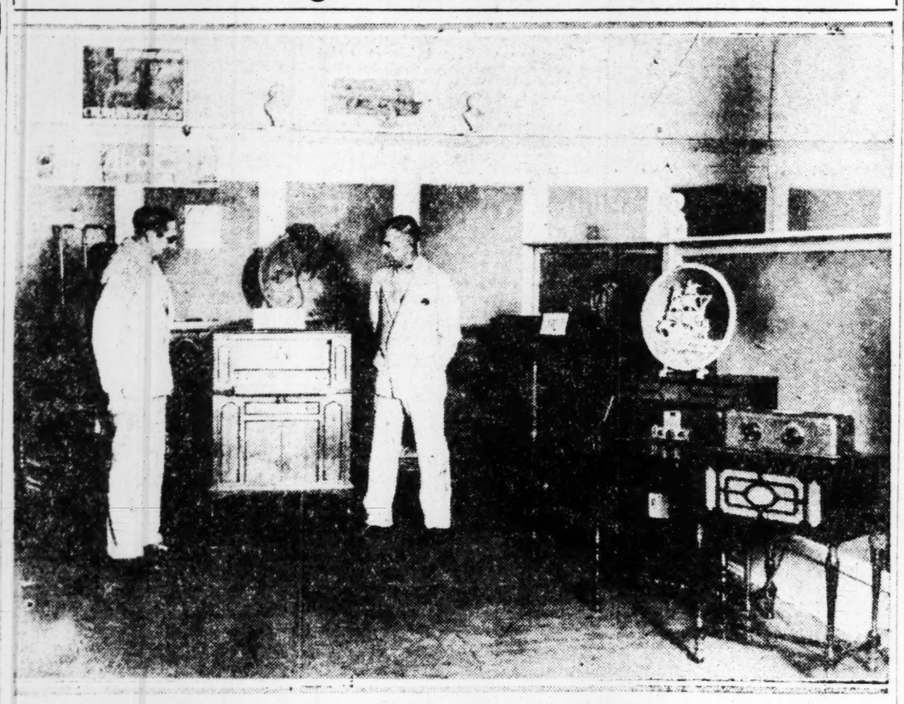

To a radio show banquet audience at the Kentucky hotel, Mr. Crosley pointed out that while it will not be possible to stage a championship fight very often, there are many possibilities in the entertainment field for programs that would capture the enthusiasm of the entire country. For example, there might be an evening with our foremost comedians, featuring such celebrities as Will Rogers, Al Jolson, Moran and Mack of "Two Blacks Crows" fame and other national favorites.

It is Mr. Crosley's suggestion that such programs be "sponsored by the radio industry. Instead of waiting for a Tex Rickard or other promoter to stage an event of national importance, radio leaders themselves should take the initiative in providing programs capable of enlisting nation-wide interest, he feels.

"It is well known that events such as a heavyweight championship fight are outstanding factors in creating and maintaining enthusiasm for radio and in stimulating the demand for receiving sets, he stated. "Receiving set owners, no less than the manufacturers, stand to benefit from increased interest in radio, because the quantity and quality of broadcast programs is sure to improve as the radio audience grows in numbers. On the other hand, as broadcast programs increase in attractiveness, the demand for receiving sets will be augmented. It works both ways. The great broadcasting stations of today offer facilities to enable the whole nation to listen in on a program of outstanding importance, and radio manufacturers should take full advantage of those facilities, for our own good and for the general advancement of radio.

Mr. Crosley flew to Louisville from Cincinnati in a Ryan brougham, landing safely in the teeth of a severe storm.

New Radio Quarters at Ludden & Bates

The radio department at the Ludden & Bates store has grown so rapidly it was found necessary to remodel to take care of the customers' needs. A. S. Calley, manager of the Ludden & Bates Music House, and Walter E. Dobbins, who with James L. Malden, Jr., man the radio department. They are shown in the photograph above. (Photo by Cornett.)

Walter E. Dobbins, one of Atlanta's pioneer radio men, has been recruited by the radio department of Ludden & Bates Piano company, 46 Pryor street, N. E., according to an announcement issued by A. S. Calley, manager of the store.

Mr. Dobbins, who was one of the first amateur broadcasters in the south, managed the radio department at a prominent Atlanta store for two years or more prior to his connection with Ludden & Bates.

Mr. Calley, who took charge of the store several months ago, was quick to see the possibilities in the development of the radio department at Ludden & Bates. He immediately reorganized the working plan and added Bremer-Tully and Crosley, two strong radio lines, to the merchandise being carried.

That his work in the radio field has proven successful is attested by the enlarged quarters it was found necessary to provide in the Ludden & Bates store.

According to Mr. Calley, Mr. Dobbins will be assisted in his work by James L. Malden, Jr., who for several months past has had charge of the radio service department.

POLITICAL LOOPHOLE SEEN IN RADIO LAW

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Political observers and radio men, who are speculating on the important part radio will play in the 1928 campaign, have discovered what they believe to be a loophole in the radio law.

Section 18 of the radio act of 1927, which deals with the use of broadcasting stations by candidates for political office, reads as follows:

"If any licensee shall permit any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station, he shall afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting stations, and the licensing authority shall make rules and regulations to carry this provision into effect; provided, that such licensee shall have no power of censorship over the material broadcast under the provisions of this paragraph. No obligation is hereby imposed upon any licensee to allow the use of its station by any such candidate."

It is pointed out that there is no specific mention made of broadcasting speeches made by persons who support a particular candidate. Because of this omission the conclusion is drawn that one political party or group could obtain, by purchase or otherwise, the use of a station to the exclusion of the opposing party.

The federal radio commission has no power to exercise censorship, and the station owners have been given broad powers. It is felt, however, that the broadcasters will hesitate before allowing any monopolistic use of their stations, which might result in their losing the good will of the public.

Radio Challenges Educators, Says "Farmer" Commissioner

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Sam Pickard, "farmer" representative on the federal radio commission, believes the radio field challanges the attention of America's leading educators.

"The engineering brotherhood has provided the facilities—a perfect made-to-order set-up for enlightening the world," says Mr. Pickard. "Whether or not its utility aspects remain only superficially touched for another year or for a decade depends upon the enterprise and ingenuity of leaders in the field of education.

"Many of the well meaning attempts to corral large groups of listeners to academic classroom lectures have been decided failures. Perhaps the principal reason is this: A foreground of radio program requires a dozen-fold greater skill and technique to execute than does an entertainment or background program.

"Graphic word pictures, stimulating thought on subjects of general current interest, and pertinent information sufficently dramatized, will attract and compel attention." Mr. Pickard believes.

"Behind such a program, however, there must be the combined skill of the writer, the dramatist and the actor. The attentive ear of the discriminating listener cannot be held by the celebrated author who may lack the actor's good quality voice and his skill in expression.

SAM PICKARD.

"Most of the tricks of the trade are yet to be learned. A few broadcasters are making excellent progress. Three large cities are experimenting with radio in the schools. Many agricultural colleges are dispensing farm information. The utility of radio is gradually making itself felt. Whether educators avail themselves of its possibilities for extending their information or permit the entertainment phase to dominate, as in motion picture development, is their moral obligation. Radio has flung its challenge to the educators of America."

COMPLETE LICENSE ON RADIO PATENTS ISSUED BREGE CO.

New York, November 12.—(Special.)—A complete license under the patents owned by Hazeltine and Latour corporations covering radio receiving apparatus has been issued to A. H. Grebe & Co., Inc., of Richmond Hill, N. Y., one of the oldest radio receiving manufacturers in the country. Coincident with the signing of this license agreement all litigation between the companies was terminated.

A statement issued by an official of the Hazeltine corporation points out that "the filing of papers in the federal district court terminating the litigation gave rise to some misunderstandings with respect to the status of the Grebe company. This company is under no injunction and may make full use of all of the patents owned by the Hazeltine and Latour corporations covering radio receiving apparatus."

Great Trinity Church Organ Recital To Be Given Tonight

After six weeks silence the great organ of Trinity M. E. church will again peal forth its wonderful tones in a reopening recital to be given tonight by Dr. Ben J. Potter, of the Royal College of Organists, London.

The organ is considered the finest church instrument in the south and as such the Austin Organ company, builder, has taken special interest in the complete renovation and overhauling of it.

Experienced men from their factory have worked on this instrument for the past six weeks, thoroughly cleaning, overhauling and adding new parts and it is now completely modernized and in perfect condition. This instrument consists of the great organ, a separate echo organ, chimes, harp, etc., and contains about one hundred stops, couplers and combinations. It is noted not only for its size but for the beauty and endless variety of its tone. No expense of effort has been spared to bring the organ up to date so that it may retain its reputation in musical circles.

Dr. Potter recently returned to Trinity church from Grove Park Inn and the Vanderbilt church, Asheville, N. C. As an organist he is considered one of the most accomplished in the country and certainly has no peer in the south. This occasion will be an opportunity for the people of Atlanta to again hear this well-known organist to advantage.

The recital will include such numbers as Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance," Bach's great "Dorian Toccata and Fugue," Sullivan's famous "The Last Chord," and Dvorak's celebrated "Largo" from "The New World Symphony."

The recital will take the place of the regular evening service at 7:30 o'clock and a cordial invitation is given to the public to attend.

DEAN TO LECTURE ON PASSION PLAY

The Very Rev. Thomas H. Johnston, D. D., dean of St. Philip's cathedral, on Monday, November 21, will deliver his famous lecture on the passion play at Oberammergau in the Woman's clubhouse of College Park. This lecture is based on a personal study and observation of the play itself. On one of his European trips, the lecturer made a special journey to witness and take in every feature and detail of the passion play.

DEAN THOMAS H. JOHNSTON.

The location of the drama is a small village in upper Batavia of only some 1,400 inhabitants composed mostly of carvers in wood and stone. In the year 1634 the village was visited by a plague and in fulfillment of a vow made at that time, the play is enacted every ten years. Visitors come from all parts of the world and many remain during the entire performance which lasts through many day-light hours.

The dean is a pleasing and forcible talker, having a wonderful command of descriptive words, coupled with wit and humor. He comes under the auspicies of St. John's church, College Park, of which the Rev. Horace R. Chase is rector. A nominal admission charge is made of 50 cents. In the present day when so much discussion is made of the sacrifice and sufferings of the Son of God, this opportunity to witness their interpretation by a band of simple Batavians should not be overlooked.

OPERA STAR OF NBC

FRANCES PAPERTE,

Mezzo soprano of the National Light Opera group of the National Broadcasting company. Miss Paperte made her debut when she was 19 with the Chicago Civic Opera company. Mary Garden, then managing director of the company, commended Miss Paperte at the close of her first season in a letter which concluded: "Your rich mezzo voice, your splendid musicianship, your fine interpretive intelligence, your charming personality and your histrionic skill have all made you a most valuable asset to my organization."

Research on Beacon.

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Research is being conducted on the radio directive beacon for airplanes by the bureau of standards at Bellefonte, Md. Experimental flights are being conducted there and at College Park. Laboratory work has been started towards refining several elements of the equipment used in beacon flights in order to adapt the beacon further to commercial application.

MAKES RADIO STATIC UNHEARD

A simple, amazing device has been invented by C. H. Geppert, M-531 Hewitt Bldg., Des Moines, Ia., which filters 50 to 90 per cent of static in radio receiving sets. Not only that, but when static is not bad, you can increase your volume tremendously, bring in more distant stations, save 20 to 40 per cent on batteries, eliminate local stations from running in, give your set at least one more stage of radio reception and greater selectivity. Works on all radios; can be attached instantly by anyone without change to set. Mr. Geppert wants agents and is willing to send a no-cost sample. Write him today.—(adv.)

CHURCH BROADCASTS RAISE WAVE PROBLEM

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—The federal radio commission has received convincing evidence of the rapid growth of stations broadcasting religious teachings.

Reduction of the power of station WOQ, operated by the United School of Christianity at Kansas City, and of the wave lengths of stations WBBR, New York, and WORD, Batavia, Ill., was followed by a deluge of complaints. The two latter stations are operated by the People's Pulpit association.

Other stations in this class are WBKW, Buffalo, operated by the Churchill Evangelistic association; WHAP, New York, operated by the Jesuits, and KLDS, Independence, Mo., operated by the Church of the Latter Day Saints.

A suggested solution of the problem is that the commission set aside special channels for the use of religious broadcasting. Since these stations generally broadcast over only a few periods in the week, it is believed that a satisfactory arrangement could thus be made.

VARIETY PROGRAMS FOR SEARS-ROEBUCK

Paul and John, "the two disciples of harmony;" Mrs. W. A. Wallace, pianist; the Sears-Roebuck players, Harry J. Pomar, directing, and Lillian McDonald Bray, soprano, will be radio artists on WSB Wednesday night from 7 to 8 o'clock when the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural foundation presents a variety program composed of four radio skits. These novel radio productions are entitled: "Happiness," "Fashion Show," "Memories of Victor Herbert" and "That Old Gang of Mine." Preceding the hour's program, the foundation will sponsor a half-hour dinner concert.

Both Mr. Pomar and Mrs. Bray were prominently identified with the production of "The Only Girl," presented Saturday night by the Brenau College Endowment fund. Mrs. Bray played one of the principal feminine roles, while Mr. Pomar directed the orchestra for the musical play.

Variety will also feature the dinnerbell programs from the Sears-Roebuck tower studio three noons of the week. Paul and John, harmony team; Dewey Burnet, fiddler, and W. E. Jordan, "the old melody man;" Nell and Neva Long, in vocal duets, and Ralph Richardson, baritone, will be heard in "mid-week hymn time," a new Wednesday noon period. Harry Pomar with his Sears-Roebuck Players will appear in program also.

Professor Alex Smart, president of the Georgia Old-Time Fiddlers' association, is scheduled to act as master of ceremonies on Friday noon when an old-time fiddlers' convention will be reproduced. Paul Crutchfield, tenor, with Mrs. W. A. Wallace, are singers of the hour. Housekeepers' chats by Mrs. R. F. Whelchel will be daily features at 10:05 in the morning.

Double Shielding New Development By S-C Engineers

Shielding has undergone a gradual process of development since the early days of the regenerative receiver, when it was used merely for the prevention of body capacity effects. Up to this fall total shielding has represented the highest culmination of this art. This type of shielding is due in great part to engineers of the Stromberg-Carlson company, who, in conjunction with those of the Hazeltine corporation, worked for many months in producing a really efficient method of total shielding.

This year Stromberg-Carlson engineers announce they have added to their line what is known as the No. 744 combination instrument, which provides for the reproduction of either radio or phonograph music. The radio receiver in this instrument utilizes four stages of tuned radio frequency amplification. Three stages were the most that have been used in Stromberg-Carlson receivers up to this time, and the total shielding of the radio frequency stages was all sufficient to produce stability. Through the experimentation preceding the placing of this receiver on the mrket, engineers soon discovered that total shielding was not sufficient to retain the tremendously strong electro-magnetic fields within each stage. This has brought about another purely Stromberg-Carlson development known as double shielding.

Double shielding is exactly what its name implies. The electromagnetic fields which emanate about east stage of radio frequency amplification are double shielded. When only three stages were used the electro-magnetic field set up within the walls of the total shielding what are known as eddy currents. The strength of these fields was not sufficient, however, to reach from one stage to the other. They were retained within the shield of the stage in which they originated. In the case of four stages, the electromagnetic fields are much stronger and unless double shielding is employed, permeate through the shields of each stage to the next stage, producing great instability. Stromberg-Carlson engineers have eliminated this difficulty by first shielding the coil and then by totally shielding the entire stage.

Want Helpful Programs.

Washington, November 12.—(AP)—Farmers want radio programs that will help solve their specific problems. This is indicated from letters received by the radio service of the department of agriculture. The farmers, of course, enjoy the entertainment programs, but most of those who write the department express eagerness for substantial information.

VITAL DETAILS OF MODEL HOME BEING NOW INSTALLED

Leading Local Concerns Furnish All Conveniences

Latest Improvements in Furnace, Electrical Wiring, Bathroom Fixtures, Scagliola Marble, To Be Used in Making Perfect Example of Southern Home.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

The Constitution's second model home, now under construction in Haynes Manor, is rapidly shaping up into a real house. Today you can go out there and see it as it will be complete, in so far as the rooms and general design are concerned. You can appreciate the conveniences and beauties of the arrangement, as planned and executed by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company, the builders, and Keller F. Melton, the architectural draughtsman and construction expert.

And, of particular interest to the home builder, you can see the important vitals of the house being put in place, the heating system, the electrical wiring, the plumbing and the other service essentials which will be largely hidden from view when the final decoration touches are done.

There are, for instance, the piping for the furnace, from the Moncrief Furnace company; the electrical wiring, being done by R. A. Bell, manager of the electrical department of the Womack Lime and Cement company; the connections for the bathroom fixtures, to be furnished by the Lowry company, and the tiling in the bathrooms and mantel in the living room, created especially for the house by the Scagliola and Stucco company—all Atlanta concerns.

In these details, as in the other materials, the builders are holding fast to the plan to use to as great an extent as possible only southern materials of nationally recognized excellence, to provide a southern home built of the finest of southern materials, arranged ideally for southern climate.

Beautiful Scagliola.

Nothing more beautiful in home adornment, nothing more lasting in permanent service, for instance, can be found than the scagliola marble which is to be used for the living room mantel and the bathrooms. Scagliola is an Italian process, handed down from master workman to apprentice for generations. It was used, history discloses, in the palace of Nero Caesar and it is used today in the most beautiful homes and edifices in America.

The scagliola marble mantelpiece in this house will be of soft grey tones, made to blend with the decorative scheme of the living room, where it will form the central motif for the entire room.

Tinted Bathroom Fixtures.

In the bathroom, scagliola will be used for the walls, in each case to match the bathroom fixtures in color. And thereby hangs another tale.

The newest idea in bathroom fixtures is the tinted ware, for bathroom, toilet stand, etc. This has recently been put on the market by the famous house of Kohler of Kohler, manufacturers of fine bathroom ware. It is handled exclusively in Atlanta by the Lowry company and, today, in the window of their display rooms on South Forsyth street, may be seen the set, in spring green, that is to be used in The Constitution model home, in the bathroom adjoining the master's bedroom.

In the second bathroom fixtures of autumn brown tint will be used. In both the tubs are of the Viceroy built-in type, while the Columbia pedestal lavatories are being used.

And in each case, the scagliola marble walls will be in colors to blend with these.

Perfect Heating System.

The furnace is the latest design made by the Moncrief company. You will notice, as you enter the house, that the hot air ducts are so arranged up the center of the house as to conserve the heat and make it easy as possible to spread the necessary warmth through every room. You will notice also that the openings in each room are in the wainscoting, instead of in the floor, the old-fashioned way. This makes them less obstructive, particularly when painted to match the wall decorations as these will be—and also removes the temptation to the maid to indulge in the bad habit of sweeping dust and trash down them as all maids will do, you know.

If you follow your interest in the furnace to the basement, as you should, you will discover that it is made of boiler plate steel, ribbed and welded. It is impossible for smoke and gases to get into the house from a furnace of this construction. There is an automatic humidifier attached which assures the proper moisture content in the air at all times, an important health consideration. The furnace has been designed to properly fit the size of the house, so that it may be heated without too frequent firing. Twice a day, at the utmost, is all the attention it will require.

Incidentally, it is equipped, as installed, to burn coal, but if the future owner of the home should ever prefer oil fuel, it is so arranged that the necessary changes can be made without difficulty and with not more than two hours' work for an average workman.

In passing, it should be noted that not all the openings in the rooms are to send out heat. Some of them are cold air grilles which suck the cooler air from the floor of each room, carry it back to the furnace for heating and redistribution. This assures even temperature from floor to ceiling and warm floors for bare feet in winter time, or for children to crawl around.

Faultless Wiring.

Mr. Bell, the Womack company's electrical expert, has been busy this week putting in his wiring, making his connections and providing for the numerous outlets which are provided in every room.

Extra improvements in this detail in this house include metal cable conduits throughout, underground wiring from house to garage and a "master switch," just at the head of the owner's bed, by which, in case of alarm at night—burglar scare or fire—every light in the house and grounds can be turned on at one motion.

There are as many outlets, some for wall brackets, some for base outlets, as the heart of any housekeeper could desire. There isn't an electrical home convenience that she need do without for lack of connecting socket. There isn't a closet without its light.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—The Aviation league, of Manitoba, for the purpose of advancing aeronautics in western Canada, has been formed by a number of Winnipeg's leading citizens. The move was strongly recommended by Major General J. H. MacBrien, former chief of staff of the Canadian [illegible] forces, who says the C. is cursed by temperament to air travel.

You wonder sometimes why such difference in the appearance of newly painted houses. Perhaps if you could compare the per gallon cost of the paints used on separate jobs you would find the answer.

Nowhere is quality more pronounced, or the absence of it more evident, than is reflected in the varying grades of paint.

Exterior of the Model Home as It Is Today

The Constitution's second "Model Home," now under construction in Haynes Manor, as it appears today, ready for the brick and tile layers to do their work. Window sash and wood trim are being fast put in place by the Willingham Titt Lumber company; the Moncrief Furnace company is installing the air ducts for the heating system; the Womack Lime & Cement company's electrical expert is placing his wiring and outlets; the plumbing is being installed ready for the beautiful bathroom fixtures furnished by the Lowry company, while preparations are being made for the special Scagliola marble to be used on the bathroom floors and living room mantel. Work of laying the brick, from Campbell Coal company, and the tile from B. Mifflin Hood company, will begin this week.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

The exterior Portland cement stucco walls of this Spanish house, plan No. 308-BTH, may be textured and colored to suit. Complete blueprints and specifications for this plan, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost.

Fire-Safe Spanish Dwelling Has Six Comfortable Rooms

Stucco on Back-Plastered Metal Lath, Red Tile Roof and Central Stairway Give Durable and Economical Construction.

BY L. PORTER MOORE,
President Home Owners' Institute, Inc.

The use of a Spanish type garden wall adds considerably to the size and architectural effect of the Spanish house which we are featuring as today's small home plan, No. 308-BTH. Louis Justement designed this house, which contains six rooms and bath.

In combination with the walk of colored slate flagstones and the lily pool, the arches in the porch construction, balances by others in the wall, give a pleasing effect to the exterior. The gentle pitch of the roof and the shadows cast by the rounded red tiles form other pleasing features of the exterior.

Outside walls are of stucco on back-plastered metal lath, an enduring type of fire-safe construction possessing real insulating value and tending to make the house both economical and comfortable. The stucco may be tinted and textured to suit.

The room arrangement of this house is well planned. The stairway is in the center. The living room, with an open fireplace, is of good size. Behind and to the left of the living room is the dining room. At the rear of the house is a large open porch.

Upstairs there are three sleeping rooms, hall with linen closet and bath. With windows on four sides of the house, good second-floor ventilation is assured. The rooms throughout the house have been planned so as to provide space for the larger pieces of furniture.

The house contains 17,560 cubic feet. According to the estimates of Arthur Bates Lincoln, consulting architect of Home Owners institute, it may be built in the vicinity of New York city for about $10,000. Outline of recommended specifications follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be concrete block or poured concrete made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with waterproofing compound. Chimney of common brick, all flues lined. Fireplace of selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door in cellar.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage or trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine. White pine for exterior mill work and interior trim; oak floors. Steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all finishing hardware for doors and windows, for closets and casework. The contractor will furnish a correct list of hardware and is to put it on in a careful, workmanlike manner. All hardware on exterior openings to be of brass or bronze.

Stucco Work—All exterior walls finished with three coats of Portland cement stucco on metal lath. Finish coat colored and textured as directed.

Casement Windows—Steel or wood casement windows may be used at owner's option.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or even wood lath. We suggest you obtain alternate bids on metal lath and wood lath. Insulating lumber or plaster board may be used if desired by owner.

Metal Work—Gutters, leaders, downspouts and flashing to be 16-ounce copper or No. 11 gauge zinc.

Roofing—Roof of clay or cement tile, to be in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electrical wiring from meter to all outlets, including all panel boards, junction boxes and all other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Plumbing—A complete system and fixtures ready to use shall be provided as shown on plans and in accordance with local regulations. Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hot water heater. If sewer connections are not available, use of reinforced concrete septic tank is recommended.

Tile Work—Tile work and wainscot on bathroom with built-in china accessories.

Heating—Steam, hot air or hot water boiler, coil, oil or gas fired.

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control or boiler or furnace, and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred), used as plaster base on second-floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

Face Brick Best For Modern Home, Expert Explains

"The use of face brick in building modern homes, as well as great business structures, where beauty is a factor to be considered, is becoming almost universal," said R. R. Johnson, president of the Campbell Coal company, which handles several lines of face brick assembled from various manufacturers.

"No other material lends itself so readily to the visions of the man or woman who is planning with pencil and paper a cozy bungalow or a costly mansion. Nothing else is so well adapted to carrying out the idea of the architect, who can see far ahead and who realizes the importance of permanence, endurance, as well as the pleasing lines and the convenience of detail.

"For face brick provide something found in no other material within reach of most home builders. That is color and texture.

"Manufacturers in different parts of the country, many of them in the south, have learned to take advantage of the wide variety of colors in the natural clays and to blend these colors into beautiful effects. The planner of a home may choose the lightest of creams, the darkest of reds, or almost any tint that fancy may desire, and a home may be planned with a variety of tints blending into a harmonious whole. There is no limit to the effects that can be produced. Face brick may be either smooth in finish, almost like a tile, or of various rough textures.

"The careful builder, too, must think of future costs, and the wall of face brick requires no paint or other upkeep. It is not affected by weather or time, and it even grows in beauty as it becomes mellowed by age. Even a hurried glance through the new subdivisions of Atlanta will show that the day of the wooden home is passing, and that face brick, beautiful and enduring, is the building material of today."

STATESBORO PLANS FOR SAVANNAH PARTY

Statesboro, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—Some 50 or 60 business men of Savannah are expected to be guests of Statesboro next Wednesday night, when they make their first stop-over in a three-day tour of south Georgia. The visitors are members of the Savannah Motor club and have planned this trip for the purpose of becoming better acquainted with this section of the state. The party is expected to arrive here, about 6:30 o'clock, coming from Metter. With the County Chamber of Commerce as host, the party will be served supper at the Georgia Normal college.

Some Reasons Why Model Home No. 2 Will Set a New Record For Beauty and Convenience

First—Ideal interior design, by Keller F. Melton, architectural draughtsman and construction expert of the Atlanta Realty and Construction company, builders of the home.

Second—Finest quality Colonial brick from the Corbin Brick company, Kentucky, furnished by the R. O. Campbell Coal company.

Third—The most beautiful tile manufactured by the B. Mifflin Hood company for roof, porches, walks and driveways.

Fourth—Interior lumber and mill work the best product of the Willingham Titt Lumber company.

Fifth—Scagliola marble mantels and bathrooms by the Scagliola and Stucco company.

Sixth—Steel hot air furnace by the Moncrief Furnace company.

Seventh—Bathroom fixtures of marked beauty by the Lowry company.

From time to time on this page during the construction of Model Home No. 2 The Constitution will present interviews of unusual interest from heads of these Atlanta concerns, telling just why it is best and most economical to put into your new home only standard goods.

Watch for these interviews. They will be of genuine interest whether or not you are contemplating building.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

OTIS COMPLETES ARCADE ADDITIONS

Completion of 80 new offices in the Peachtree Arcade and the names of several new tenants were announced Saturday by R. R. Otis, manager of the property.

The new offices are on the third and fourth floors and represent renovations and changes that have been under way for several months.

These offices now give the Arcade office, store and garage space, the garage in the basement, with its floor level on the railroad, having been in operation for some time.

Several new tenants have taken leases on the new offices. Among them are the following:

Edison & Brothers (the Chandler shoe stores).

The Southeastern Drug Journal, which publishes several trade papers and has opened a branch of its Jacksonville, Fla., office here. J. Ben Wand is president of the company.

The Egre Register company; John S. Owens, loans and investments; the Old Dutch Carbon company, Miss Cora I. Thomas and Dr. Fred T. Mills.

The Arcade management is now negotiating with several out-of-town concerns which have been attracted to Atlanta by its municipal advertising campaign.

CELOTEX COMPANY HAS OFFICES HERE

The Celotex company, largest manufacturer of insulating lumber in the world, has leased quarters at 252 Spring street for its southeastern office, it was announced Saturday by the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

The southeastern office will cover the states of Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina and eastern Tennessee. W. G. Jones, Jr., will be manager of this new zone headquarters for this section.

Mr. Jones stated that the determination of his company to come to Atlanta is based on the fact that this city is the center of the southern agricultural world, with many leading engineers of the country located here, and also on account of the reputation of the contracting firms who operate in Atlanta.

The main uses of Celotex are in building construction, in residences, duplex houses and apartments. Celotex is used as sheathing and a plaster base and for floor deadening and roof insulation.

Georgia Capitol Tragedy in Five Acts Is Staged

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Here's the tragedy of state capitol life in Atlanta, entitled "The Falling Skirt, or Why the Boss Skidood."

Prologue.

Girls in mail order division of automobile license department busy at work mailing out license tags. Dr. Royal J. Miller, boss of division, enters and takes seat at his desk.

Act I.

Telephone bell rings. All girls look up expectantly. "Doc" Miller looks over inquiringly.

Act II.

Pretty girl is called to answer telephone. She jumps up hastily. Other girls notice her skirt flapping around the waist, dangerously loose. "Doc" Miller looks on.

Act III.

Pretty girl runs and grabs up telephone. As she stands up to speak her skirt drops absolutely and teetotally off. Climax.

Act IV.

"Doc" Miller discreetly leaves office.

Act V.

Other girls jump up, crowd around pretty girl, escort her from room until proper repairs are made.

Inspector Explains Rule On Salesmen's Commission

BY J. B. EVERETT
Inspector, Georgia Real Estate Commission.

For the fifth of my articles touching upon the act of 1925 Georgia legislature, creating the Georgia real esta commission and amendments thereto, I have selected the title" Real Estate Salesmen."

A "real estate salesman" means a person employed by a licensed real estate broker to sell or offer for sale, to buy or offer to buy, to negotiate the purchase, sale or exchange of real estate, or to lease, rent, or offer to lease, rent or place for rent any real estate for or on behalf of such real estate broker.

To be a real estate salesman, the first fundamental requisite is to obtain the proper license.

The selling of real estate is not different from the selling of any other commodity, but in order for the salesman to be successful he must believe in himself and be able to make his clients see the thing in the light in which he sees it, therefore successful selling is a combination of knowing, feeling, telling and making the other fellow want a thing. A salesman must know the property he offers for sale and to know it he must study it from every angle in order to be prepared to tell true facts to his prospect. A true real estate salesman should never misrepresent facts to his prospect just in order to put the deal over. The best advertisement in the world for any real estate salesman is a satisfied client. It gets him not only a good name, but other prospects; in other words, it is an endless chain. Be able to represent and tell your story to your prospect so as to secure not only his attention but his confidence in you and always tell the truth even if it means your personal loss. Your duty requires you to be loyal to yourself, to your broker, and last but not least to your client. A good salesman must always act for both parties, the seller and the buyer. No sale is a good sale unless both parties profit thereby.

Cites Law.

At this time I wish to acquaint real estate salesmen with the following facts, as several cases have been brought to my attention where more than one salesman was involved and the question arises as to who is entitled to the commission. These are legal citations as quoted by Fred L. Gross:

Where there are two salesmen, the one who first calls the customer's attention to the property is not necessarily entitled to the commission. If the other salesman in good faith and without collusion consummates the sale he is entitled to the commission. Unless he specially agrees not to do so, an owner may employ two or more salesmen. In such case it is the salesman who is the efficient cause of the sale who is entitled to the commission, and this right is not affected by the fact that such salesman sells to one whose attention to the property had before been called by another salesman. It is not the salesman who first speaks of the property, but he who is the procuring cause of the sale, he be the first or the second to engage the attention of the purchaser.

Where two salesmen are apparently working on the same purchaser, the one who first brings the purchaser up to the terms of the employer is entitled to the commission.

A real estate salesman is entitled to his commission when he procures a contract of sale or produces a purchaser, ready, willing and able to purchase on his principal's terms. This is the rule which is supported by the weight of judicial opinion.

OSANN COMPANY OPENS OFFICES FOR SOUTH HERE

Frederick Osann company of New York city, manufacturer of sewing machines and equipment for garment manufacturers, has opened southeastern headquarters at 231 Healey building with J. M. Jones in charge, it was announced by the industrial bureau Saturday.

The Atlanta office has charge of the states of Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Florida and South Carolina, and is establishing to better serve the garment industry of this section.

B. M. Grant Co. DepartmentHead Announces Sales

Sale of one-half block interest in Collins Construction company, owners of Blue Rock Heights Park, to Lorenz Neuhoff, president of White Provision company, for E. S. Street, was announced Saturday by John B. Royer, manager of the residential sales department, B. M. Grant company, agents in the transaction. The property is valued at $120,000 and brings the total recent sales handled through Mr. Royer's department up to $192,950.

Featuring the Collins Construction company deal is the announcement of reorganization of the company and formulation of plans for a sales campaign on the subdivision. The property has been renamed Westover. It comprises 100 acres, one-third of which is already paved and has all other preliminary improvements, except opening of water supply, which is now in process of being laid.

New officers in charge of the subdivision are L. Neuhoff, president; E. S. Street, vice president, and John B. Royer, secretary and treasurer. Increased activity has already been noted in the subdivision, seven lots having been sold during the past 30 days, five of which were resales. Indications are that there will be considerable residential construction on the property in spring. Westover is among the city's beautiful subdivisions on the north side; it adjoins Haynes Manor on the north and is just west of Habersham road.

Other sales listed by Mr. Royer, aggregating $132,950, follow:

Handled by Walter A. Addy, Jr.: Dwelling at 36 McKinley road for the Putman Construction company, to E. R. Langley; lot on McKinley road for same owners to R. E. Jones; dwelling at 42 McKinley road for same owners, to Joe Ilms; dwelling on Springlake drive for Mrs. Z. R. Griffith, to John O. Owens.

Handled by Pinkney Hall: Property at 95 Walker street, for J. M. DeFour, to W. N. Michell; two brick stores on Peachtree road, for A. C. Minhinett, to J. C. Rogers; home on the corner of Forrest avenue and Glen Iris drive, for Gardner estate, to Scott Hudson.

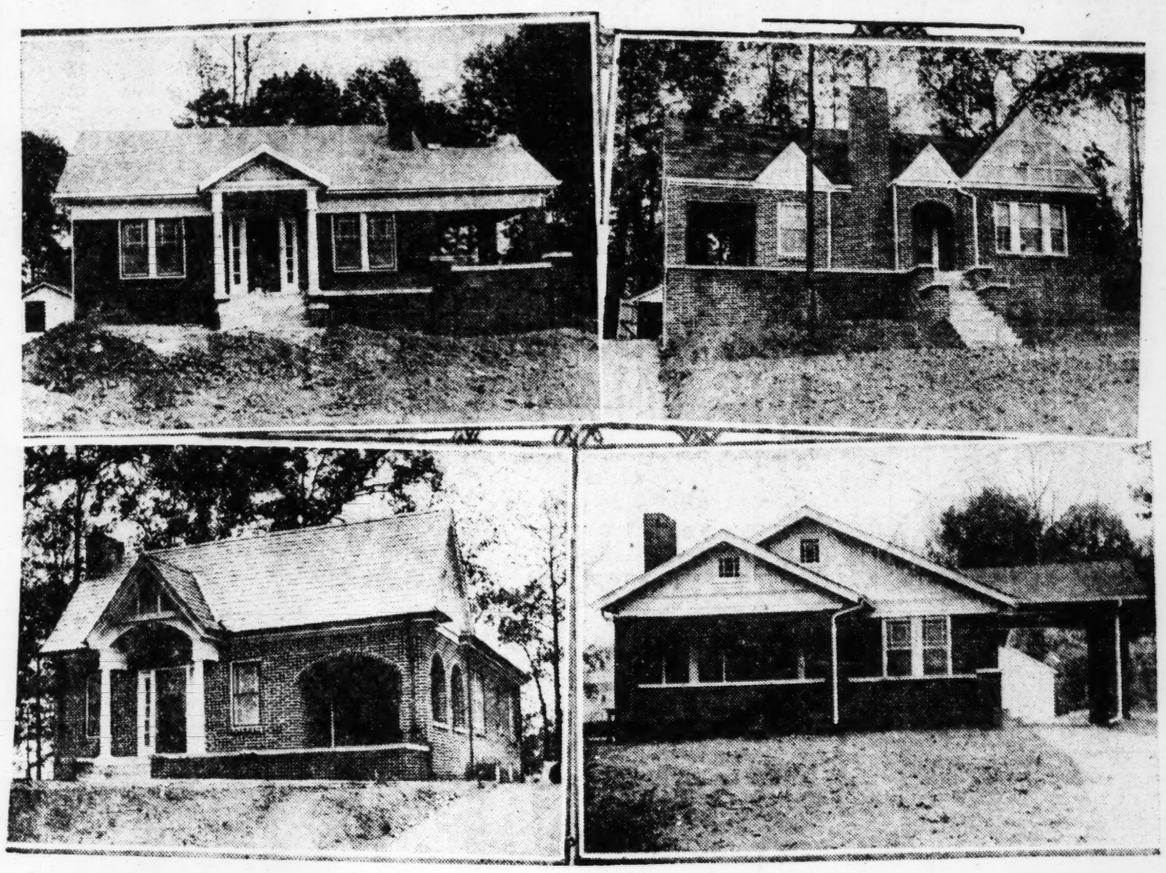

JOHN B. ROYER.

Handled by John B. Royer: Lot in Brookhaven Estates, for John D. Little, to Dr. G. Pope Huguley; 15 acres and dwelling on Howell Mill road, for Mrs. June Courtney, to James B. Scales, and resale of same property for Mr. Scales to Richard H. Cobb; property at 179 Westminster drive, for Mrs. A. V. Coddington; dwelling on Pace's Ferry road, for Ross W. Hunter, to G. I. Tolson; two lots on North Side drive, for Westover Land company, to W. M. Fish.

Handled by Frazier Morgan: Dwelling at 309 Wellington street, for W. H. Hitechew, to J. V. Chastain.

F. P. & Geo. J. Morris Add New Homes To Large List of Residential Building

On the upper row, to the left, is the home at 1321 Lanier boulevard built by the Morris company and sold to B. L. Bell; to the right, home of Lewis M. Cutler at 1291 Stillwood drive; below, attracive residence of C. L. Bowers, at 727 Avery street, Decatur (left), and bungalow just completed by Morris at 1586 Boulevard, N. E.

All of the structures were built through contract for the owner. They show an excellent diversity of design and substantial construction.

THINKING OF AND FOR GUESTS

FURNISHING THE HOME ∴ MARIAN MOORE

Christmas irresistibly suggests guests, but entertaining is a real hardship instead of a joy for the hostess whose house offers no proper accommodation for out-of-town relatives. Let's furnish an extra bedroom and once for all do away with cots and folding beds in rooms not intended for sleeping purposes. I do not think that I need to enlarge upon the hideousness of makeshift contrivances, the discomfort to guests and hostess alike, the lack of privacy, the cramped feeling, both material and mental, the signs of mutual relief when the visit at last comes to an end! What could be more opposed to the spirit of true hospitality, to the cordiality and joyousness of family reunions?

The guest room presents a different problem from the other bedrooms inasmuch as it cannot be built round a certain personality, but on the contrary should be equally attractive to its various tenants, and further, because it fulfills to a certain extent the functions of a private sitting room. Whereas restfulness is desirable in the average bedroom, liveliness is permissible in the guest room, which is used only for a few days at a time and mostly on festive occasions.

Start With Color.

First we shall consider the color scheme. Usually this point is determined according to personal preferences, the complexion of the tenant and the exposition of the room. Here, this last point alone can guide the decorator. Many guest rooms are north rooms, because the rooms which receive sunshine are justly preferred by the family; and they often are small rooms, too, for a similar reason. It is therefore essential to create, by means of sunny colors, a sense of luminousness and spaciousness which will make up for such basic deficiencies. All hues in the yellow scale—ivory, cream, gold, light tan and even a warm creamy gray—will be suitable for the background, and it is best to adopt a plain treatment for the walls, not only for the reasons stated above, but also because vigorous patterns on large surfaces set up an antagonistic reaction on the part of certain sensitive people. Introduce patterns by means of the drapery and upholstery fabrics and the design of the furniture. While the color scheme of the average bedroom is based on the use of two complementary colors in almost equal amounts—for instance, cream and blue, orchid and green, turquoise and salmon—the guest room may, like the living room, contain three, four or even more colors, because in a scheme of this type the different hues balance and to a certain extent neutralize each other, some stimulating, some soothing the occupant, so that the resulting effect appeals to most people because it does not jar their sensibility, yet satisfies their craving for color and pattern.

A correct and attractive color scheme can always be worked out from a length of good cretonne or high-grade wall paper, as the patterns used by their manufacturers are designed by artists and may well guide the amateur not only in the choice and combination of hues, but also in the proper amounts of each to be used.

Why Not a Change of Scenery?

In selecting the furniture, remember that the main thrill of traveling and visiting is the change of scenery. Some people will tell you that they hate change; but that is only because, in their past experience, change has meant less comfort than they are used to in their own homes . . . or less comfort than they had anticipated! Give anyone a room in which he will not feel cramped, plenty of light, a lively color scheme, interesting furniture, good mirrors, comfortable chairs and a cozy bed, and unless he is indeed a bear I am sure the change from his usual surroundings will prove a welcome and refreshing experience. The furniture in the guest room should, therefore, be less conservative in design than in the ordinary bedroom. Plain furniture is prescribed for the everyday bedroom, because one can easily take it for granted, and long familiarity causes it to recede into that comfortable inobvious background which ministers to our needs yet seldom forces itself on our notice; whereas very characteristic furniture is apt to take the center of the stage, intrude on our thoughts, clash with our moods and after a while weary us or drive us frantic. In the guest room, on the contrary, the furniture should come forward and assume part of the task of entertaining our friends and relatives. They, for a few days, are willing to forget themselves, their routine ways, their worries, and to play a light comedy part; but we are so completely under the influence of our imagination that the part we play is almost inevitably determined by the "stage settings." I have known a man who used the most abominable grammar in his business clothes, but spoke like an Oxford graduate as soon as he donned a tuxedo. We are all more or less like him, in our various ways, and if guests look dejected, investigation will reveal that the light in their room is grayish, the draperies faded or the mirror green with age.

A well-appointed guest room should be equipped so the visitors may enjoy complete independence and privacy whenever they wish to isolate themselves. There should be comfortable chairs with good reading light, a small table, books and magazines, a writing desk, a sewing cabinet, a waste basket and plenty of closet space. Above all, do not overlook proper heating; an electric heater is absolutely necessary on winter mornings.

Some of my readers may object that the furnishing of such a room is mere folly for the average home owner. But I don't see why it should be. In the first place we should entertain royally or else not at all. It may require a good deal of courage to deny friends and relatives the courtesy of hospitality, but it is sheer nerve to invite them over and then camp them out in the dining room or even in the hall (Oh yes, it is being done!). If the new room is a pretty large item for the family Christmas present, I think there might be ways to make it pay dividends, depending on the habits of the family, the frequency with which guests are entertained and the location of the home. In certain parts of the country a paying guest can easily be secured; it may be a student, a business girl, a summer resident, a city lady with a little girl in need of fresh country air. Along the national highways tourists' rooms are in great demand in summer. Yet I foresee your objection: Would the profits be worth the damage done by these passing tenants? Here, again, we must trust to the reaction of normal human beings to their surroundings; the daintier the room, the better treatment it will receive on the part of casual visitors. Exceptions to this rule are rare and a little discernment will keep out the undesirable ones.

Question: What type of dining room would be most acceptable for the dining room furniture shown in chapter XXIX?

Answer: That furniture was of Elizabethan design (you may recall the melon bulb decorations on the legs which differentiated it from other Early English furniture). But it was refined in scale to adapt it for use in the moderate size dining rooms now in vogue.

This style of furniture (made of walnut or oak) would be appropriate in an English cottage or a Colonial type of dining room or any informal room such as is commonly found in American homes of modest pretensions.

WALKER COMPANY HANDLES ROOFING OF MANY PROJECTS

An Atlanta roofing concern which has handled many big jobs—notably the Southern shops, the Atlanta warehouse and Coca-Cola plants and a number of plants for the Georgia Power company—is the Walker Roofing company. The company is headed by Charles N. Walker, who has been in the roofing business for the past 20 years and is widely known here.

The Walker Roofing company is distributor for the nationally-known products of Johns-Manville, Inc., and also is state distributor for Williamson furnaces.

DR. SINGLETON SPEAKS AT MEETING TUESDAY

Dr. Gordon Singleton, of the state department of education, will be the principal speaker at the November meeting of the Baptist Elementary league, at the Second Baptist church, Tuesday night at 6 o'clock. Dr. Singleton will talk on the dollar debt campaign, which the Baptist churches of Georgia are preparing to launch. Departmental conferences will be held, with plans for Thanksgiving and pre-Christmas work to be discussed.

OLD GOSPEL HYMNS TO FEATURE SERVICES

Old time Gospel hymns will be a special feature in the morning service today at the Second Baptist church. A campaign program has been arranged, with short talks and music, and reports of subscriptions to date.

WESLEYAN MEHODISTS MEET IN WAYCROSS

Waycross, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—The thirty-third annual meeting of the Georgia conference of the Wesleyan Methodist church, or Denomination of America, is in session in Waycross. The conference opened Wednesday at the Waycross Wesleyan church on Albany avenue with a large attendance of ministers, lay delegates, orphanage officials from north Florida and south Georgia. There is a separate conference for north Georgia.

Rev. T. B. Baker, Sheridan, Ind., home mission secretary of the convention, is presiding at the convention sessions at the request of the president.

The opening sessions Wednesday were devoted to the appointment of temporary and permanent committees and the appointment of temporary officers to fill existing vacancies. Reports were heard from preachers from the various circuits and stations, the reports covering the last 12 months' activities. An orphanage report also was heard on the year closing.

Rev. Frank Harris preached Wednesday night, and it was announced that daily sermons would be heard for the remainder of the week at 11 o'clock in the morning and at 7:30 o'clock in the evening, the public being invited to attend the services.

A special missionary service was held Friday night under the auspices of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary society. The Wesleyan Methodist church maintains several mission stations in the Soudan, several hundred miles into the hinterland of Sierra Leon, in West Africa; others north of Bombay, toward the Afghanistan border, and in Japan. The church also takes an active interest in a large mission in Chili, South America.

The business section of the conference closed Saturday night and Sunday is to be given over to religious exercises of an evangelistic nature. The pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, who left Thursday for Louisville, Ky., to make two addresses before the Kentucky students' conference, will speak on "My Church."

NEW STRUCTURE COST $100,000

A. N. Canton, the architect, is planning a two-story, six-unit apartment house to be erected on Andrews drive which will cost approximately $100,000.

The building will occupy a lot 105x370 feet and is located 200 feet off Peachtree road.

Four of the units will contain eight rooms with four bedrooms upstairs. There will be a fireplace in each, a bath between each two and electric heating stoves. Each unit will be heated with an oil burner equipment and each unit will have electric refrigeration. Other features include built-in bookcases and servant's room and garage for each unit.

Every apartment will have its own entrance. A feature will be the large size of the rooms, the living room zeing 16x26. Four of the suites will be two stories and the other two one story each.

The exterior of the building will be in keeping with the architecture of the fine homes on Andrews drive, Mr. Canton announced.

Otis and Taylor Piedmont Deal Makes History

Robert R. Otis, who, with J. H. Taylor, handled the lease of the Piedmont hotel to Charles T. Alexander, involving perhaps the largest real estate transaction of its kind ever to be consummated in Atlanta.

R. R. OTIS.

Both Mr. Taylor and Mr. Otis are prominent figures on real estate row and are responsible for many of the city's biggest commercial real estate deals. It was Mr. Otis who handled the Sears, Roebuck & Co. transaction and manages the Peachtree Arcade.

CONVENTION DATE SET BY GEORGIA REALTORS

Dana Belser, president of the Atlanta Real Estate board, announced Saturday the 1927 meeting of the Georgia Real Estate association will be held in Savannah, Ga., on Friday and Saturday, December 9 and 10.

The DeSoto hotel has been designated as the convention headquarters, and from latest reports received from A. S. Harris, secretary of the Savannah Real Estate board, the program and list of speakers has been prepared, which promises real estate men belonging to the Georgia association a constructive and enjoyable time.

A convention attendance committee has been appointed from the real estate board, consisting of H. H. Hallman, chairman; John O. Chiles, R. C. Mizell, W. A. Stokes, Jr., F. R. Wing and L. A. McKinley.

This committe is to have charge of getting a large attendance from the Atlanta board, making all arrangements for the convention, and creating interest in the coming meeting.

This committe will meet at the office of the Real Estate board, 203 Healey building, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, November 16, for the purpose of taking steps in making arrangements for the state convention. Announcements and plans will be sent to all members of the board.

From present indications the Atlanta delegation will have 25 or 30 going to Savannah, it was stated.

CHARLIE WILKINSON LEASES DOWNTOWN SITES FOR CANDLER

Announcement was made Saturday by Charlie Wilkinson, manager of the Candler properties, that he had leased for a term of years the location at 70 North Pryor street to the Mechanics Loan and Savings company, industrial bankers, now at 8 Wall street.

The new location is on the ground floor adjoining the Candler annex. The company will move between now and the first of the year.

Mr. Wilkinson also announced he had leased office space at 306 Candler building to James R. Cothran, a consulting actuary.

M'CURDY BUILDS HOME ON DRUID HILLS LOT

W. S. McCurdy is building a residence on the Cornell road in Druid Hills. This is in the Emory university section of the development.

The house will be of the brick bungalow type and cost around $10,000.

PALMER TO SPEAK ON BOARD COURSE

C. F. Palmer will deliver the fifth of the series of six lectures dealing with modern and efficient methods of appraising to be held at the office of the Real Estate board Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

President Belser stated that Mr. Palmer, head of Palmer, incorporated, office building operators, is well qualified to speak on his "Obsolescence and Depreciation" subject through his many years in handling large structures.

The appraisal talk held last Tuesday was constructive, according to members of the board attending. Ward Wight was the speaker and his subject was "Corner Influence and Long Term Leases." After the speaker's talk discussion was carried on for about ten minutes in which all present participated.

S. P. Cronheim, chairman of the appraisal course committee, urges all members to "bear the two coming lectures in mind and attend each promptly, as they will be well paid for time and effort spent."

The regular weekly luncheon of the Real Estate board was held at Vaughan's tea room, 12:30 o'clock Thursday, November 10. John J. Thompson, vice president, presided at the meeting and Will C. Edwards, publishing editor of the Atlanta Georgian, was the principal speaker. His subject was "Getting the Most Out of Real Estate Advertising." One important point brought out was that unless the clients of a newspaper receive results from their advertising that it was impossible for the paper to receive any permanent benefit and that the paper's growth and advancement was in proportion to the results received from the advertising by its clients.

The next regular luncheon of the membership will be held at Vaughan's tea room 12:30 o'clock Thursday, November 17. The chairman of the program committee is planning an interesting program and an entertaining speaker.

Detailed announcements of the luncheon will be sent to all members. A large attendance is desired and each member is requested to mail in his reservation card at once.

WILLINGHAM JOINS WEYMAN & CONNORS

John O. Chiles, sales manager of Weyman & Connors, announced on yesterday the addition to his force of salesmen of E. G. Willingham, Jr., member of a prominent Atlanta family.

Mr. Willingham came to Atlanta recently from Tampa, where for four or five years he had been in the real estate business.

In his new connection he will specialize on home sites and small investment properties, which had been his specialty in Tampa.

Innumerable Requests For Army-Navy Tickets Annoy Secretary of War

Although world peace pervades the nations, Secretary of War Davis is exercised over the tremendous porportions of an approaching conflict.

"I'll trade my passes to the Army-Navy game," the secretary told the press, "to the fellow who can devise a scheme to check demands on this office for the pasteboards."

Then to the department of war came the following reply, accompanied by a photograph of a comely young woman:

"As a rabid football fan, your dilemma has engrossed my attention. The old gray matter, after wrestling with the problem for days and days, suggests that you circulate a rumor that the game has been called off.

"I have New York transportation, and if you can get me tickets for the Navy goat and Army mule performance I'll drive an ambulance for you in the next war. I just got my license last week."

Whether she got the ducats was not carried in the announcement released Thursday through Major G. H. Franke, fourth corps publicity officer.

COL. WALTER PEACOCK TO CONDUCT SERVICES

Lieutenant Colonel Walter Peacock, of the Salvation Army here, will be in charge of services this morning at 11 o'clock and tonight at 8 o'clock in the Army temple. This is the first time Colonel Peacock has devoted a Sunday to members of Atlanta corps No. 1, of the organization and a full attendance is expected.

Another feature of the day will be a special musical program provided by the territorial staff band, led by Captain A. E. Baldwin. This afternoon the band will give a concert at the veterans' hospital No. 48, on Peachtree road.

"Eight O'Clock" Coffee Awarded Gold Medal At Sesqui-Centennial

Announcement was made recently by the jury of awards of the sesqui-centennial exposition that "Eight O'Clock" brand of coffee was awarded the gold medal. More than 40,000,000 pounds of this coffee is consumed every year. This brand of coffee is a product of Brazil and is recognized as of the highest quality Santos coffees imported into this country. It is a popular-priced coffee.

In making the award, the jury announced that it was given on the basis of the fineness of this coffee's quality.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCY MOVES INTO ARCADE

The Royal Employment agency has moved from 303 Rhodes building to 349-53 Peachtree Arcade and is in better position to serve the public, its officials announced Saturday. This company has been in business three years and has endeavored to serve both employers and employees to the best advantage. Personal attention is given to each applicant registered with the concern, it is pointed out.

HOLT—DANGLER.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hilliard McCrea announced the engagement of their daughter, Martha McCrea Holt, to Clifford Schofield Dangler, of Cleveland, Ohio, the marriage to take place Monday evening at 9 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents on Peachtree road.

BRACINNI—ROBERTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bracinni, of New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Illini Camile, to Duncan N. Roberts, formerly of Atlanta, the wedding to take place in Montreal, Canada, December 10.

DUMAS—CRENSHAW.

Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Dumas announce the engagement of their daughter, Mabel, to Douglas Crenshaw, of Clinton, Tenn., formerly of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized December 20 at the Ponce de Leon Baptist church.

BERGSTROM—MURRAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew M. Bergstrom announce the engagement of their daughter, Martha Eugenia, to Emmett Leroy Murray, Jr., of Washington, D. C., the marriage to be solemnized January 11. No cards.

ERLICH—HERZFELD.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernhard Erlich announce the engagement of their daughter, Henrietta, to John Elkan Herzfeld, of Atlanta, formerly of Selma, Ala. No cards.

Miss. Elwood, of Menominee, Mich. To Wed Thomas Howell Scott

Miss Lois Elwood, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Calvin Rose Elwood, of Menominee, Mich., whose engagement is announced today to Thomas Howell Scott, of Atlanta. The marriage of Miss Elwood and Mr. Scott will be brilliantly solemnized Tuesday evening, December 27, at the home of the bride-elect's parents on Green bay.

The announcement of theengagement of Miss Lois Elwood, of Menominee, Mich., and Thomas Howell Scott, of Atlanta, is of extreme interest in the south and middle west, where the families of the young couple are well known and prominently identified with social and civic life.

Miss Elwood is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Calvin Rose Elwood ,of Menominee, Mich., and she has often visited here as the guest of Mrs. William Randolph Smith, formerly Miss Jean Douglas. She holds an A. B. degree from the University of Michigan, where she was a popular member of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. She took special courses at Columbia university, where she was a classmate of Mrs. William Randolph Smith. She is an unusually cultured and attractive young woman and will be a delightful acquisition to Atlanta's social circles.

Mr. Scott is numbered among the city's most prominent young lawyers. He received his A. B. degree from Young Harris college after which he attended the Atlanta law school where he received his LL. B. degree. He is a member of the McElreath & Scott law firm. During the war Mr. Scott served as captain of infantry in the United States army. He is the son of the late Captain Andrew Tabor Scott and Mrs. Scott, of Texas, formerly of Canton, Ga. His mother now resides in Childress, Texas. Mr. Scott will introduce his bride to a wide circle of friends, for he holds a distinct position in the city's social realm. He is a member of the Atlanta Athletic club and East Lake Country club.

The marriage of Miss Elwood and Mr. Scott will be solemnized at a brilliant ceremony Tuesday evening, December 27, at the home of his bride's parents, which is one of the handsomest estates dotting the shores of Green bay.

Fashion Show Takes Place Friday At the Seminary

The fashion show, an annual event, will be presented Friday, November 18, by the Athletic association. The manikins will wear costumes furnished by the J. P. Allen company.

The senior class chose by vote to represent them Misses Carmelia Orme, Julia Meador, Hansel Stamps and Eleanor Johnson. The juniors, Jane King, Nancy Frederick, Louise Moore and Helen Noble; the sophomores, Mary Meador Goldsmith, Josephine Crawford, Frances Clarke and Vaughn Nixon; the freshmen, Emily Matthews, Catharine Jenkins, Judy King and Margaret King.

Some dances will add variety to the evening.

Each year the Dramatic club of the seminary offers a prize for the best original play by a seminary girl. Eleven were handed in this year. The judges awarded the first prize to Lily May Mitchell's "Every Girl Takes a Test." The second prize went to Mary Frances and Jenny Lind Mather, who wrote "Miss Sherlock Holmes." Honorable mention was given Jane Wardlaw's "Genius Distinguished." The first two plays will be presented later by members of the Dramatic club.

The publication of "Mesimura" free from financial worry was assured when the class race for subscriptions and advertisements was won by the seniors, the goodly sum of $900 being raised.

DAY—JENKINS.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Day announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Mack, to Sam B. Jenkins, the marriage to be solemnized at an early date. No cards.

WHITLOCK—HARPER.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Whitlock, of College Park, announce the engagement of their daughter, Evie, to Gilbert H. Harper, the marriage to be solemnized at an early date.

"The Store of Dependability"

Special Diamond Exhibition

Commencing Monday and Continuing Through All of Next Week

We will have on exhibition replicas of many of the famous diamonds of the world. Included will be the famous Cullinan Diamond, many of the British Crown Jewels and many others, each with its complete history attached. Diamonds in the rough will also be shown.

During the same period Mr. Theo. DeGraeve, representing the Master Diamond Cutters Association, of Antwerp, Belgium, will actually cut diamonds here, using the same machinery and the same method they are using in the world's greatest diamond cutting establishments.

Mr. DeGraeve will demonstrate and explain every process as he goes along. He will without charge take out scratches and small nicks for as many of our customers as his time will permit. Every one is invited to attend this exhibition and ask any questions they may wish in regard to diamond cutting.

Woman's Club Meeting Observes Education Week

The Atlanta Woman's club meets at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon at the Atlanta Woman's club building on Peachtree road. Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the club, will be in the chair and the meeting will be devoted to observing National Educational week, with Mrs. Tom Brooks, chairman of education, in charge of the program.

Several delightful speakers will be featured. Mrs. Walter McNab, of New York city, one of the outstanding clubwomen of America, will give a talk. She is chairman of the department of public welfare of the general federation with the divisions of public health, child welfare, moving pictures, anti-narcotics, adult delinquency and problems of industry.

Dr. Harvey Cox, president of Emory university, will speak on this occasion. His subject will be "The Value of Education—Today and Tomorrow."

Talks will also be given by Mrs. John King Ottley, president of the Tallulah Falls school, and Mrs. Price Gilbert, secretary of the Tallulah Falls schools. A delightful musical program will be given at this meeting. Miss Lillian Smith, contralto soloist at the Peachtree Christian church, and Raymond Nixon, baritone soloist of the Grace Street Methodist church, will sing. Miss Smith will sing "O Lonely Night," by Ronald, and "Trees," by Rasbach. Mr. Nixon will give "A Song of Thanksgiving," by Allitsen and "Poor Man's Garden," by Russell.

Miss Louise McElveen Weds Fred Lee.

Concord, Ga., November 12.—The marriage of Miss Louise McElveen and Fred Strickland Lee took place at 3 o'clock Wednesday, November 9, at the home of the bride's parents in Concord, Rev. T. J. Espy, of Concord Baptist church, performed the ceremony.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Margaret Newman, of Gainesville, Ga., rendered two vocal selections, "At Dawning" and "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," accompanied by Miss Rebecca Lee, sister of the groom. The wedding march, from Wagner's "Lohengrin," announced the approach of the bridal party.

Miss Anne McElveen, the bride's sister, was maid of honor and the only attendant. She wore a becoming model of satin and velvet combination with heavy gold embroidery. Her slippers were bronze and she carried an arm bouquet of bronze dahlias. Little Miss Joanne Newman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Newman, acted as ring bearer, carrying the ring in an old-fashioned nosegay. Her frock was of yellow georgette, trimmed in taffeta ruffles and falling from the shoulder was a shower of tiny velvet ribbons in pastel shades. The bride entered with her father, Allen McElveen, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, J. Lee Caldwell.

The charming bride of the titian blonde type was beautiful in a handsome gown of brick dust velvet fashioned with a side drapery and scallops, the neckline finished with a deep metal yoke. Her smart hat and accessories were to match. She carried a gorgeous bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held and later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Lee left for a wedding trip through Florida.

Among the out-of-town guests present were Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Head and Robert Banks, of Zebulon; T. J. Gardner, of Barnesville; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Dunn and Mrs. T. R. Willis, of Molena; W. Thomas Scott, M. Hicks Graham and Miss Margaret Gresham, of Griffin; Miss Alma Strickland, Paul Strickland, Mrs. B. F. Barnes, Mrs. H. S. Jones, Mrs. Charles Willis, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Starr, Jr., Mrs. T. R. Willis, Mrs. T. F. Moore, Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Shackleford, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Newman and W. Harry McElveen, all of Atlanta.

Miss Estes Weds A. C. Ware At Quiet Home Ceremony

Mrs. Augustus Candler Ware, a charming bride of Saturday. Mrs. Ware formerly was Miss Gretchen Estes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Estes, of Decatur. Photograph by Thurston Hatcher.

The marriage of Miss Gretchen Estes and Augustus Candler Ware was quietly solemnized Saturday at high noon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Estes, in Decatur.

Rev. Dr. Holden, rector of the Decatur Episcopal church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the two immediate families. Palms, ferns and baskets of large white chrysanthemums formed a lovely background for the bride and groom to plight their vows. The bride wore an attractive two-piece costume of tan crepe with a small felt hat to match. She wore a shoulder bouquet of tiny yellow rosebuds and valley lilies.

Mrs. Estes, the bride's mother, wore a navy blue crepe gown and Mrs. Reid Ware, the groom's mother, was gowned in gray crepe. After the marriage service Mr. and Mrs. Estes entertained at an informal buffet luncheon.

During the afternoon Mr. Ware and his bride left for a motor trip to Asheville, N. C. On their return they will take an apartment on Virginia avenue.

The bride and groom are representatives of prominent southern families and the announcement of their marriage will be received with social interest throughout Georgia. The bride is a popular member of Atlanta and Decatur social contingents. She attended St. Mary's school at Raleigh, N. C., completing her education at Miss Sayward's Finishing School for Girls at Overbrook, Pa., near Philadelphia. Mr. Ware is the son of Mrs. Reid Ware and the late Mr. Ware, of Atlanta. The groom attended the Georgia School of Technology. He holds a responsible position with the United States Rubber company.

Misses Moore, Briggs Give Bridge-Tea.

Misses Grace Moore and Dorothy Briggs entertained at a bridge-tea Saturday, November 12, at the Henry Grady hotel, assembling a congenial group of friends of those hostesses.

Among those invited were Mrs. Ruby Alexander, Mrs. Laurie Hale, Mrs. M. D. Norton, Mrs. Harmon Russell, Miss Florence Tatom, Miss Fay Logan, Miss Almeda Hutcheson, Miss Winnie Mobley, Miss Ruth Hohn, Miss Branche Elrod, Mrs. O. B. Barfield, Mrs. J. C. Williams, Mrs. Virginia Bolden, Miss Jimmie Brown, Miss Mary Robinson, Miss Moore and Miss Briggs.

Miss Leonard Weds Clifford Campbell.

Mr. and Mrs. James N. Leonard, of Covington, announce the marriage of their daughter, Emily, to Clifford Stewart Campbell, of Covington, which was solemnized Monday afternoon, November 7, at the home of Rev. L. F. Herring, pastor of the Baptist church, at Stone Mountain, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip to Asheville, N. C., and other points of interest. On their return from their wedding trip they will be at home in an apartment at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard, on Lee street.

Mr. and Mrs. Berman Will Have "At Home."

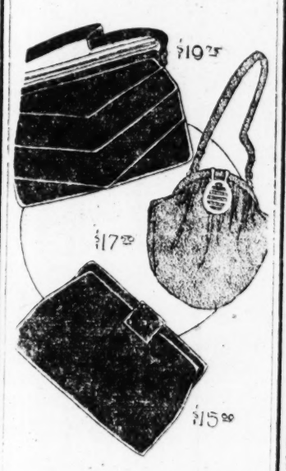

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Berman will be at home to their friends Sunday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, at 904 Capitol avenue, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Berman.

Originator of Moonlight Schools Gives Interview on Illiteracy

:: Mrs. Stewart Says 328,838 Georgians Cannot Read or Write ::

CORA WILSON STEWART

"Fifteen regiments of Kentucky soldiers can not read or write."

At the outbreak of the world war a Kentucky woman flashed these facts in her people's eyes.

Later she declared:

"Five million people in the United States are illiterate."

This woman, Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, was kindling the consciousness of Kentuckians to facts which brought into being her mountain "Moonlight schools" and won for her, 14 years later, the 1924 award of $5,000 offered annually by Pictorial Review to the woman who renders the greatest service in her chosen field.

Mrs. Stewart, director of the national illiteracy crusade, with headquarters in the Red Cross building, Washington, D. C., was in Atlanta Saturday. She is making a tour of the country in the interest of illiteracy under the auspices of the Oklahoma Lecture bureau, of which Russell Bridges is manager. Friday she lectured at Spellman university.

She leaned back in a big plush chair in the Ansley hotel and there was a look in her grey eyes which bespoke a similar message for Atlanta people. She looked down over the bunch of violets tucked at her chin, adding a touch of color to the somber gray tailored dress which suggested the modesty with which this woman from the Kentucky hills is carrying on her work. Conviction was evident in her quiet manner.

"There are 328,838 Georgians that cannot read The Atlanta Constitution.

"There are 11,631 Atlantans to whom it is as meaningless as a vacant page." She paused and then went on with her story.

"This would be a good thing for Atlantans to remember when they go to church Sunday, when they give to people on the other side of the sea; when they contribute to education in the Near East—there are more than 300,000 people in our state who can not read the "Book of Books."

Something far off and compelling was alive in her firmly chiseled features saying louder than words that she has beckoned mountaineers through the moonlit passes, for they are impassable in the darkness, and opened for them that long closed door to literacy and understanding which leads beyond the hills.

Begins Work.

"I was superintendent of schools in Rowan county, Kentucky. And this is how I became aware of the menace of that terrific plague which is filling our prisons, robbing our schools, holding many an unborn poet in shackles, and binding our people to lives of uselessness to themselves and to the state."

Mrs. Stewart looked far away ahead of her. She was going back to that little office in the hills. She was seeing the mountaineers, some with babies in their arms, books in their hands, and the hope in their hearts that the shackles of illiteracy might be shuffled off in this little mountain school.

"It started this way. For a long time I had been writing letters for an old country woman who came for many miles over the mountains to get me to send a letter to her daughter in the city. I can see her now. Sometimes she rode an old mare; a slat bonnet was on her head; an old shawl over her shoulders. The darkness that only the mountains can paint was alive in her pale blue eyes. And then one day she failed to come. When she did appear she announced:

"'I've larned to read and write.'

"'Is that so; and who was your teacher?'

"'You see it was this way. I couldn't git here. The cricks were twix me and my neighbors and it took me four or five days to get a letter writ and mailed. It just looked like there was a wall twix me and my May. I wanted to see with my own eyes the things that she had writ. So I got me a speller. And I larned to read and write.'

"That was the first incident," continued Mrs. Stewart. "This was the second. A middle-aged man came into my office. There was a look of desolation in his eyes. 'I would give 20 years of my life if I could write,' he said.

"And this was the third. A young boy sang a ballad at one of our mountain celebrations. It was one of his own poems.

"'Why don't you give me a copy of that,' I asked, 'so we can publish it in "The Mountaineer?"'

"'Oh, I have made up a lot better than that,' he answered, 'but I can't write, and I forgit 'em 'afore somebody comes along to set 'em down.'

"These are the stories of three individuals," said Mrs. Stewart, "but to me they are the stories of three classes: the mother, who is shut in from outside influences; the middle-aged man, who is denied the ballot, and the unknown young men and women, who might with enlightenment become poets and leaders of their people."

These things aroused Mrs. Stewart to the need in the mountains. She has met it. And now, like the torch-bearers in the land of the Scots, passed along the message that there are millions more in America, unmindful that they are capable of learning in middle life or that education is a simple and short process, one which can be mastered to a degree within the short period of six weeks.

"They think that education is a miracle, a strange process through which the mind is incapable of going in middle age."

Menace of Illiteracy.

And the menace of it all, Mrs. Stewart tells you, is inconceivable, like some fire that is eating out the fiber of a people.

The percentage of illiteracy is higher in every prison in the country than it is in the state at large and even in the localities from which they come. The sections where illiteracy is greatest are the sections where infant mortality is highest. The states which rank highest in literacy are the states which rank highest in the health of her school children. Iowa holds this record.

"There is also a direct relation between the percentage of illiterates in the states and the school attendance of those states. Louisiana, which ranks lowest in literacy, has the lowest school attendance."

"To educate the illiterate is like opening up an enchanted garden to them. And it is like creating a new source of power in the state. Some industrial centers have become so aware of the value of education for their employees that they have given notice that after 90 days no illiterates will be retained in their employ. And they have opened up night schools in which they can learn.

"To educate the illiterate is a work of far-reaching commercial value. Statistics show that only 5 per cent of illiterate people deposit money in the bank. And whatever in an industrial way is done can be done better by one who has had the advantage of education.

As strange as it may seem, to educate the illiterate reduces accidents. Henry Ford in a recent report says: "Since teaching illiterates in the factory to read and write accidents have been reduced 54 per cent."

And the value of the individual himself cannot be estimated. The literate man is more self-respecting. He is more cooperative. And these people, you must remember, are capable of making valuable citizens. One woman who was educated in a moonlight school has conducted several lecture tours through the country in which she lives, proving an influence for good in her community. Some have held public office, others have entered the ministry, and still others have made admirable teachers and leaders in Sunday school work. John Davey, who learned to write in a moonlight school at the age of 21, later wrote a book on tree surgery and was widely recognized as an authority on this subject.

So you see the problem is one which goes deeply into the fabric of our people. It is not only my dream, but the dream of clubwomen, American Legion men, Parent-Teacher associations, and other powerful groups who are in a position to be influential and wield a power for untold good. It is the hope of this united body of high-minded Americans to wipe illiteracy from America by 1930 and proclaim her the first among nations in this elemental and fundamental work.

Georgia's Past.

"Georgia has made some splendid strides in the eradication of illiteracy. Among those who are doing great work in Georgia are Dr. Rufus Weaver, formerly president of Mercer university, who with the cooperation of Bibb county teachers taught more than 4,000 illiterates in that county; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech; Dr. M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of education; Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, of Macon, and C. J. Hadan, chairman for so many years of the state illiteracy commission.

"Alabama is fully awake. She is now spending $1,000,000 a year on wiping out illiteracy. Her legislature, which recently adjourned, appropriated $50,000 annually, which is to be matched by county and city boards with a like sum. Alabama has 278,082 illiterates.

"South Carolina is another southern state that is fully awake. She has well organized work supported by the state, and not long ago three of her citizens who had been educated in moonlight schools were sent up before the educational committee of congress.

"When the movement first started in the Kentucky hills in 1911 there had been no effort on the part of any county or state to eradicate illiteracy; now every state is taking part. Four of the states—Vermont, North Dakota, Delaware and Oklahoma—are running a race to see which can be the first to wipe it out. The movement has now spread to China, Japan, Italy and a number of the South American countries.

When Mrs. Stewart was in the city upon a previous occasion she visited the prisons here, learning through her investigations that one-third of the Georgia prisoners were illiterate. She expected to visit them again while in the city with the hope of seeing many improvements which she suggested while here.

At the national illiteracy crusade headquarters in Washington books are being printed for the illiterate, the woman in the home, the illiterate prisoner, the Indian who cannot read or write; there are pamphlets to teach the farmer the principles of planting a crop while he learns his lessons in reading and writing. Everything is being done to make these books attractive and beneficial for the various groups for which they are intended.

"We teach them to take a newspaper and read," said Mrs. Stewart. "While they are learning they are also getting an insight into the purpose of taxation, the value of the ballot, the problems of health and sanitation, how to put aside a little money in the bank, to spray the fruit trees and to build good roads."

Mrs. Stewart left Saturday night for Louisiana, where she will continue to lecture in the interest of the eradication of illiteracy.

Social Gaieties Take Place At Marietta Golf Club

Marietta, Ga., November 12.—A social affair of interest was the bridge party given Saturday afternoon at the Marietta Golf club by Mrs. Will Neal, who is giving a series of parties. Mrs. W. H. Perkinson entertained a party at bridge in compliment to Mrs. Armadina Freyer, of Savannah. The hostesses for the afternoon were: Mrs. W. E. Schilling, Mrs. Rosser Little and Miss Sarah Litter.

Mrs. H. H. Jones entertained with a children's party Tuesday afternoon at her home on Atlanta street, in compliment to her daughter, Jessie Monroe, on her birthday.

Miss Nell Johnson, of Atlanta, was the guest this week of Miss Isabel Hunt.

Mrs. George Daniell entertained at dinner Friday evening at her home, Forrest avenue, in compliment to her husband in celebration of his birthday. The members of the football team of the Marietta High school were entertained at a dinner Friday evening at the Marietta Golf club, given by Tom Perkinson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Florence had as their guests at dinner Thursday evening Dr. and Mrs. Earl Quillian, of Atlanta; Mrs. Carl Brown, of Louisville, Miss., and Mr. and Mrs. Grady Conway.

Supper will be served at 6:15 o'clock, the class following immediately, and closing at 7:45. The subject will be "Our Task," and interesting speakers have been secured for each lesson.

Mrs. Couper Heads West Point Club.

Mrs. James M. Couper was elected president of the West Point club last Tuesday at the meeting at the Atlanta Athletic club.

The other officers include Mrs. E. E. Huguely, vice president; Mrs. E. H. Godby, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Norman Poer, chairman of hospitality; Mesdames Frank Boland, George T. Smith and Frank M. Farley, Jr., members of the finance committee, and Mrs. E. R. Cox, flower committee chairman.

Wesleyan College Campus Notes.

After practice on the soccer field for several weeks the class squads were chosen last week by Miss Ernestine Grote and Miss Isabelle Kinnett, assisted by two representatives from each class. Dorothy McKay, of Macon was chosen captain of the senior team; Helen Lowe, of St. Simons Island of the junior team; Mary Banks, of Forsyth, of the sophomore team, and Mildred Barber, of Savannah was elected captain of the freshman team. The first soccer games will be Thanksgiving morning between the freshman and sophomores and between the juniors and seniors. The best two out of three of the interclass games will be played during the week following Thanksgiving, and later the two winners will play for the championship.

Upon the request of many who are interested in the study of the Bible, Professor George E. Rosser, of Wesleyan, has consented to deliver a series of lectures upon the subject. These meetings will be held at the home of Mrs. Samuel T. Coleman.

Wesleyan music lovers will have the opportunity of hearing eight of their favorite operas sung by the San Carlos Grand Opera company during the week of January 9 to 14, these dates having been chosen by the Macon Grand Opera association. The complete repertoire to be sung here includes Aida, by Verdi; Faust, by Gounod; Hansel and Gretel, Humperdinck; Rigoletto, by Gounod; Carmen, by Bizet; Cavalleria Rusticana, by Mascagni, and Pagliacci, by Leoncavallo; Madame Butterfly, by Puccini; Il Trovatore, by Verdi.

40 and 8 Society Head Will Visit Atlanta Monday

Pelham St. George Bissell, of New York city, unanimously chosen at the recent convention of the American legion in Paris as national head of the society of the 40 and 8, the legion's active service adjunct, will spend Monday in Atlanta as the guest of the Atlanta legionnaires and members of the local and grand voitures of the 40 and 8.

He will arrive in Atlanta from Miami, Fla., on his way home from Clearwater, Fla., where he was the legion's chief representative at the dedication ceremonies opening the new Clearwater Memorial causeway on Armistice day, when the statues of a doughboy and a sailor at either end of the new causeway were unveiled. United States Senator Park Trammell, of Florida, was the other speaker at the dedication ceremonies.

Mr. Bissell's stopover at Miami was made for the purpose of conferring with his predecessor, Charles A. Mills, of that city, in order to formulate his policies for the society for the coming year so that he may begin his administration of the 40 and 8 where Mr. Mills left off. The new national head of the organization is giving special emphasis to the legion's work among children for the community awards to the best all-around boys and girls.

Mr. Bissell, who comes of one of New York city's oldest and most socially prominent families, has a brilliant war record. For his work in connection with communications in the Argonne he was commended for competency, and later was awarded the Conspicuous Service Cross of the State of New York. Promoted to captain during the war, he accepted a majority in the United States Army Reserve corps when the conflict was over.

In 1921 he was appointed special United States attorney, in which capacity he acted as government counsel in trials of customs cases on the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards and in Mexican gulf ports. He also acted as counsel to the appraiser of the port of New York. He resigned in 1924 to return to private practice in which he since has been engaged.

Mr. Bissell has been an active figure in the legion of New York county and state since its inception.

In the 40 and 8 Mr. Bissell has been chef de gare of the New York county voiture, grand advocate of the state, and grand chief de gare of the New York state department. Before becoming chef de chemin de fer, the highest office in the national society, he held the second highest office last year.

Mr. Bissell is a graduate of Columbia university.

Miss Kate Thrash Weds Mr. Garrison At Quiet Ceremony

Mrs. Lawrence Thrash announces the marriage of her daughter, Kate, to Nat Hammond Garrison Saturday afternoon, November 5, at 4 o'clock at her home on Albemarle avenue. Rev. Dr. Upshaw performed the ceremony in the presence of the two families. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Garrison and his bride left for a trip to New York and other points in the east. The bride wore a smart costume of woods brown satin crepe with a small velvet hat to match. Her shoulder bouquet was of valley lilies and small yellow rosebuds. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison will return November 25 and will take possession of their home at 1252 McLendon avenue.

Bowdon College Campus Notes.

The West Georgia Collegian made its second appearance on the campus this week. The date of publication has been changed from the second and fourth Fridays to the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

The subject: Resolved that this house favors appointments rather than election of superior court judges in Georgia, was debated by Professor Ernest Dillard and Jean Camp on the affirmative, and Miss Dessa Fannin and Earl Staples, negative. The house voted against the measure by a wide majority.

The Bowdon-Bethlehem football game, which was played Saturday, brought several visitors to the college. Among the out-of-town spectators were Dudley Holmes and Lester Reeves, of Carrollton; Thomas Gladney, Ray Stallings, Alton Hamrick and Hulette Russell, from the Fourth District A. & M. Misses Mildred Caswell and Mildred Barker, of Unity High school community, were other visitors.

Springer-Ebersole Wedding Ceremony Is Beautiful Event

Exquisite beauty marked the wedding ceremony of Miss Suzanne Springer and Claude David Ebersole, of Birmingham, Ala., which took place Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at St. Mark's Methodist church on Peachtree street. Rev. W. L. Ruren, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr. L. R. Christie, in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends. Preceding the marriage service Ed Kane sang two appropriate selections accompanied at the organ by Miss Eda Bartholomew, who also played the Lohengrin wedding march for the entrance of the bridal party.

Palms, ferns and foliage plants banked the pulpit and organ loft, forming a rich, dark background for the many baskets of giant white chrysanthemums, which were artistically arranged at the front of the pulpit and altar. Five-branched cathedral candelabra holding slender white burning tapers illuminated the beautiful floral decorations. A graceful arch of tiny electric lights covered with white rose shades extended over the altar and reflected a brilliant glow over the bridal party. Baskets of white chrysanthemums adorned the center of each stained glass window on either side of the church, while palms and floor baskets filled with white chrysanthemums decorated the corners of the handsome church. The pews reserved for the families were marked by clusters of huge white chrysanthemums tied with wide white satin ribbons.

Wedding Attendants.

The ushers entered first. They were C. F. Reynolds, of Birmingham, Ala.; Eugene Clark, J. Fritz Thompson and J. D. White. They were followed by the bridesmaids and groomsmen, who entered in pairs. The groomsmen were Hardee Johnson, John Eustis and Lee Hill, all of Birmingham, and Leslie Parker and Lamar Springer. The bridesmaids included Mrs. Jeannette Halley, of Birmingham, the groom's sister; Miss Viola Bass and Miss Margaret Hunt. They wore exquisite gowns of pink satin fashioned with modish long waists and smartly draped skirts. The soft satin girdles were lined with silver cloth and held in place at the left side by handsome rhinestone buckles. These handsome buckles also held the graceful satin draperies lined with silver cloth, which fell below the hemlines. Rhinestone ornaments adorned the right shoulders of the lovely gowns, from which fell narrow folds of pink satin faced with silver cloth. They wore silver slippers trimmed with rhinestone buckles and carried bouquets of pink roses showered with pink sweet peas and valley lilies.

Miss Frances Teague, the bride's niece, was junior bridesmaid. She entered alone and was an attractive figure, wearing a dress of pink satin and flesh-colored tulle. She carried a bouquet of pink roses, valley lilies and pink sweet peas. Mrs. Lamar Springer, the bride's sister, and Miss Virginia Bake acted as matron and maid of honor. They entered together wearing gowns of pink satin and pink tulle. Their gowns were fashioned similar to the bridesmaids. Points of the tulle fell below the hems of the skirts and fluffy tulle bows were held to the left shoulders by rhinestone ornaments. They wore silver slippers and carried bouquets of pink roses showered with pink sweet peas and valley lilies. Little Miss Mary Louise Blanchard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Blanchard, acted as flower girl and preceded the bride. She wore a dainty frock of shell-pink chiffon and carried a small basket of pink rose buds and valley lilies.

Radiant Bride.

The lovely young bride entered with her father, William Walter Springer, by whom she was given in marriage. She presented a radiant figure in her wedding gown of white georgette crepe veiling heavy white satin. The robe de style lines along which the gown was fashioned were particularly becoming to the slender figure of the youthful bride. An exquisite pattern of lace bordered the graceful skirt, the lace design outlined by tiny pearls. A floral motif embroidered in pearls trimmed the upper part of the skirt and the lower part of the bodice. Inserts of lace edged with pearls added to the trimming of the bodice. A train of satin fell from the bride's shoulders, where it was confined by lovely pearl ornaments. The edge of the train was finished by a wide band of lace like that trimming the gown. Embroidered pearl designs adorned the train at intervals, while a border of tiny pearls outlined both sides of the train. Completing the beautiful costume was a bridal veil of misty tulle, which fell from a rose-point lace bandeau to the end of the train. Clusters of orange blossoms held the bandeau in place at either side of the head, while graceful sprays of these lovely flowers were arranged at the back of the head. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Wedding Reception.

After the marriage service Mr. and Mrs. Springer, the bride's parents, entertained the members of the bridal party, the out-of-town guests and members of the two families at a reception at their home on Inman circle in Ansley park.

Mrs. Springer, the bride's mother, wore a gown of black lace veiling black satin. Her shoulder bouquet was of pink roses and valley lilies. Mrs. A. P. Treadwell, the bride's aunt, was gowned in orchid shaded satin and she wore a shoulder bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies. Mrs. J. M. Teague, the bride's sister, wore her wedding gown of white satin and her shoulder bouquet was pink roses and valley lilies. The reception rooms of the home were elaborately decorated with pink roses, white chrysanthemums, smilax and palms.

The bride's table was overlaid with a handsome Florentine lace cover. In the center was the bride's cake in three tiers, resting on a mound of pink roses and valley lilies. Silver candlesticks holding burning pink tapers, small silver baskets filled with pink roses and plateaux of pink roses added to the beautiful table decorations. Misses Frances Bake and Frances Lyon served punch from a bowl embedded in vari-colored flowers. Miss Eunice Howsmon was in charge of the bride's book.

During the evening Mr. Ebersole and his bride left for a wedding trip to New York. They will return by boat to Charleston, S. C., where they will spend a few days before coming to Atlanta to spend Thanksgiving with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Springer. They will make their home in Birmingham. The bride's traveling costume was a smart two-piece model made of navy blue kittens' ear satin. Tailored silver and navy blue braid trimmed the costume and she wore a hat to match adorned with a silver ornament.

Out-of-Town Guests.

Among the out-of-towns guests attending the wedding were Arthur Springer, of Greenville, S. C.; Mrs. W. A. Freeman, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Baker, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. Cleora Deane, of Griffin; Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Garland, of Griffin; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Andrew Crawford, of Columbus, Ga.; Mrs. Charles Jordan, of Columbus, Ga.; Mrs. Rosa V. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Ebersole, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Brown, C. F. The Story of Fort Wayne On the St. Mary's River

At the beginning of the Revolutionary war Charles and Germyn Wright, brothers of Sir James Wright, the last royal governor of Georgia, were owners of a large tract of land in the parish of St. Marys, from which, together with the parish of St. Thomas, Camden county, Georgia was created.

The Wrights built a fort on their land and called it Fort Touyn, after the general of Florida. It became a rendezvous for the tories and outlaws in east and west Florida. The band, which bore the appellation of Florida Rangers, made raids on the plantations of the settlers in southeast Georgia and carried away such property as was movable to Fort Toyyon. The destruction of the fort therefore became a matter of great importance.

For the purpose of routing the band Captain John Baker collected about 70 mounted volunteer militia and marched to the St. Marys river, maintaining the greatest secrecy in his operations, with the hope of surprising the occupants and demolishing the fort. The party approached undiscovered within a short distance of the fort, taking advantage of a thick wood for concealment until dark, believing the nighttime would be the most favorable for a surprise. Captain Baker had been informed that a body of Indians had encamped in the vicinity of the fort and that the combined force of the enemy would greatly outnumber him; therefore his hope of success depended upon surprise and a rapid retreat after the fort had been destroyed. Unfortunately he was discovered by a negro of the Wrights, who reported his number and approach. An alarm of three cannon was fired from the fort and was answered with eight guns by the schooner St. John, which lay two miles down the river. A firing of musketry commenced, but without effect. Captain Baker concluded that a reinforcement would be sent to the garrison from the schooner, and in order to cut off the communications, ordered a party to a landing below the fort, from whence the armed boats were seen. The party concealed themselves until the boats came near the shore, when they opened fire. Several of the crew of the boat in front were killed and wounded and the others called for quarter, came ashore and surrendered. Among the prisoners were Captain Backus, of the navy and Lieutenant Bucker of the army. The other boats escaped under cover of the night.

From one of the prisoners, who was wounded, information was secured that a large body of Indians was encamped on the opposite side of the river not far distant from the fort. When Captain Baker received this information it was early in the night and he retreated eight or nine miles and encamped. Daniel and James McGirth, who were pirates in Baker's command, were both on guard and devised and carried into execution a plan for stealing the horses belonging to the party, and deserting to the enemy. For this act of treachery and expertness in stealing Daniel McGirth was appointed lieutenant colonel of the Florida Rangers and afterward improved on the act by which he had gained promotion.

Daniel McGirth became a famous Tory outlaw and so great were the crimes he committed that his name carried terror and consternation to all the women and children of Georgia during the darkest days of the revolution. He is mentioned frequently in history, but the fact that on Camden county soil he committed the act of treachery that stamped him a Judas is not generally known.

Baker's expedition against Fort Touyou was a failure, but the fort was afterwards abandoned and destroyed by the British to keep it from falling into the hands of the Americans. All traces ofits former existence are lacking today, but it will long be remembered because of the fact that near it was committed an act of treachery whereby the British gained an officer whose crimes made him a terror to civilized people and whose deeds remain behind him as ineffaceable as they are sanguinary.—Contributed.

Oglethorpe D. A. R. Stresses Several Special Activities

At the November meeting of the Oglethorpe chapter, D. A. R., at Columbus Thursday afternoon several special activities of the D. A. R. work of national interest were stressed. This chapter will make all honor roll requirements, and at the last meeting voted to make a contribution to Kenmore. Woodrow Wilson day will be observed during the month with appropriate exercises, and the chapter also voted to buy the Lucy Cook Peal Memorial books, realizing the need for preserving Georgia records.

During the first week in November the Oglethorpe chapter sponsored a course of study in parliamentary law, thereby giving to the members as well as their friends an opportunity of learning parliamentary law and also taking this opportunity to reimburse the treasury. The membership of the Oglethorpe chapter (one of the largest in the state) is limited to 100 members, and this quota is almost filled. As the meetings are held in the homes of the members, this method has been found necessary.

Three members act as joint hostesses at each meeting, the names being arranged in groups alphabetically. At this meeting Mrs. Hamlin Ford, Mrs. Jack Ellis and Mrs. R. E. Farish were joint hostesses, the meeting taking place at the home of Mrs. Ford. The literary feature of the afternoon was a well-prepared talk on "The Picture's Art in the Colonies" following out the theme of the program: "Intimate Glimpses of Life in the Colonies." Mrs. C. L. Mullin was the speaker.

Most attractive is the year book, the other subjects to be discussed during the year including "Religious Life in the Colonies," "Colonial Neighborliness and Courtesy," "Costumes of Colonial Times," "Popular Diversions," "Courtship in Colonial Days," "The Occasional Journey," and "By the Colonial Hearthstone."

R. E. Lee Chapter U. D. C., Meets.

At the November meeting of Robert E. Lee chapter, U. D. C., of College Park, Mrs. J. J. Harris, state editor, was the honor guest. She gave words of praise to the chapter for faithful work in the past and earnestly bespoke co-operation.

The delegates, Mrs. R. L. Proctor and Mrs. J. T. Heard, gave reports of the recent state convention at Covington. The social hour was presided over by the hostesses, Mrs. Mason and Mrs. D. R. Nesbitt.

The president, Miss Mary Gray, appointed Mrs. R. D. Gray chairman to present resolutions of sorrow upon the death of Mrs. E. L. Connolly.

Bainbridge Chapter Meets With Mrs. Ramsey.

Bainbridge chapter, D. A. R., met at the home of Mrs. T. R. Ramsey on November 2, with Mrs. Ramsey and Mrs. C. C. Chappell as hostesses. There were 19 members present. The registrar, Mrs. J. Clarence Rudisill, reported the addition of two new members, Miss Alice Wimberley and Mrs. S. S. Brinson.

The chapter voted to interest the city and county school children, through Superintendents Elean and Bower, respectively, in a national essay contest on the subject of "Forestry Conservation," the state prizes on the same to be awarded shortly before Christmas. The chapter voted to assume the purchase of a chair in Memorial hall in the new D. A. R. building in Washington. It was decided that each member shall give a party to at least four people who are not members of the D. A. R. during the next month, asking a small contribution from each, to raise money for the chair fund.

The chapter instituted the study of the development of our national flag, this to be a part of the social hour at each meeting. Following the business session the poem, "In Flanders' Field," with a description of its conception and a brief sketch of the war history of its author, was read by Mrs. Z. B. Subers. Mrs. Arthur Hagan read a history of "The First and Present Thanksgiving."

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY NOVEMBER 13th, 1927

Scores of lives are reported lost and the property damage will run into the heavy millions as result of the terrible floods in the New England States. Photo shows part of the flood area at White River Junction, Vt., one of the hardest hit sections.

WHO'S AFRAID?—Maybe this jungle cat is, but certainly not Bebe Daniels, who looks the essence of composure. She's to be seen in "She's a Sheik" at the Howard theater this week.

WIDOW OF MEXICAN LEADER—Mrs. Encarnacion Elias de Gomez, widow of General Elias Gomez, of Mexico, who was executed by a firing squad, and her two children, Anaito and Francisco. The photograph was taken in Los Angeles, where Mrs. Gomez fled with her children. (Herbert.)

WINSOME WITCH—Miss Sara Bradley, who won first prize at the Shrine Halloween ball recently. (Kenneth Rogers.)

HERO—The late William A. McAllister, Jr., of Fort Gaines, Ga., whose father will receive a Carnegie medal for his son's heroism in attempting a rescue of a drowning boy—an attempt which cost Mr. McAllister his life.

RECENT AUGUSTA BRIDE—Mrs. Edward Waterman Hager, of Augusta, Ga., nee Miss Elizabeth Schweigart Burdell, whose marriage with Edward Waterman Hager, was solemnized recently. (Montell.)

HO, HUM, ANOTHER "MOST PERFECT"—This young lady has been officially designated by Florenz Ziegfeld as America's "most perfect blonde," if that means anything. She is Miss Rose Gallagher, daughter of a New York broker. (Herbert.)

CARRYING ON—Eleanora Ambrose, wife and dancing partners of the late Maurice Mouvet, internationally famous dancer, is continuing instruction of Charles Sabin, her husband's pupil. (Herbert.)

NO RACE SUICIDE HERE—A scene in a Jewish farming colony in Russia, featured by the abundance of youngsters. Hardships of pioneering on undeveloped lands have not interfered with ever-increasing families.

SMILING THROUGH—Jewish girls unaccustomed to manual labor, have taken up the hoe and spade on farm colonies with light hearts and are proving no small factor in revitalizing the soil of soviet Russia.

Jews Lead Russia "Back to the Farm"

Led by its Jewish inhabitants, who are financed by American and other foreign funds, soviet Russia now is undergoing an extensive "back to the soil" movement. Here is another page of interesting Russian photographs snapped by E. M. Newman and presented exclusively in this section by The Constitution, showing the land-development activities of the land of the Reds.

TYPICAL RUSSIAN FARMHOUSE—These scrupulously-clean homesteads were photographed on the Rosenwald colony's main street.

RUSSIAN-JEWS WHO HAVE GONE "BACK TO THE FARM"—Types of colonists found commonly in Russian rural sections nowadays. The venerable old farmer once was a prosperous merchant.

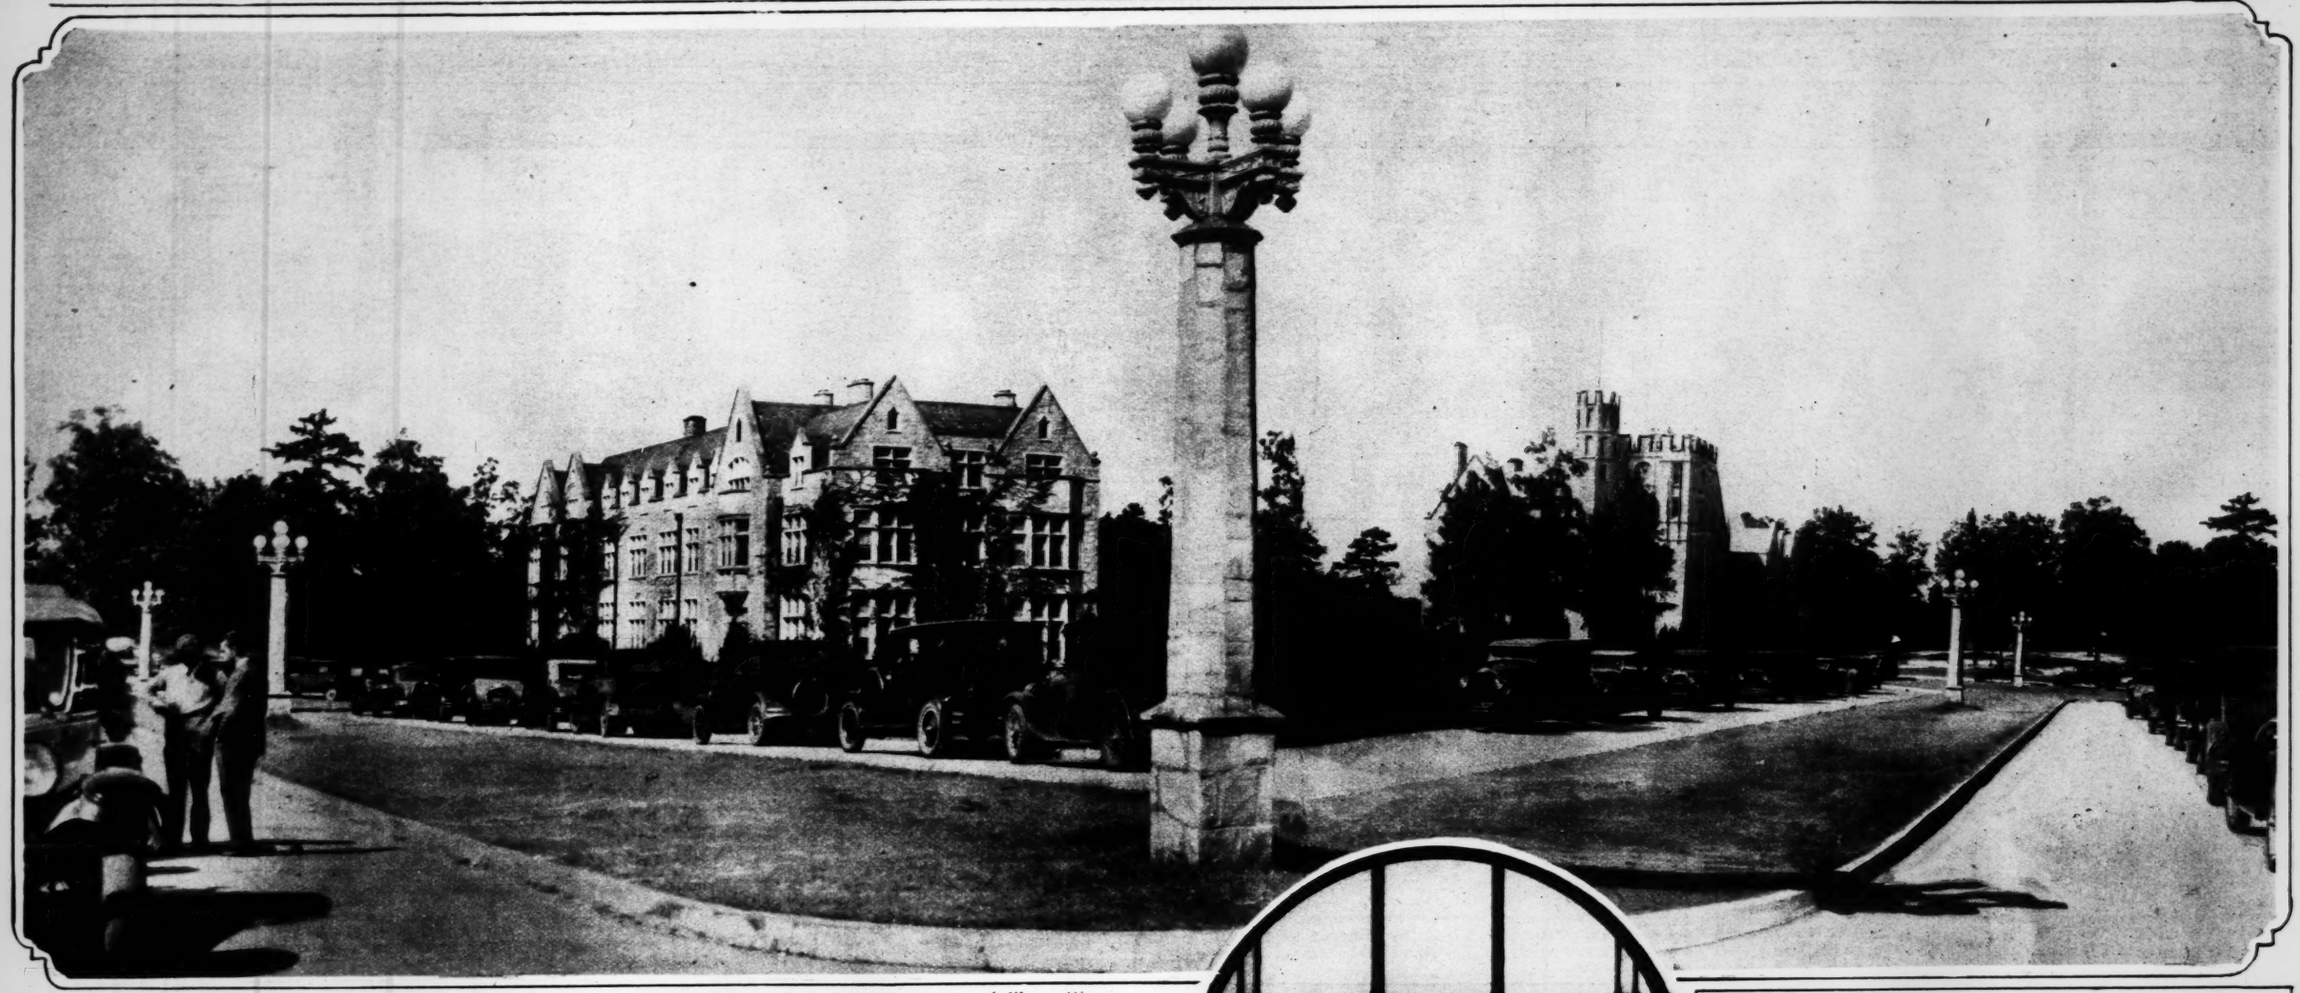

FOREIGN MILK MAIDS—Jewish girls milking cows on one of the farm colonies of Russia. These girls formerly were employed in a bank in Minsk and both were expert stenographers.

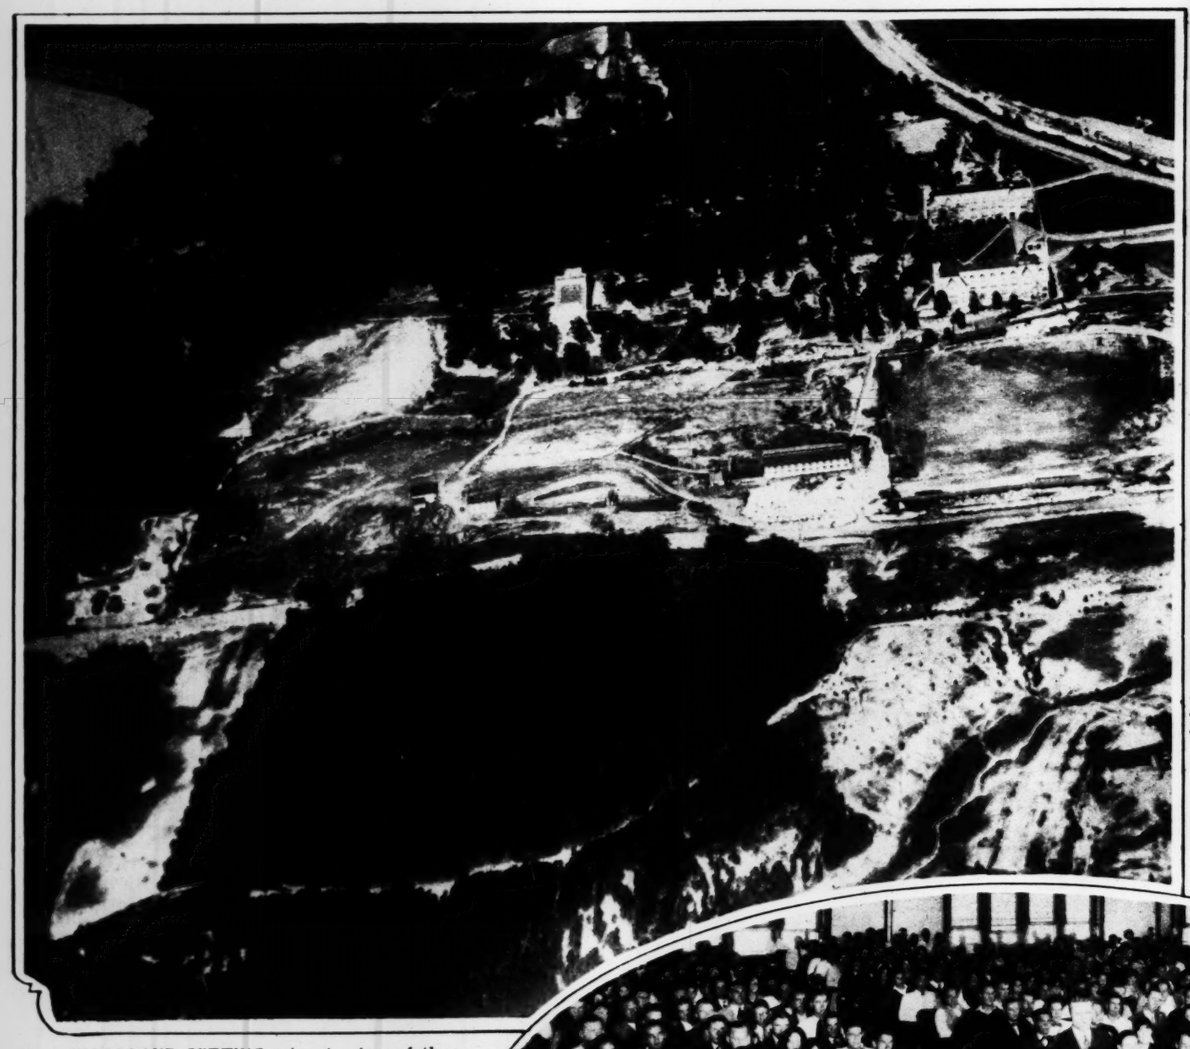

TILLERS OF THE SOIL—A group of Jewish colonists who live in the Rosenwald community, named after the famous Chicago philanthropist, Julius Rosenwald. The colony was started three years ago and now is one of the most prosperous in Russia.

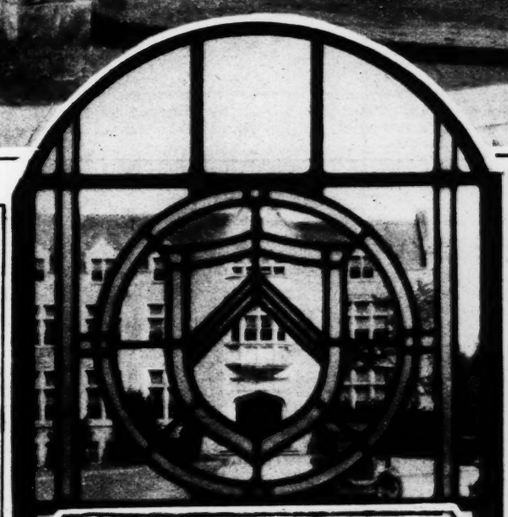

VICTIMS OF SOVIET NATIONALIZATION—The husbands of these Jewish women lost all their possessions when everything in Russia was nationalized, and now they are starting life anew on one of the farm colonies.

Striking photographs of the wonderful development of the institution within a few years, with new granite buildings second to none in beauty or more lasting quality, in the whole country.

J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga, who has already given nearly half a million dollars to Oglethorpe now offers $250,000 more if the donation is duplicated, and Dr. Thornwell Jacobs is about to institute a campaign to complete this $500,000 fund.

RAPIERS have flashed in the whirling wake of such a Spanish dancer—but here we have Miss Helen Lowe, as a senorita in the junior stunts staged at Wesleyan college recently.

Exclusively New!
The Seville

TAKING the name of the most romantic of old Spanish cities, rich with finest tradition and overflowing with motifs of rarest charm, this pattern expresses an exclusive dignity and refinement in solid silver. Its name signifies the birthplace of Murillo and Valasques, scene of the operas "Carmen," "Don Giovanni" and "The Barber of Seville," garden capital of Ferdinand and Isabella, where Columbus sold a queen his dream of a new world.

Where necessary the exquisite motifs have been translated into lovely curves, for "The Seville" is an open stock pattern with bowls, dishes, and useful accessories to match the flat silver and tea and coffee services.

Supreme craftsmanship is shown in the new Vargneuo (vargwen-yo) ornament taken from the metal work on the most typical of Spanish pieces, the vargneuo, or family chest. This gem of designing is a lasting impression of loveliness

How People Banish Fat

Not always by abnormal exercise or diet. That is hard and slow. Most people who try it lack the patience to continue.

Another method has in late years attained enormous use. It is easy, pleasant, scientific, based on modern research. The slender figures now so common are largely due to that.

That method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others. Now in almost every circle there are people who can show you what they do.

Marmola contains a substance which, in the body, turns food into fuel and energy rather than into fat. The complete prescription is stated in every box. Also the reasons for results. This to banish any fear of harm and to let you know just why you get the benefits that come.

Go try Marmola, as myriads of people for two decades have done. Not only for new beauty, but new health and vitality. Simply take four tablets daily until you get the results desired. Then, in kindness to your friends, tell them what Marmola does. Go order before you forget it and watch the delightful change.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

Service

The demand of the experienced traveler, fulfilled

The experienced traveler puts the Dinkler Hotels ahead of all others in the South because the wisdom of his choice has been proven time and time again. He knows, that above all else, the guests of every Dinkler Hotel are given their individual ideas of service with an exacting degree of satisfaction.

Impossible it is to set up modes of service and expect them to suit everyone. Therefore, it is asked that guests make known exactly what is wanted, and then let the conveniences that are available in each Dinkler Hotel adapt themselves to that guest's individual desires of service.

Suggestions will receive immediate response, for the great army of Dinkler employees are ever ready to serve. This, together with moderate rates and centrally located hotels, is accountable for the fulfillment of the ideal service demanded by experienced travelers

Teeth may shine like tinted pearls

STILL . . .

Too often, all seems so safe because teeth gleam in their natural whiteness. Then suddenly Pyorrhea swoops down on the unwary.

Clean teeth still gleam. But gums break down and Pyorrhea poison gets in its deadly work. It sweeps through the system destroying precious health and leaving in its wake a trail of havoc, often causing such disorders as stomach trouble, anemia, nervousness, neuritis. And beauty vanishes with lost health.

As the penalty for neglect, 4 out of 5 after forty and thousands younger pay Pyorrhea's high price.

These Odds Can Be Bettered—Easily

For safety's sake, protect your gums as well as your teeth. Visit your dentist regularly. Have him examine your teeth and gums. And start using Forhan's for the Gums, today.

As a dentifrice alone you would prefer Forhan's. Without the use of harsh abrasives it easily restores teeth to their natural whiteness and protects them against acids which cause decay.

In addition, if used regularly and in time, it helps to keep gums sound and healthy and so safeguards precious health against the attack of dread Pyorrhea.

This dentifrice is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S., for many years a Pyorrhea specialist. It is compounded with the correct percentage of Forhan's Pyorrhea Liquid, used by dentists in the treatment of Pyorrhetic conditions.

Play Safe

It is folly to wait for danger signs, for gums to bleed and recede from teeth, or for teeth to loosen in their sockets. A little care now will protect teeth and gums and preserve good health in the years to come. Start using Forhan's for the Gums regularly, morning and night. At all druggists—in tubes, 35c and 60c. Forhan Company, New York.

Formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S.

If gums bleed easily, if they are tender, apply Forhan's. With the index finger vigorously rub with a circular motion the upper gums, both inside and out, until they feel invigorated. Then massage lower gums. Do this regularly and gums will soon become firm and sound.

With your thumb and forefinger massage the gums both inside and out and the roof of the mouth as well. Massage until you feel the pleasant tingle of increased blood circulation.

Your gums should always look like this—even, sound and healthy. Keep them so by exercising them. Twice daily, massage them with Forhan's for the Gums—the dentifrice that safeguards the health of the gums and cleanses teeth.

We Were Right. More and more people are realizing the importance of oral hygiene. Every morning and every night, they use Forhan's Antiseptic Refreshant. It protects mouth nose and throat from infection. It keeps breath sweet and fresh. It is safe, effective and pleasant. Try it.

The Worth While Man

By ROBERT HICHENS

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason Thought Most of Her Neighbors Were Plain Bores Till Mysterious Lord Lionel Stepped Through Her Drawing Room Window and Started a Free Lecture on the World.

"I couldn't resist taking a peep at your marvelous garden, so I came around informally," added the very agreeable voice.

"THAT'S the difficulty in the country, unfortunately," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason in her slightly hard, intellectual voice. "Nature—well, one has the blessed power of choosing your Nature. But when it comes to people, to what are called neighbors"—she made a slight gesture as if repelling an invisible something—"Why, then you are at the mercy of chance, fate, whatever you may choose to call it. There is nothing to prevent a rich pork butcher, from settling down next door to a famous philosopher. Neighbors; O, my dear Eleanor, you who live almost perpetually in London can probably scarcely imagine the dreadful associations that word holds for some of us who happen to be sensitive, who happen to care only for the worth while, not merely in art, literature, and music, but in people."

"Well, now, that gives me the courage to make a confession to you," said Lady Caroway. "I've always rather wondered at your buying a property and building this lovely house so near to Brankhurst."

"To Brankhurst!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, lifting her large, intellectual head a little. "What has Brankhurst got to do with it?"

"You are so sensitive about your neighbors that I've always wondered that you cared to make your home—one of your homes—so near a lunatic asylum."

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason laughed.

"Lunatics are not neighbors, dear!"

"Don't you ever see them?"

"Occasionally I see poor Lady Glenbarley—the Earl of Glenbarley's wife—driving with her keepers, or Lord Brighton motoring with his. (Brankhurst is the most expensive and luxurious asylum in England.) But lunatics are not at liberty to call on you, to invite you to their houses, to persist in expecting you to lavish hospitality on them."

"Supposing one of them escaped?"

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason smiled as only a very rich woman can smile.

"You evidently don't know much about Brankhurst. It's perhaps the most exclusive asylum in Europe."

"Well, but how can a lunatic be exclusive?"

"Cannot a lunatic be well born?"

"O, yes, of course!"

"Cannot a lunatic be wealthy?"

"Yes, no doubt."

"Brankhurst is specially arranged and run for such lunatics. They have their own apartments, furnished according——"

"Not surely according to their own individual taste," interpolated Lady Caroway.

"No, according to the taste of their nearest relatives or guardians. They have their own highly trained keepers."

"Are keepers trained—like setters?"

"You frivolous creature! They have their own carriages, horses, motor cars. Lord Brighton has lived there for over twenty years. He has a Rolls Royce and two charming looking keepers. A place like Brankhurst is no disadvantage to me. No; it's the neighbors I suffer from."

"Are they so dreadful? I thought Surrey and Sussex were full of interesting people. And as you're just on the border——"

"Surrey and Sussex are full of bores!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason emphatically.

"How unfortunate! But do they come and bore you?"

"They do. You see, I'm pretty well known."

"I should think so!"

"They've read about me in the papers. They've found out I have a salon in New York where all the famous men of the day used to come. Of course, since my husband's death I've given it up, but still——"

"But still—indeed!" murmured Lady Caroway, seriously.

"Then my connection with Shakespeare has made me known over here."

"Are you a relative of Shakespeare?"

"No, but I founded a library in Kansas and endowed a Shakespeare chair in connection with it, and my press agent—I mean that there was a lot about it in the papers over here."

"To be sure!"

"The result of it is that all the bores in Sussex and Surrey, and they are many, call upon me. Although I have been here now for two summers, I have not met a single really worth while man or woman who lives in my neighborhood. All my artistic and intellectual sustenance comes to me from London."

"By boat, rail, and motor," murmured Lady Caroway.

"You must have your little joke, dear. But you see the situation! O—here's Barstow bringing some more bores to bother me!"

"Mrs. Sampson and Miss Ellen Sampson!" announced Barstow, in a penetrating voice.

II.

"Barstow!"

"Madam?"

"I think it will be better if in future you say to callers that you are not sure whether I am at home or not and that you will go and see. Take their names and then come to me—if I am in, of course."

"Very well, madam."

Barstow left the room and Mrs. Chetwynde Mason glanced round it with a sigh. It was a lovely room, full of beautiful things, large, with windows open to an exquisite garden. A shaft of sunlight fell on her favorite Corregio, Christ with the woman taken in adultery. She thought of the view outside, a wide, blue, and lovely distance. And then she thought of Mrs. Sampson and Miss Ellen Sampson.

"If this lovely weather holds the rector intends to have the annual rummage sale out of doors in the rectory garden. Will you be there? Ellen's going to sell castoff garments, aren't you, Ellen?"

"Yes, mother."

No more of it! Henceforth Barstow should guard the house from intruders. She hadn't spent nearly twenty thousand pounds in order that——

"What is it now, Barstow?"

For Barstow was again advancing from the door that opened into the inner hall of the mansion.

"A gentleman has called, madam, and asked for you. At least he said to me"—and Barstow's baritone took on a more dignified tone—" 'Is your mistress at home?' "

"What name did he give?"

"He told me to say Lord Lionel Danesborough, madam."

"Lord Lion——"

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason paused abruptly and mentally scampered through Debrett. Danesborough! Let's see. That was surely the family name of the Dukes of Hampshire. Yes! One never met the present duke and duchess in society. They were both notoriously shy, and lived in great retirement at their lovely place, Morton Abbey. The duke had brothers—Danesboroughs. This must be one of them. She had never heard of a Danesborough living in her neighborhood. Still——

"Lord Lionel! O, of course! Show him in, Barstow, and——"

"May I come in?" said a pleasant voice somewhere.

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason started and turned round. In the embrasure of one of the drawing room windows stood a very tall man of perhaps forty-five, with a long, large featured face and large brown eyes that held a rather melancholy expression. His brown hair was thinning on a curiously narrow but well shaped head. He was extremely well dressed in country clothes and held a soft gray hat and a gold topped walking stick in one long fingered hand. He was really an ugly man, but he was the sort of ugly man whose obvious high breeding and quiet assurance are full of attractive power. And he had, as Mrs. Chetwynde Mason noticed, a magnificent figure.

"I couldn't resist taking a peep at your marvelous garden, so I came round informally," added the very agreeable voice.

And the slender figure stepped into the room.

Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, rather surprised, but with her usual complete composure, held out her hand.

"Very kind of you to come, Lord Lionel. Bring tea, please, Barstow."

"Yes, madam."

"Your lobelias are extraordinary," said the visitor, after pressing his hostess' hand. "Surely that must be a Correggio."

And he walked slowly toward the woman taken in adultery.

"Yes, it is," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason.

"Antonio Allegri," murmured the visitor. "A very fine specimen, too. The woman's attitude is masterly. You have been to Parma, of course?"

"Yes, of course—well, no, I have not—yet," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, in some slight confusion. "But I am going—probably this year."

"You ought to," said Lord Lionel, with a hint of reproach. "Until you have been to Parma and seen the cupolas there you cannot be said to know Correggio. By the way, it is quite untrue that his people were rich. They were neither rich nor poor. But no doubt you are aware that his father was comfortably off. So you have a Burnet-Jones, too. Do you know his 'Love Disguised as Reason'? But of course you do. My favorite picture—I'm speaking of his work—is his 'Chant d'Amour.' There is a rare ecstasy of romance in that. Isn't there?"

"Indeed there is! Do sit down, Lord Lionel."

"I see you have a fine piano," he said, walking over to a grand piano. "Are you fond of Wagner still?"

"Yes, very."

"So am I. But, you know, les jeunes are beginning to run him down. Bayreuth, so they tell me, is only frequented by the middle aged now. There is no doubt that while the reputation of Wagner begins to wane, the reputation of his adversary, Nietzche, waxes. Do you remember that passage in Nietzche's "Nietzche contra Wagner,' beginning, 'Richard Wagner, ostensively the most triumphant creature alive; as a matter of fact, though, a cranky and desperate decadent suddenly fell helpless and broken on his knees before the Christian cross'—do you?"

"I'm not quite—let me see—"

"You don't," he remarked, quietly, with just the least hint of intellectual regret. "No one can understand Wagner who has not studied Nietzche's attack on him. The great Charlatan! The great necromancer! Cagliostro in music! Have you been to Palmero?"

"Yes. I——"

"Guiseppe Malsoma—that was Gagliostro's real name—was born there, as, of course, you know. He died at San Leo. Gagliostro, Paganini, Wagner—there is an affinity between them. And Franz Liszt! What about him?"

He fixed his large, rather melancholy eyes on her dreamily and yet inquiringly.

"You think that he——"

"Hadn't he a touch of the charlatan, too? Saintly and naughty! For you know Liszt was naughty. When he lived a Tivoli in his old age he had two female servants, and he used to embrace them. They said so themselves when they, in their turn, were old. 'He was very fond of embracing us.' Those were their very words."

"Were they, really?"

"You didn't know it?"

Barstow and a saucy looking young footman appeared with a sumptuous tea, and Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, conscious unusually of ignorance, begged her remarkable visitor to come to the tea table.

"I am very fond of the music of Liszt," she said, striving after her usual authority as he sat down opposite to her. "His Hungarian rhapsodies——"

"Circus music!" said Lord Lionel, quietly. "Thank you." (He accepted a cup of tea and reached out gently for a bit of buttered toast.) "The real Liszt, the ascetic libertine, the Abbe with illegitimate children—him you will find in such things as 'Saint Stanislas' and 'La Gondole funebre.' You are familiar with them, of course? No!"

He sighed faintly like a man disconcerted, as a school inspector might be by the ignorance of a child unable to remember who Adam was.

"Do have some strawberry jam, Lord Lionel," was the best retort Mrs. Chetwynde Mason could muster.

"Thank you." (He took some.) "Is that vase I see in the distance standing on an ebony pedestal Etruscan?"

"Yes—no! Which vase? Do you mean——"

He felt for her, and put up to his eyes a double eyeglass circled with rims of tortoise shell.

"O, no, it wouldn't be Estruscan, would it? I thought you meant——

"It is Estrucan," he remarked, putting down the eyeglass and spreading some strawberry jam on his buttered toast. "Of the primitive period. Have you made a deep study of ceramics?"

"O, yes! At least—well, deep is a strong word, isn't it?"

"No study is worth very much unless it is deep—and wide. At Morton, my brother Hampshire's place, there is an Etruscan Amphora imitating the Greek style. It shows Alcestios and Admetus. You remember who Admetus was?"

"Of course I do. He was loved by Aphrodite and was killed by a wild boar when hunting."

"You are confusing him with Adonis. Admetus was king of Pherae, in Thessaly. Surely you remember his story? Euripides took it as the subject of his 'The Alcestis.' "

"O, to be sure!"

"And Browning—but, of course, you have studied Browning's "Balaustion's Adventure?"

"Of course. Who hasn't?"

"A great many people, I'm afraid. Noble poetry isn't read much in these days."

"O, but think of the Sitwells!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, with all the eagerness of one retaking a lost position.

"No," said Lord Lionel almost with severity. "I shall think of Homer. I shall think of Horace, of Virgil, of Ovid, especially of Horace."

He closed his expressive eyes for a moment and murmured:

"Nec lusisse pudet, sed non incidere ludum."

He opened them and added: "I hope you feel as he did about that?"

"I certainly do!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, with anxious conviction.

"You understand the classics?"

" 'No shame I deem it to have had my sport;
The shame had been in frolics, not cut short.' "

"Well, yes—in a certain degree. That is, I don't read them fluently, but I can pick them out——"

"Is is not seemly to 'pick out' in the classics. But why be ashamed to confess ignorance of them? I say with Cicero. 'Nec me pudet ut istos, fateri nescire quod nesciam.' When I do not know I am not ashamed to say so."

"But your knowledge, Lord Lionel, seems far reaching, quite remarkable, if I may say so."

"O, I took a first in classics at Oxford. But that's nothing."

"Some more tea?"

"Yes, if you are good enough to give me some. Are you fond of solving mathematical problems?"

"No," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, rather hastily. "I prefer the arts.

"Painting? Sculpture?"

"O, I love sculpture. What is your opinion of Epstein?"

"I know nothing about him. I have never heard of him. May I take some more of this delicious jam?"

"Do, please! But surely you must have——"

"Never, I assure you. He hasn't come my way. I was brought up on Michael Angelo, Donatello, Benvenuto Cellini, that rascal of genius. What do you think of Jacopo Della Quercia?"

"O, well—of course he is very fine, very fine indeed."

"I am not, like some men, ashamed to confess my ignorance when I do not know."

"What do you think of his Ilaria del Caretto at Lucca?"

"Wonderful! Marvelous!"

He fixed his eyes on her in a look that seemed to her piercing.

"You have visited Lucca?"

"O, yes—at least——"

"You haven't visited Lucca. Go there, when you have the time, and study Quercia."

"I will most certainly. I have always intended——"

With a vague look he seemed, but gently indeed, to rebuke her.

"Good intentions should be carried on into actions," he said, but not unkindly. "The philosophers tell us that fine thoughts should produce fine deeds. If you have always intended to go to Lucca in order to see the Ilaria del Carretto there you should yield yourself entirely to that intention—and go."

He laid a rather startling emphasis upon the final word.

"Are you a great traveler?" asked Mrs. Chetwynde Mason hastily, to make a diversion.

"I never travel now."

"Indeed! And—and you live in England?"

He looked slightly surprised.

"Of course. I live in this neighborhood. I have motored past your beautiful house several times and wished to enter it. But till today it has not been possible. So many engagements."

"Of course you must have! I thought I had seen you somewhere when you came in by the window with such pleasant informality."

"You have probably seen me motoring. I passed here only yesterday with a couple of men friends. You have probably seen us about together. We are inseparables."

He frowned slightly and looked out into the garden.

"Horticulture is evidently a hobby of yours," he said, after a very slight pause.

"Yes, indeed! I am a great gardener."

"Do you believe in bottom heat?"

"Bottom heat?" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason in a rather blank tone of voice.

"Don't you know that gardeners call artificial heat applied to the roots of plants bottom heat?"

"Do they? O, yes, to be sure! I remember now. Yes, I do believe in it—in certain cases."

"Which ones?"

"Well in—well—I—I think it depends a good deal on the nature of the soil."

"I don't. I think it depends on the nature of the plant. The optimum temperature best suited to a zonal pelargonium, for instance, is totally different from the optimum temperature which would give the best results which, say, an asplenium bulbiferum. Don't you agree with me when you really give your mind to it?"

"Yes, I do."

"I noticed as I came in that your fibrous rooted herbaceous plants are in fairly good condition. Your Pentstemons are healthy looking. But do you think it wise to mix the purple aubrietia with phloxes, as I see you have done in the border which runs toward that small painted arbor?"

"Perhaps that was a mistake. I will speak to my head gardener about it."

"That's a nice binding you have there. May I?" (He reached out toward a small table).

He picked up a book.

"This was bound in France. Possibly by Duru? Is it Duru?"

"Yes!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, firmly.

He opened the volume and looked at the inside of the lower edge of the cover.

"No, you're wrong. This binding is by Bauzonnet. Here is his signature in gold lettering."

"Then we were both mistaken," said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason with an

When Justice Triumphed

Aftermath of Shattuck Robbery Real Thriller—Banker Vowed to Run Down Gang — And He Did

ONE of the most relentless police pursuits in criminal history followed the sensational Shattuck robbery. Because of the brutality of the robbers, Albert Shattuck, aged retired banker of New York, swore an oath of vengeance against them, and he did not rest until every member of the band was behind the bars.

The case was extraordinary in many respects. It was a crook play, a detective story and a movie thriller all in one. The big scene, in which Shattuck, his wife and five servants found themselves locked in an airtight wine cellar, in danger of suffocation, rivals the most exciting of melodramas. The reader may remember that Shattuck and his fellow prisoners escaped from the vault with but the aid of a small penknife and a ten-cent piece, just in the nick of time.

Gabriel Alphonse Mourey, the suave ex-butler who was really one of the most clever criminals of France, might have stepped out of a Broadway crook drama. He was cruel, a complete villain. And, appropriately, he is now serving life on Devil's Island.

* * * *

One cannot expect a desperate criminal to be thoughtful of other people's feelings, but had the Shattuck robbers been a trifle more considerate on the afternoon of April 2, 1922, it is possible that justice might not have scored such a complete victory in this sensational case. For it was their cruelty that inflamed Albert Shattuck and led him to swear an oath of unquenchable vengeance against them.

Mr. Shattuck, a quiet, dignified aristocrat of 69, lived with his wife, a daughter of former Mayor William L. Strong, at 19 Washington square, north, New York. Their home was one of those exceedingly respectable old red brick houses that front the square, full of valuable old furniture and paintings, silverware and other things becoming to a house of wealth. Shattuck was a retired banker who had been a president of the exclusive Washington Square association.

One never saw his name in the papers. During most of the months of the year, the home on Washington square was boarded up while Shattuck and his wife occupied their beautiful estate in Lenox, Mass. The couple had been summering in Lenox for forty years. They had lived a happy life.

But fate was to play this man and his wife some dastardly tricks. Much as he abhorred publicity, Albert Shattucw was destined to become the impelling force of a most relentless manhunt. He was to become a man with a fixed idea. That idea was to get the brutes who had mishandled his wife.

Begins in 1917.

The story really begins in 1917 when Shattuck hired, through an employment agency, a suave, well-mannered man named Henri Boilet to serve as butler in the Washington square home. We know now that this man was Gabriel Alphonse Mourey, one of the cleverest criminals that ever came out of France, and that he hired himself out as a butler with the one idea of robbing the Shattucks.

Mourey deceived his employers completely. They were complimenting themselves upon their splendid butler when he stole $12,000 from the Shattuck safe and fled the country.

That was in December, 1917.

Mourey returned to France and pursued his criminal career in that country and other countries on the continent—and in the spring of 1922 he came back to New York determined to repeat his triumph at 19 Washington square, north. He gathered several assistants, instructed them on their duties, and on the morning of April 2 set to work.

Preferred to Wait.

He knew his ground thoroughly, of course. He knew the layout of the house as perhaps even Shattuck himself did not know it. He knew, too, that the Shattuck household was old-fashioned, subject to unchangeable routine. He knew where Mr. and Mrs. Shattuck slept, what time they would arise, what time the servants would be up and about, and what time they would eat.

Shortly before dawn Mourey walked rapidly along the darkened street and stopped in front of No. 19. Quickly he lifted the metal cover of the coal hole in the sidewalk and lowered himself into the cellar. Presently three other men appeared and followed Mourey down the coal hole.

Now the ordinary housebreaker would probably have proceeded at once to looting, but not Mourey. He preferred to wait for exactly the right moment. That moment did not come until hours later.

Until 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon —it was a Sunday—the four robbers lay concealed in the coal, and then Mourey gave the signal for the attack. He knew that at this time the five servants would sit down to luncheon in their basement dining room and that Mr. and Mrs. Shattuck would be upstairs in their apartments resting after their Sunday dinner.

Three of the men entered the servants' dining room with drawn revolvers and commanded quiet. They bound the two men servants and carried them into the wine cellar, an airtight vault. The three women servants, frightened half to death by the robbers, were also bundled into the vault. This was all done within a few moments.

Mourey, in the meanwhile, ascended alone to the second floor. He was masked. He entered Mrs. Shattuck's room and seized the aged woman by the throat to terrify her into silence. Involuntarily she cried out at the sight of this dreadful figure, masked and smeared with coal dust. Her husband heard the cry and rushed in from the library.

Dramatic Climax.

The sight he saw remained with him always after that—until he died. The sight of this beast choking his wife enraged and horrified Shattuck as nothing else could possibly have done. It was the supreme outrage.

But Mourey was in command that day. Coolly he leveled his revolver at Shattuck's chest and ordered him to stand. Then he directed the couple to walk ahead of him into the cellar, where they were pushed into the pitch-black, airless vault. When Mrs. Shattuck protested, the robbers reviled her.

"We will die in here!" exclaimed Shattuck.

"Then die!" returned one of the thieves. "What is the difference?"

The door was closed and locked.

It was a situation such as one might find in a book of fiction. And the climax was even more dramatic.

The women servants became hysterical and screamed for help, but no sound penetrated to the street, only a few feet distant, where people were constantly passing. Shattuck threw himself against the door—it resisted his efforts. He searched about the blackness of the vault for some instrument with which to break down the door. But it was a fruitless search.

"We will die! We will die!" the women moaned. "We will suffocate!"

Shattuck ran his fingers over the massive lock, which was fastened to the inside of the vault with long rusted screws. He saw now that their only hope lay in loosening those screws and detaching the lock. But there were no tools there for this work, and the only things of any possible use that Shattuck could find in his pockets were a penknife and a worn ten-cent piece.

Desperately he began to work with these. The minutes fled. Half an hour he toiled and still the screws could not be removed. He began to find himself gasping for air. The servants continued to moan and pray as though they were already lost.

Echoing the Cry.

And then at last Shattuck succeeded in loosening the screws. With a final wrench he detached the lock. The prisoners fell out of the vault, gasping and very thankful.

Charles Zuang, the butler then employed, and another man servant rushed to the basement entrance and out to Washington square, calling for help, while Shattuck ascended to the upper floor of the house. He discovered to his amazement that the robbers were still in the house!

But they were leaving very rapidly when Shattuck appeared. As they ran from the street door, he followed them, shouting for the police.

Within a few moment all Washington square was echoing with the cry of the chase, and the result was the capture of Eugenio Diaset, a French sailor, a few blocks from the scene. Diaset had jewelry in every pocket, thousands of dollars worth. The robbers had taken about $80,000 worth in all.

Diaset said Mourey, whom he knew only as Henri, had picked him up in New York and furnished him with money pending the robbery. He gave the police information which led to the arrest of Maurice Bagnoli, another member of the band, in Jersey. Both named Henri as the man who had planned the robbery.

But Henri had vanished.

Shattuck, however, was sure that the man had been his former butler who had robbed him some five years before. The retired banker announced that he would devote all his time to running down the criminals, and that he would spare no expense in the search. It was learned that Mrs. Shattuck, shocked and nreve-wracked by the experience, had vowed never to enter the house again until the robbers had been caught.

The New York police sent notices all over the world with Henri Boilet's Bertillon record, and with an offer of $15,000 reward for his capture, alive or dead. The French police found the man's fingerprints and identified him as Mourey, who had escaped from the prison colony on Devil's Island while serving seven years for attempted murder.

Brig. Chief Chollet, one of the best men on the Paris police force, was assigned to the case. He found presently that Mourey's father, living in Saint Maur, one of the Paris suburbs, had recently returned from a hospital, so the detective entered the house as as official of the hospital.

He said he was a collector and asked the elderly Mourey if he or his family could pay for his treatment at the hospital, where he had been cared for free. The detective inquired whether Mourey's three sons could contribute.

The father answered for two of the sons but, questioned about Gabriel, he said he had not seen this son for several years and had no idea where he might be.

The Painter.

While Chollet, the detective, was in conversation with Mourey, a third person was in the room, a workman, who was on a ladder painting the ceiling. He had listened to what was being said and once or twice had turned his head. Chollet caught a glimpse of the man's face. He thought he saw a strong likeness to Mourey's much-sought-after son.

The detective wasn't sure, however, and was about to leave when the workman came down the ladder, said he had taken a liking to the old man, and then offered to pay the hospital expenses. Chollet said that would be a rather irregular procedure and withdrew, confident that this was Alphonse Mourey.

With another detective, Chollet came the next day to arrest the man wanted for the Shattuck robbery, but Mourey, on seeing them approach, ran out of the house, leaped over some garden walls and again disappeared completely.

The police watched his family and friends without finding a single clew to his whereabouts. Then the father died and, knowing that the family would resent the presence of strangers in the house, the detectives came in as undertakers. They laid out the corpse and prepared it for burial. Thus they were able to watch every one in the house without arousing any suspicion.

But Alphonse Mourey did not come back.

Next the police learned of a mistress of Mourey's and her they shadowed religiously for many weeks. Mourey, however, had apparently trained her well, for invariably she seemed to be able to lose the detectives, sometimes changing trolley cars as often as three or four times while on the way to visit her sweetheart. Finally the police took a conductor into their confidence and from him they learned that the girl went to Gourney, a little town near Paris.

Three inspectors were sent to Gourney. Two appeared as employees taking a vacation. They fished in the Seine. A third was disguised as a stonemason. Before long they recognized Mourey, though he had disguised himself.

A Gun Battle.

The next day while they were all together in a restaurant, the three detectives suddenly pounced on Mourey. With tremendous strength he knocked down two of the men and drew a revolver. He had fired one shot, wounding one of the detectives, when he fell under a stream of five bullets from the man who was still on his feet.

That was in October, 1923.

While Mourey was recuperating from his wounds and awaiting trial in Paris, the fourth and last member of the band was captured in Marseilles. He was Paul Camilleri, known as the

POETICAL FANCIES

LAMENT AT DUSK

The pink of the sunset sky fades into somber gray,
The shadows are upon the land. The dusk
Is here again; another dying day,
And years and years of days that die away
Stretch on ahead. When I am dead
And all the prayers for me are said,
And these poor, useless hands have turned to clay,
There will be no more cruel dusks for me!
No brooding ghosts to mourn with me the dying day.

This was our hour. I waited on my porch for you,
Listening for your whistle, for your step
Upon the walk. I peered the shadows through
And waiting thus and watching, still I knew
That soon a falling night would find me there alone,
And you and all our happiness would be gone.
No more your crooked smile, the lovingness of you,
No ecstacy, or breathless rapture of your kiss!
Gone happy hours of which we had too few.

I hate this gloomy hour more as time goes by,
For I miss you, want you, yearn for you.
By day in sunlight the sleeping memories lie,
But at dusk they wake, and stir within my Breast, until I long to sob and cry aloud your name
And forget that my wild longing would be shame.
Shame! Oh, my beloved, remember it was I
That sent you from me, without tear or sigh.
A sacrifice that making meant to die.

THE VALLEY OF YOUNG HARRIS.

Say not that Georgia has no mountain peaks
Where heaven bends to hold communion with Earth's mortals. Go, behold the valley of Young Harris. There await the dawn's delay
Till thou canst view, as from the sea the gleam
Of distant city spires, a molded mass
Of beauty. But yon circling range, now gold,
Now purple; now bedight with gay mirage
Of rainbow hue, as wears the morn,—Ah! what
That man e'er made, what row of pyramids,
Or votive shafts, or trade's cathedral heights
Can so refine the soul of him who here
Within the fold of God's great handiwork
Doth rest, here in the valley of Young Harris?

GREAT OVERNIGHT!

Great overnight! Ah, no, not so—
Greatness just crowning itself, you know:
Each little act so thoroughly planned,
Each little link kept well in hand
'Till the day of completeness dawns abright
Bringing with it the sudden light
Of fame and renown, and loud applause
To the one who wonders—why all the noise—
For his thoughts were concerned over deeper things—
The act of conquering the air with wings:
He wants but to fly and lead the way.
And show the fledglings the safest way.
So, when victory comes, 'tis victory for all:
He has answered Humanity's Progress Call!

Great overnight! Ah, no, not so:
Greatness just crowning itself, you know.

DWELLINGS.

We'll build a house, my Love and I,
Among the poplar leaves,
And birds from out the summer sky
Will sing beneath the eaves.
And we will have a garden wall
With apple-blooms above it;
And he and I will own it all,
And he and I will love it.

My Love and I will build a home,
And make a garden there;
For morning dew and rain will come
To keep it fresh and fair.
We'll build a home of wind and sky,
Of sun and sudden laughter,—
And we will live, my Love and I,
Within it ever after.

We'll build a house, my Love and I,
Upon a craggy hill,
And it will stand against the sky,
Alone and proud and still.
For I will have an iron wall
To guard my castle gate,
And cold and grey the rain will fall,
And long the sun will wait.

My Love and I will build a place
Where flowers never bloom,
For there will be no garden space
To blossom in the gloom.
So shall we live, my Love and I,
Alone and proud and cold,—
And none will know if we should die,
Nor care when we are old.

FAITH THROUGH PRAYER.

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for;
The evidence of things not seen."

Lord help my faith: I see:
Substance alone is Thee.
That I through faith may rest serene,
Though Thy face nor form I have not seen.
Help me! before I dare to ban,
More faith to have in my fellow man.
Help me to labor with might and main,
Believing my labors are not in vain.
I can not take a single step,
Without faith that Thou will help.
If through faith's ear I hear Thy call,
Thine commands obey, I can not fall.

RESURRECTION.

"We who are about to die, salute thee,"
The trees of Autumn say,
"We flaunt our most gorgeous banners,
We toss our arms, blithesome and gay."

These glorious leaves now dancing,
All golden, and russet and red,
Soon will be sere, and trodden, and blown
Somewhere, with the rest of their dead.

But think of them in their last splendor
When you see trees stripped and cold—
Their arms stretched naked to Heaven,
Remember their scarlet and gold.

Remember, too, soft Spring breezes—
Then their nakedness laugh to scorn—
They'll be resurrected in beauty
When their little new leaves are born.

—MAY THOMAS MILAM.

MY STAR.

If I can but keep my way until night
O'er rugged paths of sin;
If I can but keep you, my love, in sight;
Then, blessed God, I win!

—JENNIE M. DeLOACH.

A BONNY LASS.

She's Autumn's gale;
Her tresses hold
The sunbeams gold
In a burnished jail.

She's Winter's storm;
In flashing eyes
The lightning lies,
And dark clouds form.

She's blushing Spring;
With rounded cheek
And dimples sleek,
A gladsome thing.

She's Summer's smile;
Her ruby lips,
With clever quips,
Men's hearts beguile.

As Seasons pass—
She's one and all,
(And Spring or Fall)
A Bonny Lass.

—CLAUDE JOHNSON.

GEORGIA'S HILLS.

I love the hills of Georgia
When Spring is in the air,
And the red bud and the dogwood
Are blooming everywhere.
When every tree is budding
And the birds begin to sing,
I love the hills of Georgia,
I love them in the Spring.

I love the hills of Georgia
When the languor in the air
Whispers o'er hills and valleys
That Summer time is here.
When the fruits and melons ripen
And the cotton fields grow white,
I love the hills of Georgia
With all my strength and might.

I love the hills of Georgia
When the days are growing cold,
And Autumn's busy fingers
Tint the leaves with red and gold.
When over in the meadow
You can hear the Bob White call,
I love the hills of Georgia,
I love them in the fall.

I love the hills of Georgia,
When the winds of Winter blow,
And you draw your coat around you
'Mid the flakes of falling snow.
Ever will the hills of Georgia
Fill my heart with love sublime,
I love the hills of Georgia,
I love them all the time.

A Fight With Cossacks.

WHEN I got to Samara, I hurried off to see my parents.

They were not at home. My little brother was playing in the tiny, dirty courtyard. He took me into a little, desolate room, like a beggar's. It was clear that my parents were living in extreme poverty. How could I help them? My father came in; he looked older, thinner. He did not display any very great joy at seeing me, and listened indifferently to my account of how I was living and what I intended to do.

"We are getting on badly, very badly!" said he, without looking at me. "I have no regular employment. . . ."

Looking through the window, I saw my mother enter the yard with a bundle, covered with canvas, over her shoulder; then she entered the room, greeted me joyfully, and with a look of embarrassment set down her bundle and pushed it into a corner.

"Yes," said my father, "our poverty has driven your mother to begging. All day long, she wanders about, asking alms in the name of Christ!"

The incident weighed on my heart. It was sad to feel myself powerless, unable to help.

I spent two days at Samara, and then went with the company to Buzuluk, a little town where huge swine wander through all the streets. Pigs, fowls and sheep also promenaded in the little gardens of the public assembly rooms.

From Buzuluk we went to Uralsk to play there in the presence of the heir to the throne, the Czarevitch, but, as we had some time to spare, we determined to go to Orenburg and set out over the steppes in the country-carts.

It was broiling summer weather, and we were tormented with thirst. On both sides of the road lay heaps of watermelons. Of course we chorus singers took advantage of this luscious gift of heaven. To avoid the heat we traveled by night, and suddenly one night we were stopped by the howling of some horsemen, who had caught us up and were firing off muskets. What was it? We thought they must be robbers.

The manager of the company hastily commanded:

"Take your weapons! Arm!"

We hurriedly got out of the carts our stage property arms: blunt iron sabres, broken muskets, etc., and hastened to take cover behind the carts. The women cried, and screamed, and the horsemen, who had surrounded us on all hands, began to fire at our caravan. It was lucky it was dark, and moreover they must have fired at us with blank cartridges. We saw nothing but the flashes of their muskets as they fired and the black silhouettes of their horses. I confess I was frightened, although in general I am not a coward. I involuntarily reflected:

"My life's lost for nothing!"

The manager courageously commanded:

"Don't yield, you devils, don't yield! Stand your ground to the last! We must keep our end up till daylight!"

But there was no one to fight with. The horsemen did not attack us, but remained at a distance and continued to fire. We stood thus under arms till daybreak with all our train. When dawn broke we selected spokesmen and sent them to the enemy with white handkerchiefs in their hands. Seeing this the horsemen gathered in a crowd. Some of them dismounted and entered into a lively argument with our ambassadors.

Finally, our spokesmen returned and informed us that we had to pay the Cossacks twenty copecks a head for stealing their melons. Was that all? We at once complied with the demands of the brave army and were once more in a position to resume our journey.

From the city of Orenburg we went to Uralsk, a town which surprised me by its abundance of dirt and its lack of vegetation. In the middle of the town square stood a red brick building, which proved to be the theater. Its interior was inconvenient and smelled of dead rats. We gave one performance in this mausoleum for deceased rodents; and the next day the Tsarevitch arrived. This was the future Emperor Nicholas II of all the Russias. Our chorus was not a large one, but was wonderfully good. Every member sang with a real love for his work and understanding of it.

We sang for some three hours, and were rewarded with a royal gift of two roubles each. The manager received a ring set with red and green stones.

On the journey from Askhabad to Chardjbui I had an adventure which was both unpleasant and ludicrous. I was eating bread and sausages with garlic in a third-class railway carriage, when D., the "entrepreneur" of our company, a monstrously fat man, entered:

"Throw that beastly sausage out of the window. It stinks!" he ordered.

"Why should I throw it away? I prefer to eat it."

D. lost his temper, and shouted:

"How dare you eat that stinking stuff in my presence?"

I retorted that it did not matter to him, traveling in a first-class compartment, what people ate in the third class; or something of that sort. He waxed still more furious. Just then the train stopped at a station, and D. pushed me out of the car, to the platform.

The engine whistle blew and the train moved off, leaving me on the platform of a little wayside station, amongst a lot of black bearded Asiatics in long gowns and turbans, who stared at me in a manner by no means friendly. Not knowing what else to do, I determined to pursue the train on foot. I had not a copeck in my possession.

The afternoon wore on, but a thick haze continued to lie over the sands on both sides of the railway track. Perspiration streamed from me as I walked, and I kept my eyes wide open, as I had been told that tigers and other unpleasant beasts haunted those regions. Lizards scurried across the track. The great red disc of the sun descended far away over the steppe behind the sand dunes, and the sky flushed crimson like molten iron. I struggled on, and finally reached a station where a train was standing, crept in when no one was looking, and rode without a ticket to Chardjoui, where I found the little Russians and rejoined them.

Like a sweet and vivid dream I remember Samarkand with its wonderful mosques and the schoolboys in white robes in the courtyards of the mosques. It was hot and still. The boys swayed to and fro as they chanted the Koran aloud; a donkey brayed harshly in the distance, a camel groaned. While walking along the street some Sart would approach one and in broken Russian offer to sell one a little girl, indicating her age on his fingers.

THE majority of the scenes in Glenn Hunter's new play, "Behold This Dreamer," takes place in an insane asylum. There we meet up with a curious array of loonies who are quite positive the only sane people in the world are the ones you find in asylums. You leave this rather muddled and puzzling play wondering who's crazy and who's not, and not altogether certain but what you are.

Yet I found "Behold This Dreamer" intensely interesting. Mr. Hunter portrays a young business man who hates the drabness of life in the brush business and longs to be a painter. His commonplace wife and her earthy father can't understand this in him and eventually have him committed to an institute for those not quite bright. And here he paints a prize-winning picture and finds happiness for the first time.

You are never sure just what the authors mean you to take seriously and what they mean you to laugh off. That's the mystifying thing about this play of the balmy set. Mr. Hunter's utterly engaging and winning personality makes "Behold This Dreamer" as good as it is. That and a flawless and beautiful performance by Sylvia Field of a batty miss they call Melodie.

If you ask me, I'd say see "Behold This Dreamer."

After all is said and done, I suppose Lido and Montmarte are and will be the two most reliable supper-clubs in town. New ones bob up and fade away before you know it, but these two run on forever. At Montmarte recently I saw Louise Brooks, here for a few days from Hollywood, in the party with Mrs. Phil Plant, who before her somewhat spectacular marriage was, you remember, Constance Bennett. Miss Bennett played in the films the same sort of sophisticated upstarts Miss Brooks seems to draw these days. Also in their party that night at Montmarte was Kay Leslie, she who visited Douglas Paine Saffran some winters back and who, as far as I can learn, has a date every night of her life. I have yet to attend any supper-club that Miss Leslie was not there first. And always with a different crowd.

Never in her life has the former Connie Bennett looked more alluring. Her hair which in days gone by was just a little too blonde to fool anybody is now a natural auburn shade marvelously becoming. Her white satin dancing gown seemed just a shade smarter than anybody else's. Miss Brooks was in street clothes, looking as though she had just happened to be passing Montmarte and decided to drop in to see what was going on.

I saw Helen Kleine Bold dancing at tea on Sunday afternoon at the Westchester Biltmore Country club. She had with her some people from Detroit who immediately pounced on me to know if in Atlanta I knew the Jimmy Beckers and the Robby Robinsons who used to live in Detroit. From the enthusiastic way they talked about Virginia and Robby and Doris and Jimmy I got the idea this foursome must have batted almost as high in Detroit as they have in Atlanta.

I now wish to go into ravings and rantings about "The Five O'Clock Girl," a musical comedy I like as much (and possibly better) than "Good News" and "Manhattan Mary." To begin with two of its songs, "Thinking of You" and "Up In the Clouds" are the two catchiest pieces of music I have heard this year. Get them immediately. Then Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw, both of whom in the past have annoyed me in their respective ways, have become good all of a sudden. Miss Eaton has cut out being so excessively coy and I found Mr. Shaw less elfin than ever before. This is one musical show set in the sacred realms of Southampton wherein the smartly gowned participants look as if they really belonged. That chorus of busy and bustling dancers help make "The Five O'Clock Girl" among the best. And "Thinking of You" and "Up In the Clouds" are going to make bearable dancers out of people who've been out of step for years.

"The Love Call" is the newest operetta the prolific Shuberts have brought forth. This one, if you please, is a musical version of that old-time melodrama, "Arizona," a play I am told you used to heave, sigh, and become slightly unbalanced about. I have never seen "Arizona" but to me "The Love Call" seemed a pretty good show. I doubt very much if there were ever such dressy Indians as the ones in this play. They all looked like they had just stepped out of Peggy Hoyt's or Sally Milgrims. The music is pleasant, so is the dancing and I see no reason why you shouldn't enjoy "The Love Call" of a tall evening.

The White House, With a Long Line of People Going in to Shake Hands at the Rate of 42 a Minute.

"Busiest Housewife." Mrs. Coolidge on One of the Beautiful Stairways in the White House Leading to the Private Quarters of the Family.

BY HARDIE MEAKIN.

IN ROUGH figures, the president's annual expenses are about $360,000, or about three-tenths of a cent per person, if the population of the United States is estimated at 120,000,000.

These figures are taken from the present year, which is considered an average one, and do not include remodeling, refurnishing, or any major repairs to the white house, or to the lawn.

The president's annual salary is $75,000. He is allowed $10,000 for a "secretary to the president," and $85,260 for other office help, with the provision that employees from other departments may be borrowed by the executive offices to help out in case of need. For the contingent expenses of these same offices Uncle Sam appropriated for the current fiscal year, ending June 30, 1928, the sum of $35,000. This is to take care of stationery, record books, telegrams, telephones, books for the library, furniture and carpets for offices, automobiles, expenses of the garage, special services and miscellaneous items. The president draws on this account at his own discretion.

The expenses of the white house police, $83,400 annually, are listed as a separate item, as is the $25,000 allowed for "traveling and official entertainment expenses" to be expended at the president's discretion and accounted for on his certificate solely.

Thus it is seen that the actual listed expenses of maintaining a president fall a few hundred dollars short of $315,000 for the present fiscal year, but are placed at $360,000 to allow $45,000 for any contingencies which may arise before the present fiscal year expires on June 30, 1928.

Visitors at the white house find it occupies a portion of a 14-acre plot which Uncle Sam's gardeners keep beautiful with flower beds replanted as the season change. It is these flowers, trees, and the smiling face of John May, colored doorman, plus the general atmosphere and appearance of the mansion that give to the scene a feeling of home.

There are 25 servants, such as butlers, doormen, maids and cooks. They are paid by Nelson P. Webster, who might be termed the official check writer. The president's personal expenditures are handled by Edward T. Clark, his private secretary.

The president must pay out of his own funds for the food consumed by his family, or by unofficial guests. If Will Rogers or anyone in an unofficial capacity is invited to the white house for dinner, the president foots the bill, but if the German ambassador or anyone in an official capacity is a guest, then the expenses come out of the "entertainment fund."

The marketing is done by Mrs. Elizabeth Riley, the housekeeper, who does her shopping, as do a great majority of the Washingtonians, by personal trips to the various markets. One of these, Center Market on Pennsylvania avenue, is operated by the government through the department of agriculture. This market is the chief source of food supplies to the white house. Mrs. Riley has for transportation on these trips the only remaining official horse-drawn conveyance, and uses it practically every day.

The president uses a car which carries the District of Columbia license No. 100. Mrs. Coolidge's car has a license plate No. 101; the guest car used to meet distinguished visitors, No. 103; and the secret service car, which always will be seen wherever the president's car may be, is No. 104.

The white house and president, and of course, his family, are guarded by a special police force consisting of 35

DO whales have harems? Do they have lights-o'-love like sailors in every port? Or has the whale one loving wife to whom he remains faithful in his wanderings around the seven seas?

In an effort to check up on this subject for scientific purposes, the Stanley Kemp British expedition in the Antartic has played what seems to be a rather puritanical trick on Mr. Whale.

Mr. Kemp's scheme was to creep up on Mr. and Mrs. Whale near the South Pole, and spear Mr. Whale with a short dart which fastened a silver identification plate permanently between his shoulder blades.

In other words, they shot him with a metal marriage certificate fired out of a harpoon gun, and when he goes north to Greenland next summer they will be watching with a spy-glass to see whether he picks up a cutie or remains faithful to his family in the south.

The scheme shows very little consideration for the privacy or finer feelings of philandering whales and might constitute a major calamity if someone sought its extension to the higher land mammalia, but science often demands the sacrifice of personal feelings and subsequent checking up of the migrations of several hundred marriage-tagged whales may make the world a safer and better place to live in Detective Sergeant Clarence Dalrymple who joined the force in 1899, and Sergt. Ernest Seaman, on the force since 1902, may always be found at the main entrance to the executive offices. Their job is to handle the thousands of visitors annually.

The president's trips to theaters number less than half a dozen since he has been in office, while he has attended the movies only once. This does not mean that he doesn't care for entertainment. He and Mrs. Coolidge frequently enjoy private showings of moving pictures and private performances by the actors and actresses playing in Washington.

The private life of the Coolidges in the upstairs quarters of the white house is practically a sealed book. It is here that Mrs. Coolidge, known as the "busiest housewife in America," retires from the public gaze with her husband and their son John, and the three live as an ordinary American family.

James Hoban, an Irishman, won the honor of designing the white house in 1792, and was paid $500 and given a building lot in Washington. The cornerstone was laid October 13, 1792, but, due to a lack of funds, building lagged. In 1880, congress came forward and appropriated $15,000 for furniture, but nothing for the construction work.

Gas lighting was installed in 1848 and a heating plant in 1849. In 1902 congress appropriated $65,000 for the erection of a new executive office and $475,000 for remodeling and refurnishing. Last year the roof was repaired, a roof garden added, and the house painted.

Another $104,000 is to be spent on the white house this year. While appropriated for the grounds, congress was specific in stating new furniture, electric and gas bills, upkeep of the greenhouses, heat and repairs must come from this fund.

Kitchen. Mrs. Coolidge Had Important Alterations Made Here After the Kitchen Had Remained Practically Unchanged for eYars.

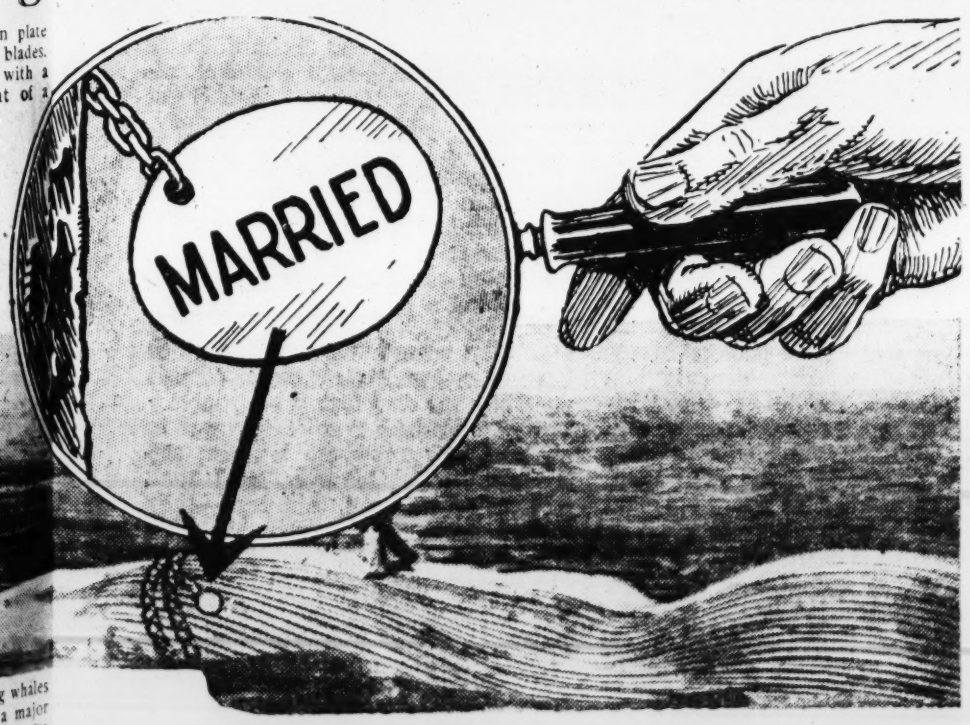

WHAT UNCLE SAM PAYS:

President Coolidge is allowed annually: $75,000 salary; $10,000 for a "secretary to the president"; $82,260 for help in the executive offices; $35,000 for stationery, record books and general office supplies; $83,400 to maintain the white house police force, and $25,000 traveling and official entertainment expenses.

WHAT THE PRESIDENT PAYS:

President Coolidge must pay his and his family's personal expenses, such as clothing, food, tuition for John at school, etc. If a guest is present for dinner officially, Uncle Sam pays for the food, but if Coolidge invites a friend to dine with him he must foot the bill himself.

MY LADY FAR AWAY

INSTALLMENT IV.

MARTHA, ceasing her song, suddenly took the words out of his mouth.

"What's the real story of this old fellow we're looking for, Roy? She had found a little name for him; Hugh liked it; liked it almost better when she called him "Mon Roi!" Ridiculous it might be; but somehow, it made a man feel sure.

"The story," said Hugh, "is an odd one, but then, most of my people are a bit eccentric. This uncle of mine would be about fifty if he were living now; near my father's age—my father married very young—twenty—and Uncle Frank was only twenty-one then. Uncle Frank didn't settle down till he was over thirty. He picked up a girl from some station away out back in the northern territory, and married her within a week, and went off with her to the ends of the earth—the Pamirs or somewhere. We didn't hear anything of him for years; lost sight of him more or less. Then he went off to New Guinea, exploring, and took this wretched girl with him; they stayed longer than they meant to, and she had a baby right out in the middle of the wilds, and of course she died. Uncle Frank wouldn't marry again, wouldn't give the kid over to any one, would drag it about with him wherever he went—a girl too. Of course everybody said there could be only one end to it, and after some years they were proved right, because he started up this very river—with the wretched kid; it must have been about six or eight then, just the wrong age for a fever country—and the natives got them both."

"What was your aunt's name?"

"Stella."

"Was she very young? Pretty?"

"She was very young when he married her. I never saw her, but I believe she was quite extraordinarily good looking, and came of a good family; old established squatters—there's nothing much better than some of those."

"Did she love him very much?"

"They said she was mad about him. I think she must have been, to go to her death with him as she did."

"What was he like, this uncle of yours?"

"Never saw him since I was a small kid at school. He was always away, and he hated being painted or photographed, so I can't remember him very well, but I think he was about medium height—not so tall as my father, or I—with something rather distinguished about him—I remember his mouth was really beautiful, and his chin made you think of Lord Byron. He had a wild, odd look in his eyes, I believe, but I don't recall him clearly."

"He sounds—intriguing," murmured Martha. "And so she loved him very well, and died, to be with him? There must have been something about your uncle, Roy——"

"O, I've no doubt. But I can't pretend to be sorry for his death; at least, so long after it. It happened during the war, you know, when a dead man, more or less seemed to count about as much as a squashed fly. Besides, we younger ones didn't really know him."

"What do you suppose made him come up here?"

"I should think it unlikely he ever got as far as this. Eight years makes a lot of difference; the lower reaches of the river weren't as safe then as they are now. I believe he was looking for some uninhabited Arcadia of his own, where he and the kid could live right away from the world. He had those queer notions—insane notions, I'd have said, only he was as sound as you or I, apart from that." Royden spoke almost angrily; he was not unconscious of similar tendencies—weaknesses—whatever one might name them—in himself, deep buried and determinedly stamped down. He knew that this unknown lake country, so far, so pure, so exquisite, called to himself as the fabled ghost pigeon is said to call to the dark souls of Papuans, luring them resistlessly into the depths of forests unexplored, whence the lost follower of the pigeon never may return. But he set his foot on the longing.

"One fool is enough in a family," he thought. "Let me prove his death, and the day Paga Hill sinks into the sea behind Port Moresby, I say goodby to this side of the world."

He had spoken the last sentence aloud. "How are we going to get the proof?" asked Martha. "We don't seem to have done much today."

"At the worst," said Hugh slowly, "we can do what the government does sometimes—carry off a small boy, teach him English and go back with him as interpreter. But that would take months, and it'd be risky, too. No, I hope I shall be able to get into some sort of communication here before we leave—and anyhow, there's no use meeting troubles too soon; take days as they come, and hours as you must; that covers any road."

* * * *

Far off, like a beetle creeping over a brazen shield, the ship's launch stemmed the waters of the unknown lake. Welch, in the stern, kept a sharp lookout for snags and shallows, watching, at the same time, the distant islands turned from blue to purple, from purple to green, thrust out here a long paw of promontory, lift there a peaky horn. He seemed to have some definite purpose in view; he passed, without a glance, islets as thick with nesting birds as a midden with flies; saw a swimming crocodile shatter the glass of the lake water with a suddenly lifted head, and never steered towards it. He was watching an island that now began to appear behind the tall tree-crested lump of land earlier visited by Royden and Martha Lyle. It was low and wide, and deeply surrounded with silver green weeds. A mass of heavy trees blocked the center.

"We'll run towards that," he told the steersman, who was no other than Jacky. Jacky headed the launch on a course well outside the weeds.

"Thass right, sir," he commented. "Suppose they anywhere, they stop there."

"Why, Jacky?" asked Welch. But Jacky looked at him blankly. "I no savvy," he answered, relapsing suddenly into pure pigeon English. Welch understood very well; Jacky, after his fashion, was saying, "If you won't trust me, I'm not going to trust you; so that's that."

The launch puttered on. The high island was now well to the right. About its summit men were moving, small as black midgets. Canoes lay moored in the shallows below; there was nobody in them, nobody splashing out through the water to seize one and paddle forth. For all the attention being paid to the launch and its occupants, this remote spot, unvisited by whites and unknown to geography, might have been Southampton or Sydney harbor.

Welch laughed a little, as one does who sees his judgment confirmed.

"Jacky," he said, "I observe that the low island lies very close behind the high; very handy, Jacky."

"Yessir," answered Jacky, with the ghost of a smile on his face. Jacky liked people who talked good English to him; he could always average enough understanding.

"Those people didn't seem much frightened by your visit today, eh?"

"Nossir."

"Just danced and howled; didn't bolt into the bush—not at first, anyhow?"

"Nossir." Then, with a sudden burst—"You-me savvy this New Guinea man, sir."

"We do, Jacky. How does he behave when he first sees a white man?"

"By ——, sir, he ran like hell."

"Just so, Jacky." Welch leaned back in the stern, and watched the high island slip past. From the side where Royden and Martha had ascended the low island could not be seen. It was now opening out rapidly; a fair place, a very fair place—the white man's dream of an island heaven come true. All was there; tall palms, dark woods, lawns, green as leaves in spring; sky of one pale, brilliant shade of blue; a color without a name. You could scarce see where the lake ended and sky began; the island seemed to float like one of the miraculous isles of fairy tale, drifting aloft in air.

They went half round it. Now the high island could be seen no longer; running close in, the forest of the low island hid it. There seemed to be no opening in that forest; black-green, blue-green, its trees closed one behind another, setting an unbroken wall between the beach and the interior of the island. Yet that a break existed somewhere Welch believed as he believed in his own existence.

He stopped the launch and took stock of his surroundings.

If it was anywhere, it was here. Invisible from the high island, yet near to the latter; forest running down closer to the lake than it ran anywhere else; shelter from that northwest quarter that is in Papua the home of all serious storms.

"The only way to find out," mused Welch, "is—to find out."

He scanned with interest the belt of water weed. Like a close woven carpet, it lay upon the lake for several rods about the borders of the island. Under it the water heaved a little in long waves suggestive of great depth. Taking the launch, with caution, close to the border of the weeds, Welch put down his hand and felt the glistening surface.

"If one man does it another can," was his verdict. "Jacky, keep her steady, off the weeds; use your paddle——"

Jacky, stabbing the water, cried out anxiously, "By Cly, sir, you not going there?"

"Hold your row," said Welch, deliberately stepping on to the weeds. They rocked, swung into long waves extending far on either side, but remained firm. Welch did not hesitate. With light, quick steps, never pausing for an instant, he paddled across the carpet of weeds. Beneath him the unplumbed depths of the lake, with all its strange population of alligators, fish, crawling and gliding things innumerable, shook as he went, waved, threatened at every moment to swallow him up. He went on.

The carpet was wider than it looked. Before he had crossed it he was beginning to feel much as does an inexperienced swimmer who has somewhat rashly undertaken a long swim in unknown waters. How near everything looks from solid standing ground! How far it seems to the struggling head on the surface of the water, with the shore a pale thread in the distance, trees pricking up like bristles, houses small as beads. How slowly the thread thickens, the beads grow to marbles, the blessed land comes out to meet one, at long last!

Even so felt Welch, with the additional handicap of knowing that he ventured an untried risk, struggled along by means of new and untried muscular movements.

He could keep up on this extraordinary surface, but instinct warned him that he must, at all costs, keep going. A moment's pause would be destruction. Welch could swim like an otter, and just because of that he knew when and where swimming was impossible.

There was a small peninsula on the far side of the island, a good way removed from the place where he had left the launch. To this he directed himself, staggering badly now and not sure how long he could keep up. His feet seemed to sink deeper at every step, the weed carpet waved, vibrated more and more.

He fixed his eyes on the rocky split before him and tried not to think. The launch was out of sight now; a corner of the island had intervened. The split was near him—nearer—damn! He had aimed too far out. Well, it was only to retrace one's steps a few score yards, to turn and—God, he was in.

Without warning the weeds had opened—at a spot where he was certain of safety—and he was down through them; tangled in stalks and slimy blades; dragged under, held, unable to breathe. He kept his wind, tried to keep his head, and fought, cautiously letting his legs hang straight down to shake off the clutching stalks. No use—no use!

The pressure on his lungs increased to agony. The weeds hauled at him like hands. "Tony," he thought with cracking chest, "it's time to say your prayers." The long held breath rushed out of his lungs; with it seemed to sweep a sudden gush of every prayer he had ever heard or learned, from the nursery. "Now I lay me" up to the stateliest liturgies of the Angelican church, all passing through his mind with incredible swiftness, as it is sometimes said a man's life and acts may pass in such a moment. No recollections came to Welch—no faces, not even the face of his long dead wife. The prayers gushed out with his breath and all was black.

At the last instant he was conscious of something seizing his leg. He was too far gone for the thought that, a moment earlier, would have occurred to him—"alligator."

It came, later—he did not know how much later—with the slow recovery of consciousness. "Did it get me?" he asked himself vaguely. Welch had been "got" by many a savage animal in his time, bore the scars of such encounters. For a moment he fancied himself in one of the houses of his own great zoo, something checked and furious snarling behind a slammed shaking gate, blood—— No, there wasn't any blood, he wasn't hurt. "She must have missed me," he thought (it was generally the shes that gave trouble.) Then he realized that he was not in his zoo, not anywhere indoors; the sun was burning his eyes, hard rock was under his head, his legs—they looked unfamiliar, somehow—were lying in front of him, sharply outlined in soaked khaki. Between the points of his wet canvas shoes he saw blue water, barred by a gleaming stretch of silver green.

Welch sat up, giddy and very sick. He vomited lake water for a minute or two. Feeling better, he looked about him. He was sitting on the rocky split that he had noticed some time previously. Before him was the blue lake, and that infernal carpet of floating weed, smooth, unbroken, faintly iridescent in the slanting sun. "Gad," he thought, "it's getting late;

A Blue Ribbon Serial By Beatrice Grimshaw

I wonder how long I've been lying here?"

He puzzled over his situation. He had thought himself thirty or forty yards at least from the split of rock, when he went down. Had his frantic underwater struggles carried him so far? It seemed hardly possible, and yet, there was nothing else to believe. He might have managed to reach the spit and drag himself on to it before fainting away. He might have managed to kick loose the brute—whatever it was; alligator, giant eel, or unknown horror not yet described by science—that certainly had seized him in the last moment. These things were not impossible. Welch, still rather sick and shaky, tried to believe that they had happened. What else was there to believe?

As strength returned he realized that at all events one great piece of luck had fallen to him. He was ashore on the island he had wanted to visit. How he was going to get back to the launch—remembering that she dared not even approach the belt of weeds for fear of fouling her propeller—he didn't know. He had a little while yet before sundown; not as much as he would have liked, but——

He dragged himself to his feet and felt in his hip pocket. The tiny nip he always carried in case of accident or snakebite was there. He pulled the cork, drank off the whole provision. Being all but teetotal, he felt it take instant effect. He was able to walk along the rocky spit and reach solid ground inland.

"Now we're getting somewhere," he thought exultantly. But after twenty minutes spent in tramping along the unbroken forest wall he began to realize that the task before him was too heavy for that afternoon. The sun was sinking with alarming speed. He could not face that awful weed carpet in the dark. Investigation of the island must wait for another day. After all, was there anything to investigate?

He turned back and made for the spit once more. To right, the lake lay, green and scilla blue; the mass of the high island impended with tangled bush dropping down its sides. Beyond came islands and islets, wonderfully colored; lake, more lake, a thread of pale blue shore. The ship was out of sight. So was the launch; apparently they hadn't found him yet. On his left ran always the forest that clothed and hid the center of the island. Trees like cedars with trunks of sunset red and black arms outstretching; trees that ran up naked, white, to an outburst of flowering boughs; trees with stems scaled and diamoned like the hides of snakes—sago, that was; he knew the splendid fronds of it; trees of many kinds that he had never seen or dreamed of beautiful, bizarre, sinister. The undergrowth was like another and a lesser forest; and this again was linked, knitted by myriads of creeping ferns, bamboos, lionas, into a mass penetrable only by steel. "It looks," thought Welch, "as if no living thing had ever got inside of it or ever could. It looks more uninhabited than anything on earth ever did look before. It looks—I'm damned if it doesn't look—too uninhabited. Overdone, somehow, I wonder——"

There he left the thought, for the launch was coming into view, hard driven, with Jacky signalling wildly from the stern, and it became an instant problem to know how he was going to get away from the place that was "too uninhabited."

He walked out on to the end of the spit and looked with extreme distaste at the shining, unsteady carpet that had so nearly been his death. "There's a trick about it," he thought. "I don't know the trick—not all of it, whatever it is, and that's why I went down. I wonder——"

He stopped. There was something lying afloat among the weeds, lifting and falling ever so little with the respiration of the water. A canoe? No such luck. Nothing but a log. A big log, solid, lengthy. Floating beside it another piece of debris—the butt of a huge palm leaf, twice as long as his arm, flattened and tough at the end.

Had it been there when he came? He didn't think so, but it was not impossible that he might have missed seeing it, occupied as he was with the difficulties of the water carpet. At all events he saw before him now, sent by some kindly providence, the elementary native substitute for a canoe, used by the earliest ancestors of the Papuan, and often enough called upon by natives even now in the absence of anything better.

It was a chance, of course; no doubt the lake was full of such flotsam and jetsam—but it was certainly a lucky chance for him. Welch had little of the ordinary man's fear of giant beasts; the thought of alligators did not daunt him. "I reckon I could get my thumbs into their eyes in time," he thought, drawing the log close to the rock and cautiously placing himself astride. It rolled a little, but did not throw him. Using the palm leaf butt as a paddle, he worked himself through the weeds. It was slow work, much slower than that incredible walk of his had been, but he felt not at all inclined to return to the more sensational method. "Not for the present, at any rate," he thought. "Later on I'll have to master it. There's a trick—I know there's a trick."

Jacky was hanging over the side of the launch, his eyes two circles of white and brown. "By golly, sir," he said, "I think you been drowned. I have a devil of a time, sir. I see you walking on this water like one powl (fowl, bird) and I very fright. Then you going behind the corner, I come along after, running out for keep clear of this damn grass, and when I get round the corner, by——, you not there. My word, I fright, I take the launch and run him all round the island, and I not see you, then I come back here, and I see you; and my word, sir, my belly, very glad. I am extremely relieved to welcome you back again, sir," he added, suddenly picking up his interpreter English and helping Welch off the log on to the launch's gunwale.

"Did you see or hear anything, Jacky?" asked Welch, as the engine began to purr, and the breeze from the middle lake streamed over his heated face and soaked hair.

"Nossir." Then, as an afterthought, "I have seen one devil, sir."

"O, a devil, did you?"

"Yessir," said Jacky, steering with one hand and holding a baubau, or bamboo, pipe to his lips with the other. He took in a long, luxurious jet of smoke, and slowly let it out. "I see thass devil," he said, slowly looking for words. "I see him thass time he running very quick into the bush, sir, me coming up in the launch. This one proper devil, sir, head belong him all pire (fire), he havem ten legs, ten hand. I think suppose I no come up in the launch, he will have eat you, sir."

Welch paid small attention; he had heard devil stories many times before. He was busy stripping off his soaked clothes and spreading them over the engine hood to dry in the westering sun. Time enough to put them on again when they sighted Lahara; that would not be for an hour or so on the course they had taken.

"A hefty lot of coincidences for one morning," ran his thoughts. "Might be living in the old 'Swiss Family.' Chance to kick myself ashore just in the right place after I'm three-quarters drowned, chance to find a log to go back on, chance to find it in the right place, chance to see a palm butt right alongside, without which it wouldn't be any use. If I was writing a book I wouldn't dare —What's that you say, Jacky?"

Jacky had merely remarked, swinging the titller cautiously as he rounded a sunken snag, that "those powls they no like the devil, they too much walk on top (fly), too much sing out."

"When did they do that?" asked Welch, alertly.

"Thass time I see the devil, sir, those powls they make a damn row."

"O, they did? Just when did you see this devil of yours?"

"I see him, sir, thass time you coming back on the big pire (firewood log). He look out from bush, then he run back quick. He havem fifty leg, fifty one hundred hand," went on Jacky, excitedly. "He havem head all pire. He havem snake in him mouth——"

"Hold on. Let me think."

"Yessir." The Papuan broke off his rhapsody, dipped in his lime gourd, and licked the spatula. His jaws worked hard on a chew of betelnut.

"Devils are mostly too much betel and a touch of native hysteria," mused Welch. "I know all about them. But 'powls' don't chew betelnut. If they squawked, there was something. I wish to heaven I hadn't been too busy with that log to have my wits about me," he thought, ashamedly, for to Welch the missing one note in Nature's orchestra was as humiliating as to a skilled violinist the missing of the conductor's beat.

"Might have been a native," he thought, and again, "The other things might have been mere coincidences. But I'm inclined to think that coincidences are dropping in a darned sight too fast just now."

Back on the Lahara, he changed his half dried clothing and joined the others. Darkness had come down with a stride; upon the surface of the lake stars made long stitches of light; on the dusky white deck, away from the ship's electrics, you could see your shadow palely penciled by starlight alone. There was nobody on deck. Royden, looking more than ever bulky, broad shouldered, British, seemed to fill at least one-half of the little saloon where he sat reading; Martha was invisibly in her cabin.

"See any pollywogs?" asked Royden, raising his head.

"No, no," answered the other. "I wasn't out after any of the fauna today. Seems, however, that some of them were out after me. I'll tell you when dinner's over."

By and by, lights discreetly extinguished, they gathered on deck. It was very quiet there; the lap-lap of lake currents sounded against the keel; one could hear, now and then, the clink of plates from the galley, where boys were washing up, or the faint complaining creak of the Lahara's timbers as she swung to her anchor. But these occasional sounds only served to underline the enormous silence of the lake. Royden had placed a couple of lookouts, on Welch's advice. They knew, however, that attack was improbable, at all events during the early part of night.

"If they do come," observed Welch, settling comfortably into his swing chair, "it wouldn't be till just on daybreak. I don't expect them, however, then or afterward."

"Why not?" asked Royden. Martha seated some little distance away, made no comment. She had been very silent all that evening. Welch, guessing shrewdly, opined that she was beginning to feel anxious about the success of the expedition. It was not in him, however, to sense the visions that tumbled over each other in that little shingled head—to see, vicariously, motors gliding in a brilliant press up to "the palace," plumes and diamonds waving, scintillating—the king, the queen, all glorious, a small, dignified figure curtseying and backing away. . . . ("Who's the little beauty? O, the new Lady Wilsdon! What a frock!!" "Exquisite, both——")

And all this shadowed, blurred, by the dark possibility of failure! For if Royden—dear fellow, he was a bit of a cart horse in some ways!—made a muddle of the expedition and didn't manage to find anything out after all, where was the peerage, where the comfortable million or two that went to keep it going? Buried—buried in the law courts, not to be exhumed till every one concerned was too old to care about thnything.

Undoubtedly Hugh had missed the first shot at the heart of the secret. Would there be another chance of any kind? Martha, suffering reaction from the sentimental mood of the afternoon, was despondent tonight; ready to believe that nothing more would ever be known. . . .

Welch had answered Hugh's inquiry; was going on to talk about something or other—water weeds, alligators. What did it all matter?

Stop a minute. What was he saying now? Martha sat up, let her eternal cigarette fall from her fingers. She listened eagerly. What! This was something worth while.

Incident by incident Welch detailed the adventures of the afternoon. Even to himself they seemed to grow more significant as he put them in clear words. He finished the tale and stopped, waiting for comment.

"Why," exclaimed Martha, "it all hangs together like a story. Some one must have been there. Some one —something——"

"Just so," agreed Welch, as she hesitated. "Some one who came in before at the right moment, when you were at the village."

Royden's great bulk, outspread over a wide space of shadowy deck, shifted uneasily.

"Come, draw it mild," he objected. "What proof have we? Neither Mrs. Lyle nor myself saw any one about the island except the natives. You saw no one. Your boy saw something he describes as a devil. Well, I've been long enough in the country to know that the Papuan's simply obsessed with devils, and sees them all over the shop. You've no proof of anything."

Martha thought, somehow, that Welch smiled. He changed the conversation.

"Maybe, maybe," he said. "But I'll tell you what I do wish, and that is that I had a good trawl and six weeks to spare here. There's simply no knowing what one could dredge up from the bottom of this lake."

"What do you think you can collect?" asked Hugh, courteously making talk.

"As things are, not very much. I hope to get snakes, and a few birds."

"I saw a lot of pelicans," contributed Martha.

"Ah, yes. Very nice birds, very. They have a great deal of character; you wouldn't believe how much, when you really know them. No, I shan't take any back. I stocked up very well a year ago in West Australia. It was an interesting trip. I had an assistant. We had been a long time hunting about, and had done attempt at a smile.

"But it isn't my book," said Lord Lionel gently, but with a raising of his fluff ybrown eyebrows. "Have you any Roger Payne bindings?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Any transparent vellums such as Edwards of Halifax introduced in the eighteenth century?"

"No. I wish I had."

He turned the book over and looked at its title.

"I see it's Nietzsche's 'Ecco Homo.'"

"Yes. Poor Nietzsche."

"Why poor?"

"Because he went mad. He was practically mad when he wrote that."

Lord Lionel's eyes became almost stern.

"Do you say a madman could have written this great yea-saying book?"

"Well, we know that——"

"We know that whipper-snappers who couldn't write a line to save their souls, that men totally devoid of knowledge and who knew not the meaning of culture chose to call the great Nietzsche mad, as they call great men mad to this day. But that only proves their own madness. Genius always seems madness to the little strutting bourgeois.'

He put the book down rather sharply and got up, stretching his splendid figure and looking round the big room.

"You have some very fine furniture," he said.

"Yes, I am rather a connoisseur of furniture."

"In that case I should like some day to take you over to Morton Abbey, my brother Hampshire's place. He has quantities of magnificent specimens."

"O, I should simply love to go with you!" exclaimed Mrs. Chetwynde Mason.

"The eighteenth century was, of course, the great period for furniture."

"Of course it was!"

"But Hampshire has specimens of almost every period. His Hepplewhites are the finest in England. But he has quantities of old Venetian furniture, as well as, of course, Chippendale, Sheraton, and so forth. French furniture is not lacking, either. He has some marvelous Louis Quinze armchairs. Quite priceless."

He moved on, and paused before a tall piece of furniture like a cabinet—and yet somehow not exactly like a cabinet.

"That is a great treasure. It's an organ."

"An organ!" he exclaimed. "May I open it?"

"Pray do!"

"By whom is it?"

"Well now—let me see——"

"Good heavens!" he said, opening it and pulling out a manual with black naturals and white sharps and flats. "This is a veritable Father Schmidt. You blow it with the foot."

"Yes. That's it—a Father Schmidt! And you blow it with your foot."

"You are lucky to have this. They are very rare. Even Hampshire has not got one."

He stood for a moment in a curious pose of attentiveness. Then turning abruptly he said: "I must go. Thank you for a very pleasant tea. Directly—directly I can manage it I will call with my motor to take you over to Hampshire's place. He and the duchess will be delighted to see you."

"Really that will be enchanting!" said Mrs. Chetwynde Mason warmly.

He seemed to hesitate, staring at at her.

"You—would you mind very much if I brought my two friends with me?"

"Of course not."

"They may not—still they usually like to accompany me."

"Do bring them, of course. Any friends of yours are sure to be delightful."

"They're really not bad fellows." (He spoke in a slightly deprecating voice.) "I think you will find them fairly all right."

"I know I shall."

"Then I'll let you know—when I can. Well, good-by."

"Good-by, Lord Lionel. I cannot tell you how much I have enjoyed making your acquaintance."

"Then I'll bring them with me. Good-by. Don't trouble to ring."

He seemed to listen for an instant. Then he walked to the door into the hall.

"That's a Neuchatel clock!" he said, pointing towards a fine black and gold clock which stood on a black and gold stand fixed against the wall. "Neuchatel—of about 1820 or so."

Then he opened the door and went out.

III.

When Lord Lionel had accomplished his tranquil exit from her drawing room, Mrs. Chetwynde Mason stood for a moment looking round at all the beautiful things she had gathered together. How much more he knew about them than she did! What a marvelous mind! What culture! What knowledge! Was any mortal thing not known to him? He had really made her feel almost as if she were on a level with Mrs. Sampson and Miss Ellen Sampson—on the rummage sale level. She had not even been aware that the little old organ was a "Father Schmidt" until he had told her so. And he was going to motor her over to the Duke and Duchess of Hampshire with two of his intimate friends! He had chosen her out to——

A prolonged howl from somewhere in the inner or outer hall broke horribly upon her reverie. Something frightful must have happened to cause such a piercing outcry. And it hadn't been a woman's voice.

Was it possible that Barstow had gone suddenly mad and tried to murder Lord Lionel, or that Thomas, the saucy looking young footman, had attempted to strangle his superior servant? She sank down on a sofa and with a shuddering finger pressed an electric bell. In a moment the door opened and Barstow appeared, looking painfully agitated.

"Yes, madam?" he said in a hoarse voice.

"What has happened?"

"Madam, it was Thomas."

"Thomas! Why? What caused Thomas to howl?"

"Not being there, madam, I can't say for certain. But Thomas swears, takes his oath, madam, that he did nothing to his lordship."

"What do you mean? What should Thomas do to his lordship?"

"I couldn't say, madam. But Thomas must have done something."

"Why?"

"Because, madam, so Thomas swears, just as his lordship was leaving the house, with Thomas holding the hall door for him, he took a sort of run, and let out with his foot and caught Thomas—well, madam, I scarcely like to say it.

"Go on! Go on!"

"Caught Thomas a regular oner, madam, in the hinder parts. Excuse me, madam."

"Really, Barstow!"

"I'm sure I beg pardon, madam, but you asked me."

"It's impossible, absolutely impossible!"

"So I said, madam. And yet why should Thomas set up such a—such a howl?"

"Then Thomas must have insulted his lordship."

"I couldn't say, madam."

"I say he must have!"

"Certainly, madam!"

"Give Thomas his notice and a month's wages. He must leave tomorrow. I cannot keep a footman who obliges a visitor of noble birth to assault him in self-protection and then howls in that disgraceful manner. That will do, Barstow."

"Shall I remove the tea now, madam?"

"Yes. I don't wish to see Thomas before he goes."

Barstow with dismal gravity collected the tea and went out.

When he had gone Mrs. Chetwynde Mason went to her writing table, sat down, and wrote the following letter to her friend, Lady Caroway.

Amber Grange,
Amber.
Thursday evening.

My dearest Eleanor:

I take back all I said to you today about the English countryside containing nobody of interest or cultivation. Since you left me this afternoon I have had a wonderful experience. It appears that a brother of the Duke of Hampshire, Lord Lionel Danesborough, lives in my immediate neighborhood, though I didn't know it till now, and just after I had got rid of that dreadful old person in a bonnet and her daughter he came to call on me. He stayed for hours, and we had a really enthralling discussion about painting, music, Christianity, Etruscan vases, ceramics in general, the classics, poetry, sculpture, book binding, literature, horticulture, and, in fact, almost every subject that can interest two omniverous and far reaching minds. We touched on Wagner, Nietzsche, Gagliostro, Liszt, Corregio, Horace, Virgil, Ovid, Cicero, Burne-Jones, Browning, and many others.

We quoted the classics one against the other, each one, as it were, capping the other's quotations. I was able to give him some gardening hints and to put him right once or twice about periods. (He was two centuries out in his attribution of my Italian Cassone, and made one or two other little mistakes which I was fortunately able to correct.) But do not suppose I am criticizing him. We all make a slip occasionally, and I claim to be no more faultless in that respect than others.

He is a wonderful man, perhaps even a man of genius. Naturally, being who he is, he is ultra refined and has perfect manners. But in addition there is this marvelous culture, this far reaching intellect, this critical acumen, and this quite amazing knowledge. Is it not wonderful to have such a neighbor, to have found at last living almost at my very door a worth while man?

I cannot tell you, Eleanor, what a feeling of uplift I have this evening. My reaction to Lord Lionel is so vivid that I am almost dazzled, as if by a sudden blaze of light. There was only one thing to mar an otherwise perfect afternoon. You know Thomas, the saucy faced footman whom you took quite a fancy to? When Lord Lionel left me Thomas let him out. And it seems that Thomas was so impudent to Lord Lionel that the latter was forced to correct him physically—in the hall. I heard Thomas howling—yes, dear, actually howling—sent for Barstow and inquired about it, and that was the explanation. Of course, Thomas leaves my service tomorrow.

Best love from
Your ever affectionate
TESSIE.

P. S. Lord Lionel is going to take me over in his car to see the Duke and Duchess of Hampshire at Morton Abbey in a day or two. He wants my opinion on some of the duke's furniture. Two of his dearest friends will accompany us. T.

This letter went to London that evening and was received by Lady Caroway at breakfast on the following morning. She read it over her tea and toast, and then turned to the morning paper. After glancing over the leading articles and latest foreign news she happened upon this paragraph:

"ESCAPE OF A LUNATIC."

"Yesterday afternoon at about two o'clock a dangerous lunatic, who was recently confined in the luxurious home for mental cases known as "Brankhurst," in Surrey close to the Sussex border, managed by some as yet unexplained means to evade the two keepers who were attached to his person and to get out of the large and beautiful grounds which surround the mansion.

"He was recaptured late at night in Winsley forest after a prolonged search. The lunatic in question belongs to a famous English family, bears a courtesy title, and is a man of the widest culture. We understand that before being taken he paid a visit to a well known lady who resides in a beautiful house near "Brankhurst" and even took tea with her.

"His conduct while at tea seems to have aroused no suspicion, but we gather that when leaving the house he committed a savage and entirely unprovoked assault upon a footman who was letting him out. The name of the lady whom he visited is Mrs. Chetwynde Mason, well known for her literary and artistic proclivities, who lives at Amber Grange, Amber, Surrey."

* * * *

Lady Caroway's bright blue eyes were smiling as she put the paper down and went to her writing table.

"I really must beg Tessie not to dismiss that nice looking footman," she said to herself as she took up a pen.

Cheese." In it there still remains Miss Linda Watkins, who presumably got used to this theater last year and decided not to move. Henry Hull is the star and A. A. Milne the author. So you can't complain about a lack of names. Also when I saw it, Helen Chandler (now departed to another production) was in it and Louise Closser Hale. In fact everybody seems to have been in the cast but me and Julia Hoyt.

"The Ivory Door" is a light and entertaining little whimsy and is easily recognizable as the work of the man who wrote "When We Were Very Young" and "Now We Are Seven." If you're a very matter-of-fact, yer-gotta-show-me guy, you'd best miss "The Ivory Door." It's largely for the alligator pear set who just dote on anything fantastic.

Things New and Old About The Bible :

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga.

The Argument from the Person of Christ.

THERE is the contrast of the different views of Christ. The lower view of Christ as held by Arians, Socinians and Unitarians place the main emphasis on Jesus as a matchless teacher of righteousness and an example of purity and unselfishness. There are certain unique features which are withheld from Him.

The lower view of Jesus has never worked in our world. The annals of missionary triumph and of the advance of Christian civilization have been attended by the higher conception of Jesus. This includes the estimate of the lower conception and more.

Jesus lived a triumphant life. He never once suffered a moral defeat. He was prepared to give the hopeful exhortation, "Be of good cheer, for I have overcome the world."

He showed to the world a new way of life. It was a way so distinct from the pagan idea and so superior to the Judaic idea that His early followers were called the people of that way.

He brought to humanity a convincing revelation of the love of God. This revelation was made not merely through His teachings but most of all through the spirit of His life and the sacrifice of His death.

Jesus is the Saviour of men.

He is more than a Great Teacher. He is the power of God unto salvation. He meets the deepest spiritual need of man. He makes men victors in the moral conflict of life. When St. Paul cried out, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death," he found deliverance in Christ.

The question is well asked: "Can anyone deny that His influence has been the chief factor in the moral renewal and spiritual transformation of men for the last nineteen hundred years?"

Sherwood Eddy writes: "Others may speculate and better define, but I have known Him in my own soul, since first I knew what life was. And I have seen Him saving wrecked humanity in a score of nations in many religions among all classes and conditions of men. I have little interest in metaphysical speculation and no craving for orthodox propriety, for myself as I face this man, I say with all the allegiance of my soul, my Lord and my God manifest in human life."

Jesus has supreme authority as our Lord and Master.

"To whom shall we go for Thou hast the words of eternal life." He is not only our Saviour whom we trust for forgiveness but our Lord whom we are to follow with unreserved obedience. There is to be allowed no uncertain note in His spiritual authority.

Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin in "Expanding Horizons," writes: "Jesus never said a word to correct misconceptions or to enlighten His age in matters of physical science. For such acumen men had a sufficient potential equipment. He would not be the minister of a renaissance in that field. But in things relating to God and man, sin and salvation, here our Lord speaks with the positiveness of a specialist."

There is the continued spiritual presence and power of Christ in our world. Through centuries of Christian experience His promise has been verified, "Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world." "The movement of the spiritual energy of Jesus Christ across the moral life of the race is like the movement of a planet."

The personal presence of Christ is the spiritual energy which brings the power of God into a human life. He is no absent Lord till He comes again, but He is with us and within us in a direct vital contact which is far better than any physical presence.

The faith that "God was in Christ Jesus reconciling the world unto Himself," has been the energizing powers of the church for nineteen centuries and this faith is our hope for the spiritual victories of the future.

There are mysteries of the personality of Christ beyond our finite understanding. The incarnation is not only the manifestation of the uniqueness and pre-eminence of the divine-man, it also reveals the essential likeness of God and man.

God perfectly revealed Himself in man without ceasing to be God, and man becomes the full expression of God without ceasing to be man.

The poet expressed his complete dedication to Christ while yearning for clearer light.

"If Jesus Christ is a man
And only a man—I say
That of all mankind I cleave to Him,
And to Him I cleave alway.

"If Jesus Christ is a God—
And the only God—I swear
I will follow Him through heaven and hell,
The earth, the sea, and the air."

We can but believe, however, that a better understanding of Christ removes the alternative, man or God.

Jesus was not God or man, but God in man. He was no demi-god nor superman, an abnormal dual personality partially God and partially man, but the perfect revelation of the nature and character of God through man.

"I say the acknowledgement of God in Christ
Accepted by thy reason, solves for thee
All questions in this world and out of it,
And has, so far, advanced thee to be wise."

When Justice Triumphed :: Continued from Page 3

Jockey, and under many other aliases. Diaset and Gagnoli already had been convicted in this country and sentenced to from forty to sixty years in prison. It was announced that Mourey, however, would be tried in France.

Mourey's story of his wanderings, told shortly before his trial, breathed adventure. After he had escaped from the prison colony in French Guinea, he made his way to Venezuela and there became a stowaway on a Dutch liner. When he was discovered he asked to be allowed to work his way to New York.

"I worked a few months in New York," he continued, "and then got a job in the Shattuck home through an agency. I was suspected at various times of theft, notably when Mrs. Shattuck lost a necklace, and also when she missed some silverware. I decided to quit. I took some jewelry along with me and sold it in California.

"Then I was a stowaway again, on a ship that took me to Santa Maria, Colombia, where I opened a gambling den. Falling ill a few months later, I returned to New York, where I worked. In 1919 I returned to France as a stowaway. I lived two years with my sister and then returned to America."

The prisoner was asked by the judge who was conducting his preliminary examination if he had not been afraid of arrest.

"No," replied Mourey rather contemptuously. "The American police are less diligent at searching out criminals than the French."

After the Shattuck robbery he went to Philadelphia, he said, and sold the jewels right and left. Then he fled south, crossed the Mexican border at El Paso, and sold some more of the jewelry in Mexico. Then to Spain and back to his sister.

Finally came the affair with the young woman who traveled on trolley cars—and capture.

Refused Extradition.

The New York authorities tried strenuously to extradite Mourey for trial here, but the French courts refused to allow it. It was explained that the French authorities had many more serious charges against Mourey, running from jail breaking to murder, and they wanted to deal with him in their own way. The American authorities were assured that the prisoner would get plenty.

Thus came about the unusual situation of a French citizen being tried in France for a crime committed abroad. Shattuck went to Paris to appear as the chief witness against the man. He made several other trips abroad in the course of the hunt. Mrs. Shattuck was unable to go abroad, but her deposition was read in court.

Estranged Jurors.

Mourney's cynical attitude the very first day of the trial estranged the jurors, it was said. When questioned about the first theft at the Shattuck house in 1917, he shrugged his shoulders and remarked that he needed the money. And when asked why he had beaten Mrs. Shattuck when he went to her room, he denied that he had injured her in any way.

"All I did was to make her go down to the cellar with the rest of the household," he said.

Mr. Shattuck told the story of the robbery from the witness stand. He produced the gold penknife he had used to loosen the screws in the airless and lightless wine cellar. He told how kindly Mrs. Shattuck had treated the man and how, when Mourey was ill while serving as butler in the home, the cook had prepared special dishes for him.

Shattuck's Plea.

At this point the prisoner lowered his head and said:

"I regret my deed, Mr. Shattuck. In fact, you were very good to me."

The trial ended, as had been predicted, in Mourey's conviction and sentence to death. Mr. Shattuck made a plea to the French authorities that the man's sentence be commuted to life. And so it was done, but for Mourey it was to be a living death on that place of horrors, Devil's Island.

The man's last gesture of defiance came when he was boarding the French convict ship La Mariniere. Still cynical, his spirit unbroken, Mourey shouted to reporters: "Tell them I am not through yet. Tell them I will be the butler for some high-class society people in New York within two years."

When Camilleri, the last of the four, had been sentenced to forty to sixty years in Sing Sing, Albert Shattuck opened his home again. But he was not to enjoy it long. He died of heart disease in November, 1925. It was understood that the strain of his ceaseless search for Mourey and his accomplices had hastened the end.

Reward Spurned by Woman in Case

The sentimental touch in the capture and trial of Mourey, chief of the Shattuck robbers, came when Bertha Mulon, who was described as his mistress, announced that she would most certainly not apply for the reward money. The Paris underworld hailed Bertha as a true sweetheart. Mlle. Mulon, however, could have no legitimate claim for the reward, for she made every possible effort to elude the police during her journeys to visit the hiding Mourey.

My Lady Far Away

very well; got several dozen clever, charming fellows——"

"Who?"

"I'm telling you, the pelicans. Now the difficulty was to get them to the nearest station; we had forty miles of road. So I wired for a motor car, a big seven-seater, and it came along, and my assistant and I packed the dear fellows in sacking, four a bundle, heads out at each end, and we got in the rear of the car, and the owner, with his wife, who'd come along, sat in front. Now, that road has gates; gates and gates to open and shut. We kept up a good speed generally, and the pelicans liked it; they were quite quiet and pleasant as long as the car was running thirty or forty miles an hour, but as soon as we slacked down—and we had to slack fairly often in order to open and close gates—the poor things were very much annoyed, and every time they would reach out and bite the driver's wife. She was a very plump lady, and not very good tempered, and every time the pelicans reached out with their bills and got her she said more and more. We couldn't put her in the back all among them, so we just had to carry on. Her husband was not at all pleased; he seemed to blame us a good deal and said he never ought to have brought his wife, for it was no place for a lady. But the poor fellows were as good as gold almost all the time; as long as you kept up speed, they troubled nobody. It was only the gates, and every one knows," he added gravely, "that pelicans are a little bit short tempered; they must be humored"

Martha, always ready to be amused, was laughing until she almost choked, while Welch gravely and smilelessly told his tale. Royden with difficulty kept from yawning. He did not think it funny; he sympathized altogether with the insulted lady of the motor car proprietor. "This is a queer fish of a fellow," ran his thoughts. "One can't lay too much stress on anything he says. However, he may chance on something that will be useful before we have to clear out. I wonder how long it's safe to give the place?"

"We ought to be able to stop here about a week, allowing for an ordinary rate of using up stores,' 'remarked Welch surprisingly.

"I didn't speak," blurted Hugh, in astonishment.

"No," answered Welch, coolly. He had interpreted, without much trouble, Royden's suppressed yawn, the turn of his head as he stared all up and down the lake. Often and often, Welch's life had hung on the interpreting of some wild beast's mind; he had grown, perhaps, in consequence, a little clairvoyant.

He thought of this as he brought his mattress out to camp on deck for the night.

"I believe I've one of my fits of prophecy coming on," he said to himself. "I'm as sure as if I'd been through it that the next few days are going to be pretty thick with happenings. Well, happenings are what we all came for. Boy, where's my mosquito net?"

Welch Learns Some News.

Two or three more days were spent in roughly exploring the limits of the lake, and mapping it as well as circumstances permitted. It was, as far as they could judge, about thirty miles long, and six or seven broad. The number of islands was very great, but most of them were uninhabited. On some they saw, far off, the peaks and long spines of native houses; and more than once fleets of canoes paddled up to the exploring launch, darted about her as waterflies dart about a skimming swallow, and fled, scattering dismal yells. Clearly the lake owned plenty of inhabitants; clearly, also, they wished to have as little as possible to do with the invading whites. Again and again Royden tried to tempt the natives with trade goods, but they refused to come near, although at times they greeted the red calico, the knives and the beads and belts, with cluckings of envy. It was almost as if they had been forbidden to approach.

"No whites have ever been to this place," declared Royden. "The people haven't a scrap of any civilized stuff, not even an inch of iron. I can't imagine why they don't want to acquire any, but that's a side issue. We'll do no good here, I'm afraid. Welch, you had better get on with those snakes of yours, and let's start away for the main river. We're more likely to pick up an interpreter on a great water highway like that than here at the back end of everything."

"I could drop the whole world tomorrow," thought Hugh Royden, leaning on the rail beside Martha, his hands in his pockets. "I could send this hooker back and camp on an island, and let everything else go hang. We civilized folk have lost something that tastes fine when you get the flavor of it, on the sly as it were, away up here. I don't know what it is; nobody knows but the natives, and they can't tell. But I reckon it is mighty good if you'd let yourself take it. That, however, is just what I will not let Hugh Royden do. Hugh Royden has to do what I tell him. You beggar, you needn't howl. You are going back, and you are going to carry the pack all the rest of your life, and learn to run under it, if you have to. You are going to stand for Wilsdon, if Fortune's kind—and that will give you two packs. There's for you. We aren't our uncles—not by a long chalk."

"Hugh boy," came Martha's hard, sweet voice at his elbow. "Get me a lime squash with just a spot of whisky in it, and tell me how much longer you think of staying on the lake."

"Are you tired of it, sweetheart?" asked Royden, pausing on the first step of the companion.

"No—O, no! Not tired of this kind of thing. I want more and more. But I want it new, now."

"You'd tire of it pretty quickly if you had it long," suggested her lover. She did not contradict. "Maybe," she said. "But I want new thrills."

"You shall have 'em," promised Hugh, descending. "We'll leave tomorrow." To himself he said, as he pressed the limes into the glass, "Lucky for this little lady I'm not my uncle's sort. There wouldn't be much cake for her in a place like this."

Welch, who had been feeding his snakes, came forward by and by. "Did I hear you say you were leaving tomorrow?" he asked.

"You did," replied Royden coolly. After all—hang it, wasn't the expedition his? What right had this picked-up chap to show disapproval?

He did show it, however. His benevolent, self-possessed face had almost lost its character; dismay spoke clear. For a moment he kept silence, evidently weighing pros and cons, and then he said slowly:

"I think, Mr. Royden, you'll make the mistake of your life if you won't stop a little longer—just a little."

"Why do you think that?" put in Martha with some sharpness.

"I am convinced there are white people in the neighborhood."

"Proof, man, proof," demanded Royden. "You thought you heard somebody swearing—which was myself—you imagine it's possible that some invisible person pulled you out of the lake—you—why, if you believed all this, why didn't you do something about it? We've been here two days and a half."

"Because," said Welch coolly, "I wanted to attend to my own business first. Now I've got ahead with that. This last tiger is one of the most interesting. Just let me show her to you——" He put one hand down his shirt. Between two buttons a malevolent head looked out, mottled like tortoiseshell.

"Keep back, man," said Hugh sharply. "I know you have the brutes under control, but you frighten Mrs. Lyle."

"No," dissented Martha with shining eyes. "That is, yes, but I love to be frightened; it's a thrill." She threw an inexplicable look at Welch. Something in Hugh Royden's mind seemed to turn and stir uneasily. "Two men and a woman," he thought. "The eternal triangle. Rot; I've been seeing too many cinemas." With an effort he swung the conversation back to the point it had left.

"You can say what you like," he declared, "you're entitled, of course, to your own opinion—but I'm entitled to mine, and we go tomorrow at daylight. And you'll oblige me very much, Welch, if you put that—thing—back where it belongs."

It was a palpable snub, but the face of the animal tamer did not change. The set smile that had long ago made wrinkles on each side of his thin mouth kept its place widening perhaps a little, as he drew the whole length of the snake from his bosom, and, fondling its fluid coils, walked sternwards. Once or twice he turned and seemed to listen. Then he unclosed the cage; with practiced ease emptied the snake in among its companions, and swiftly snapped the door.

Martha, intrigued by his behavior, hung over the rail, looking into the indigo dark.

"What is the thing drumming for?" she asked.

"He isn't drumming," answered Welch. "That's what I've been listening to this last twenty minutes."

"What have you been listening to?" asked Royden, letting his mosquito booted legs drop with a slam from the rail.

Welch reached forward and put the mantis carefully back on the top of the net, rose, and stood looking into the darkness. "Proof of my argument," he said.

The beating sound grew clearer; came closer and closer to the ship. Unmistakably now, it was the sound of a paddle. A solitary paddle, a solitary canoe. Some one out alone, at night, in the middle of the lake.

Royden, if he loved his own opinion, knew how to abandon it gracefully. "You're right, Welch," he said. "Right, and I'm wrong. That's a white man."

"Why?" demanded Martha. She had turned very pale.

"Because," explained Royden, "no native would approach us alone, and after dark."

"If it is your uncle?"

"The game would be up?"

"But—your turn?" She was almost breathless; her eyes were black blots in her paper white face.

"I shouldn't count on getting any turn. Men who inherit titles marry again." He was speaking in clipped sentences, showing the very raw of his mind, even as she showed hers. These seemed to be no time for futilities, pretense. In the course of the next two minutes they were going to know.

"If it's news?" She meant news of Frank Royden's death, and Frank's nephew knew it. "If it is," he answered almost brutally, "we have everything, you and I." ("The best cake—they are quite happy," ran wildly through his mind. He pulled himself together.)

Martha said no more; but she seized Hugh's big, handsome hand in both of hers, and crushed it so hard that he wondered at the strength hid in those narrow, tulip pink palms. They all waited, standing by the ladder.

The canoe came into the range of the trembling electric lights, swept across them, and, checking, nosed the vessel's side. There was a man in it.

"Are you white men?" he said, balancing on the water so lightly that a touch of the paddle would have sent him skimming furlongs away.

"Two white men, one white woman," answered Royden, amazed.

Stop Whiskey

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman
In all this little town;
And my merry laugh and singing
Takes the place of sigh and frown
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is like himself once more.
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store

One day I read some verses—
"Mary's Miracle," the name,
And I said, that's John exactly,
And I'll send and get the same.
So I sent for GOLDEN TREATMENT
(As sly as sly could be)
And I put it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.

And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so, you see—
It was smoothest kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited,
(And cried some, too, I guess),
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.

And John never thought a minute
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as any one,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking,
And leads a nice, new life.

"Since John he quit a-drinking!"
I can't say it times enough!
An' hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff.
And when I say my prayers at night
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Then GOLDEN TREATMENT.

? THE ? PUZZLE COLUMN

This week we are pretending that the puzzlers are on a fishing trip, even if it is a little late in the season. The cross-word puzzle looks as though some hungry minnows have been nibbling the edges, doesn't it? You'll find some fish names here, and other appropriate words.

—1—

GOING FISHING.

The definitions are:

Horizontal.

1. Near.
3. I.
5. Indefinite article.
7. A musical note.
9. A vision.
10. Implement used in fishing.
11. Fowls.
13. Silent.
15. To abound.
18. Consumed.
19. A kind of fly.
20. A fresh water fish.
21. A high explosive.
23. Before.
26. An edible fish.
28. To stuff.
29. Different.

—3—

In keeping with the spirit of this fishing trip, try these two word chains. Remember, you change one letter each move, and always form a real word in doing it.

Change RIVER to LAKES in four moves.

Change SEAS to LAND in four moves.

—4—

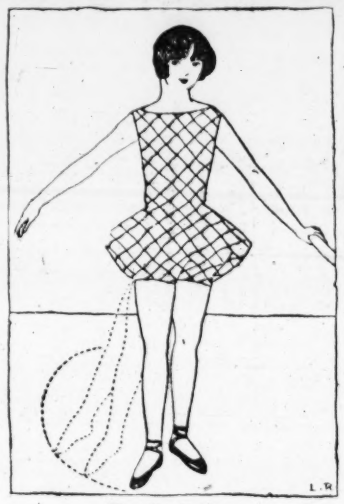

And just to finish things up, here's a little exercise in beheading. Behead three different fish and get words meaning owned, a silly fellow, and healthy. That will be about enough this week!

Here Are Three Simple Ballet Movements for Girls to Learn

BY RITA RIGGS,
Well-Known Dancing Instructor.

Three simple ballet movements are explained this week. The first of these is called "Ronde Jambe," which is French for "around the leg." The words are pronounced ron-day jam, with the "j" in the second word having the sound of the "z" in azure.

To perform this movement, point the right foot forward in fourth position, keeping the toe on the floor, and circle to the side and back to fourth position rear, which is just the forward step in reverse. Then come back through second position to fourth front again, and repeat six times with both the right and the left foot.

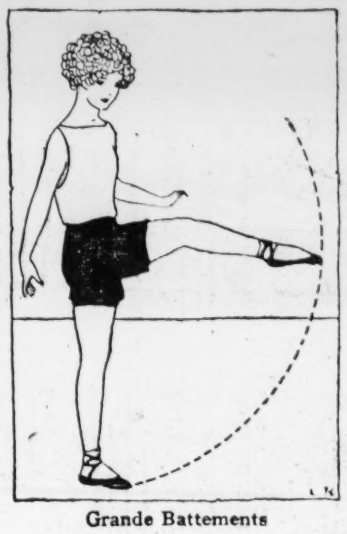

Ronde Jambe

Stretching Exercises

Point the right foot in fourth position front and kick forward, remembering to keep the toe pointed downward. Repeat this six times. Then point in second position and kick out. Repeat. Point in fourth position rear and kick. Repeat. Do the same with the left foot. Be sure to keep the body erect and the head up, and hold to some support during the exercise.

Grande Battements

Finally are the stretching exercises, which are performed in fifth position. Bend the body forward four times, then bend back and go up on your toes four times. Be sure to have some firm support to hold to, and do not attempt to do too much the first time you try these exercises, or you may strain seldom used muscles.

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

DECORATIVE STENCILS.

Once you have prepared a number of different stencils, it takes but a few minutes to decorate a number of cards or letters, and the idea can be used as well on tea cups or china for the dinner party or school affair. Use thin, tough cardboard when making the stencils. You should select the ideas or decorations you like from a number of clippings, and transfer them to the cardboard stencil sheets.

For stationery and cards, a design can be used that will fit in one corner or across one-half the card or sheet. Good seasonal stencils such as Christmas and Thanksgiving or Halloween, will require some simple idea worked out in an outline. For Christmas the drawing shows a wreath of holly with three separate leaves and four berries, together with a candle. When cutting out the stencils with an old razor blade, make sure that none of the openings are connected, otherwise the design would fall out of the card.

Thanksgiving can be shown by means of a fat gobbler in outline and the silhouette of an ax. The tail feathers will require careful cutting to keep the openings separate. These are only suggestions, and you may be able to work out original ideas. To give a personal touch to your greetings, take a small snapshot of yourself, in profile, and trace around it for the stencil. If you are careful, the profile will be a good likeness. A border will help the appearance of the stencil. Colored enamels can be used for the greeting cards and stationery. Water colors should be used on china, for temporary decorations, since the colors can then be removed afterwards.

ATTRACTIVE.

Parson: "And which of all the parables do you like best, my child?"

Tommie: "The one where somebody loafs and fishes!"

CUCKOO.

"How do you know he was crazy?"

"He was looking in the cuckoo clock for eggs."

Japan's "Mum" Feast Comes in November

The month of November brings to Japan one of the great festivals of the year, the Feast of the Chrysanthemums. Japan is a country famous for its gorgeous flowers. The chrysanthemum is the royal flower of the nation.

Fall in Japan is very beautiful. The Japanese say that the maples are the crimson clouds that hang about the sunset of their flower life. People flock at this time to the chrysanthemum gardens where the gigantic displays are arranged. Not only are there exhibits of unusually large and rare varieties, but huge pictures have been fashioned from thousands of blooms. The making of pictures among Japanese gardeners has been learned through generations. Son, father and grandfather have all been students of the craft.

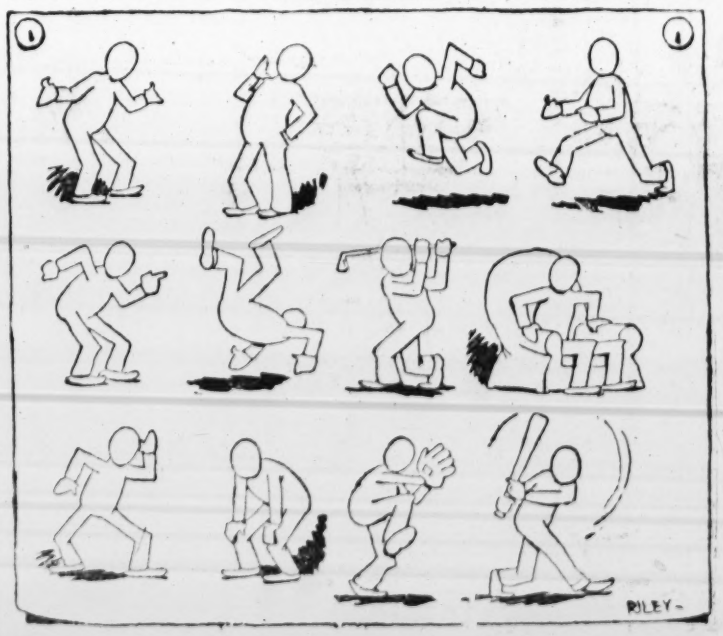

There are pictures that tell stories—pictures of Japanese gods and goddesses, made entirely from flowers except for the faces which are painted masks. There are demons, dragons, flags and all kinds of fancies. The pictures are made on bamboo frames, or the plants have been trained to grow over bamboo poles, so that with their blooming, a picture is formed.

"Oval Method" Is Used By Expert Cartoonists

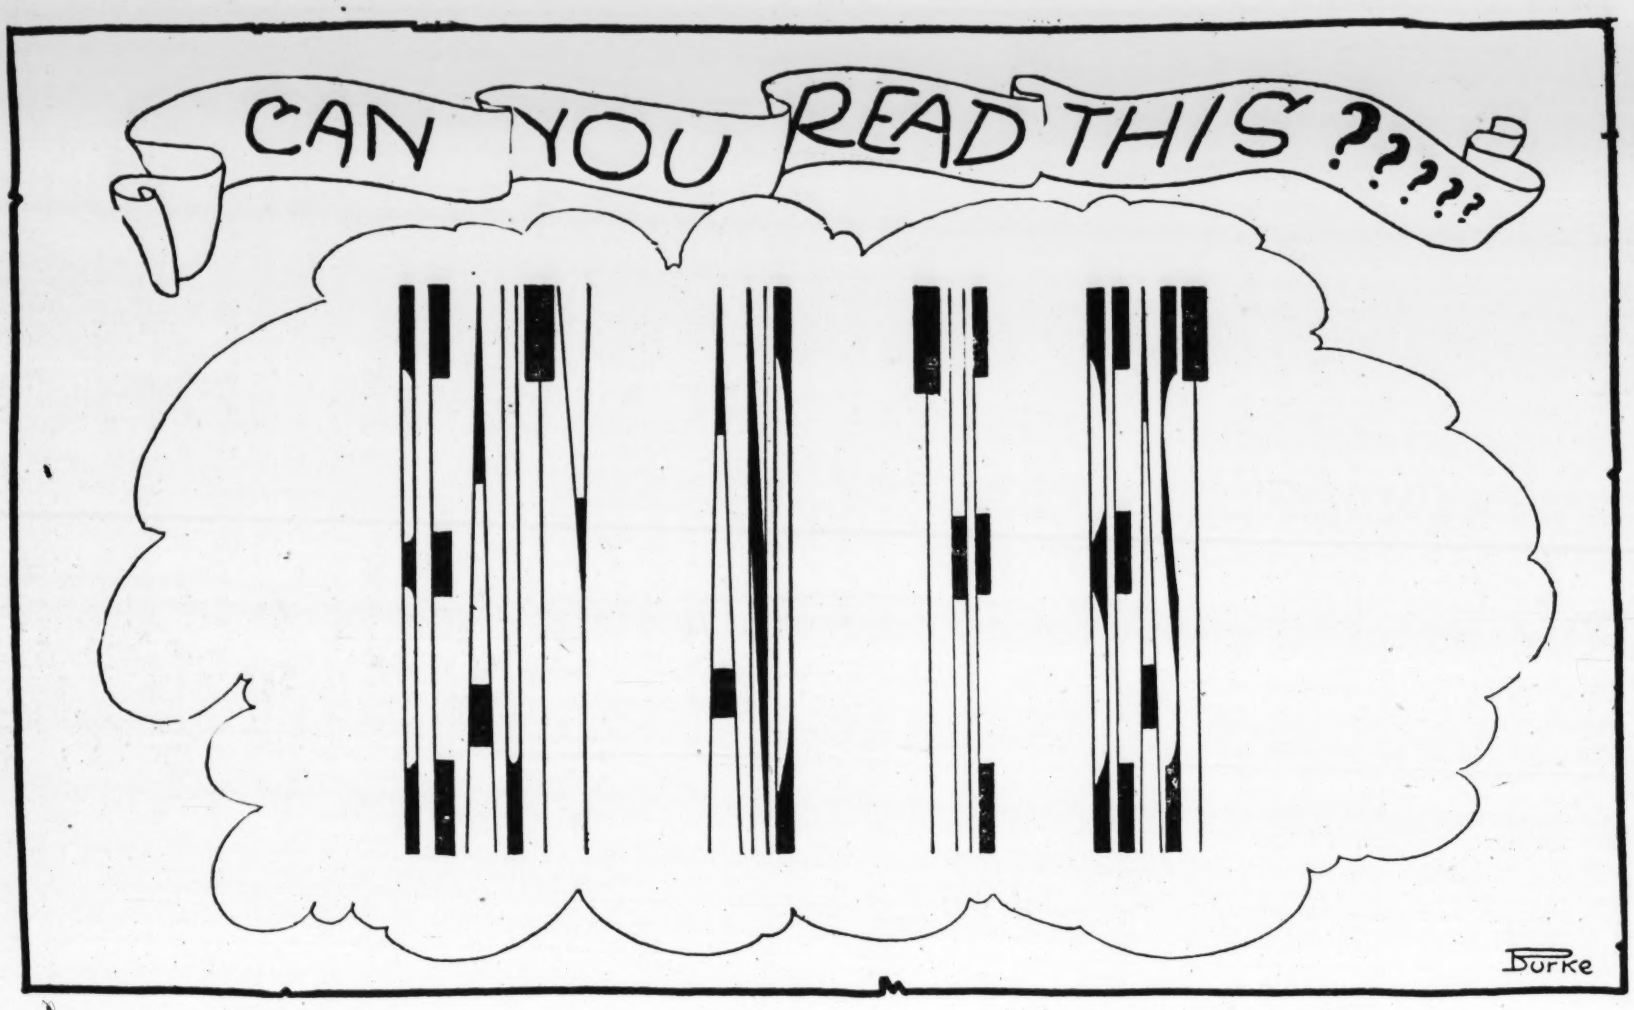

For the boy or girl eager to be an artist, here is a lesson in the easiest way to draw cartoon figures. The human figure is best drawn by means of the "oval" method, illustrated here. A small oval or egg is made to serve as a head, a larger one is drawn for the body, and then the arms and legs are added.

Notice how simply the sketches are drawn. No features are used—there is nothing but empty outline—yet they are full of action. A cartoonist usually sketches his figures in this way, then goes over them carefully, adding facial features, hair, clothing and other details.

Practice drawing the figures on this chart. Don't try to add details, as that will come later. After you have drawn these figures a few times, try originating some of your own. If you still have any sketches from the lesson in faces, published here not long ago, you might try adding one of those faces to some of these bodies.

Bob Picks a Backfield

A Tale of the Conquerers Club and Football

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

SYNOPSIS.

The four members of the Conquerors' club are sophomores in Ferriston High school, and Bob Miller, president of the club, is a substitute halfback on the football squad. Red Hopkins is playing second-string end, but Bob asks the coach to shift Red to halfback, and the coach agrees. Bob wishes this done as part of his plan to have the Conquerors form an all-star backfield for the next two years, after the present players graduate. Through the cooperation of Ruth Sauers, Bob gets Bill Jenkins to go out for quarterback, and by using physical force and kidding, they get Porky Jones out for fullback. As the season progresses, therefore, Bob's dream is coming true, and the Conquerors are developing a good second-string backfield. Ferriston has won all its games, and is almost hopeful of winning the county championship by beating Fayette, the large school that wins it almost every year. Interest is now at fever heat in the game, which is scheduled for Thanksgiving day at Fayette.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

* * *

INSTALLMENT IV.

On the Wednesday afternoon preceding Thanksgiving a great rally was held at Ferriston High school. Special busses were to take the students to the game at Fayette on the morrow, while the members of the team were going in the morning in special automobiles.

"Then they were out on the road, running to the overturned machine."

While great cheers resounded through the halls of the school building, Coach Edwards was putting his men through a final workout on the field. The first team ran through a short signal drill, and the coach watched them closely. What had he to fear? His team had never come to the end of the season in better shape. His star backfield was working beautifully.

And yet the coach could not keep from worrying. "Everything is going too smoothly," he said mournfully to Pete Patten, his assistant. "We've had hardly any tough luck all year, and every team gets its share. I wish this game tomorrow were over."

"Oh, don't be a gloom!" scoffed Patten.

"But what if some of the boys would get sick, or something? I tell you that when everything is going too well, there's trouble ahead!"

"Oh, you're superstitious!" replied Patten. "If anything should happen to any of the backfield men, haven't we got the Conquerors for substitutes?"

The coach refused to be consoled. "They are all too green, except Bob Miller," he wailed. "If I had to put them into a big game without experience, you can't tell what might happen. Oh, well, I'll just hope for the best."

A few minutes later the coach called the men to him and cautioned them all to get to bed early and be on hand at the school at ten o'clock the next morning. Then the members of the team got dressed and went back to the high school, where some of them made speeches and all of them listened to the enthusiastic encouragement of the excited students.

Bob finally got to sleep that night, with his dreams full of footballs, goalposts, and cheering grandstands. The next morning he opened his eyes to see the rain pouring down outside, and to feel a chill wind in his window. He shook his head soberly. A bad day for a game!

A great crowd had gathered at the school to see the team off at ten o'clock. A half dozen cars were drawn up when Bob got there, and he and the other members of the Conquerors' club managed to pile into the second one in line. Just in front of them Coach Edwards was to ride with the four regular backfield men.

"Boy, what a day!" growled Red, as he nestled down under the blankets. "That field at Fayette will be nothing but soup."

"Well, it will be just as bad for Fayette as it will be for us," said Bob cheeringly. "I wonder if any of us will get in the game."

"You might," said Porky, "and I suppose Red might, too. But Bill and I are too green, I guess. Oh well, if I don't play I can at least keep dry." This last remark was made with a grin, and the other Conquerors knew that Porky would like nothing better than to get into the great Fayette contest, whether he said so or not.

A wild cheer went up from the crowd as the first car started out the road for Fayette, with the auto in which the Conquerors were riding following closely after it, and the other cars stringing along behind. The road was glassy in the rain, and the drivers went slowly as they passed through the town and out into the open country.

Nothing, not even the gloomy day, could suppress the spirits of the Conquerors, and the time passed quickly with their merry talk and banter. Bill, as usual, took his share of kidding in regard to his liking for Ruth Sauers.

"I suppose you won't know there is a game going on," said Red. "You'll have your eyes in the stands all day trying to see Ruth."

"Ah, pipe down," growled Bill.

"Well, that's what you get for being a hero," chortles Porky. "If you hadn't saved her life last summer in the fire at the saw mill, all this would never have been."

The talk then turned to discussion of the last summer's camping trip. Suddenly, in the midst of it, the driver of their car gave a shout of dismay.

The four boys peered ahead. A few rods in front of them the road made a sharp curve. Just as they looked the car in which the coach and the backfield men were riding skidded sharply, slithered into the ditch and turned over.

For a second the boys sat in their car, sick with dread. Then they were out on the road, running to the overturned machine. A moment later the other cars had drawn up, and the machine was righted. But its six occupants—Coach Edwards, the driver, and the four backfield stars of Ferriston High school lay white-faced and grim. Every one of them was hurt—how seriously nobody could tell.

A hushed, dejected crowd filled the Ferriston section at the Fayette athletic field that afternoon. Fayette, with true sportsmanship, had offered to postpone the game, but Ferriston had refused. Word had come that none of the victims of the accident was seriously hurt, but all of them badly enough to be in the hospital for the time being, at least. The coach had a badly cut head, Captain Ed was nursing a broken arm, and strains, bruises and a broken ankle accounted for the others.

Nobody can imagine the feelings of the coach and the injured players as they saw the time for the game drawing near, but out at the field the other members of the team were white-lipped and sober, unnerved by the terrible accident just at the moment when victory seemed within reach. Assistant Coach Patten had taken the Conquerors aside and told them that they must play, that they must do their best, and that was all that was asked of them.

A brave cheer went up from the Ferriston rooters as the referee put the whistle to his lips. Down under their goalpost four hearts were pounding under four red Ferriston jerseys. The Conquerors were up against another bad situation.

AROUND the WORLD

THE SILK COTTON TREE.

Unless you have been in the tropics you have probably never seen such a tree as the one illustrated here. It grows only in warm countries and you will find it in Africa, Mexico, Central America, parts of India and in the islands of India and in the islands of the tropical zone. The one shown here today grows on the island of Bermuda, which is a British island in the Atlantic about 600 miles east of the American coast.

It is a peculiar tree in many respects. Note how its roots seem to cover the ground for many feet in every direction. At certain times of the year it develops seed pods which, when opened, disclose a sort of cotton somewhat similar in appearance to the cotton of the southern American states. Closer examination shows, however, that it is much finer and that it has a gloss; in fact, it looks as though it might be a crude kind of silk. Because it has characteristics of both, it is called silk-cotton, and it is a somewhat important article of commerce in the countries whence it comes. —The Globe Trotter.

EDITORIAL

YOU'RE "IT"

Suppose you get the lowest marks in school; or fail to win at marbles; or are asked the very questions on which you are not prepared. What do you say? "Just my luck," most likely.

Now how about it when you get high marks; or win the game; or make a perfect recitation? Just "your luck" again? Or "just you?" Well, now, it is quite fair to blame Old Man Luck for you're failures and give him no credit for the times you succeed? Of course it isn't. The fact of the matter is, there isn't, really and truly, any Old Man Luck at all. The fact of the matter is, you're "It."

It is for you to decide whether you'll study and play your best and attend your closest or—let it go. Results, good and bad, lie entirely with you. Almost terrifying, isn't it? But not when you consider that each decision comes along by itself—just one thing at a time to decide.

AS SCIENCE SEES IT

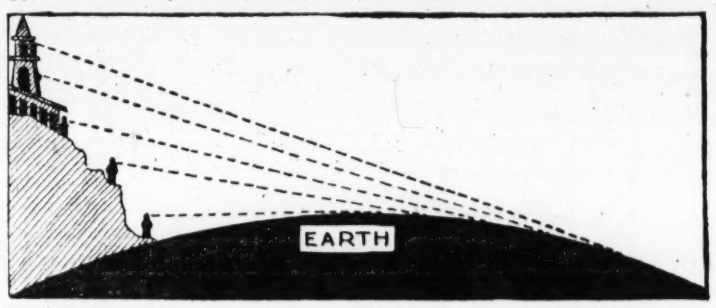

WHY CAN WE SEE FARTHER HIGHER UP?

You know, of course, that you can see a greater distance if you ascend a hill or a building than if you remain on the ground. This is so because the earth is curved and hence one can see out into a distance only if one is high enough to see over the curvature.

The same thing is true when you stand in a curved street. As you stand on the sidewalk, you can see only a few buildings before the curvature of the street hides the others from view; as you walk into the middle of the street, more buildings appear to view beyond the bend; and as you stand on the opposite side of the street, you may be able to see every building.

The drawing will help you to get an explanation of it. The line of sight is always to the horizon but the horizon is farther away the higher we go up the hill.

At sea, we can observe the horizon only 1.3 miles distant, but if we ascend the mast of a vessel to about fifty feet, our eyes can see objects over nine miles away. If we rise to a height of 100 feet, the horizon will be thirteen miles distant, and if we go even higher, to 500 feet, we shall be able to see objects almost thirty miles distant.

Chapter 53—The Legend of the Twins of the Wolf. By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

FOUR HUNDRED YEARS AFTER AENEAS FLED FROM TROY TO SETTLE IN THE PART OF ITALY INHABITED BY THE LATINS, ONE OF HIS DESCENDANTS, NUMITOR, A GOOD AND WISE MAN, WAS REIGNING AS KING OF LATIUM. —•

NUMITOR HAD A WICKED BROTHER NAMED AMULIUS WHO WAS SCHEMING TO SEIZE THE THRONE AND SET HIMSELF UP AS KING. AMULIUS GATHERED A BAND OF MEN AS EVIL AS HIMSELF, AND PLOTTED TO DESTROY NUMITOR AND HIS CHILDREN.

WITHOUT WARNING, AMULIUS AND HIS HENCHMEN DROVE NUMITOR FROM THE THRONE, KILLED THE KINGS SON, AND MADE NUMITOR'S DAUGHTER, RHEA SYLVIA, TAKE THE VOWS OF A VESTAL VIRGIN

THE VESTALS KEPT THE SACRED FIRE BURNING IN THE TEMPLE OF VESTA. IT WAS BELIEVED THAT IF THE FIRE WAS EVER

ALLOWED TO GO OUT SOME GREAT CALAMITY WOULD VISIT THE KINGDOM. VESTAL VIRGINS WERE REGARDED WITH GREAT REVERENCE, BUT THEY WERE REQUIRED TO SPEND 30 YEARS IN THE SERVICE OF VESTA AND TO REMAIN SINGLE DURING THAT TIME. —•

RHEA SYLVIA DID NOT WANT TO BE A VESTAL, AND ONE DAY SHE SLIPPED AWAY AND MARRIED A YOUNG MAN. THE WEDDING WAS KEPT A SECRET FOR A LONG TIME. FINALLY, ONE OF THE KING'S SPIES FOUND OUT THAT RHEA SYLVIA WAS THE MOTHER OF TWIN SONS

WHEN AMULIUS LEARNED OF THIS HE WAS TERRIBLY ANGRY AND CONDEMNED HIS UNHAPPY NIECE TO BE BURIED ALIVE, THE USUAL PENALTY FOR VESTALS WHO BROKE THEIR VOWS

AMULIUS DID NOT BURY THE TWINS ALIVE WITH THEIR MOTHER, BUT SET THEM ADRIFT IN THEIR CRADLE ON THE TIBER RIVER, BELIEVING THEY WOULD FLOAT OUT TO SEA AND BE DROWNED

BUT THE CRADLE DRIFTED ASHORE AND THE TWINS, WHO HAD BEEN NAMED ROMULUS AND REMUS, WERE FOUND BY A BIG SHE-WOLF THAT HAD LOST HER CUBS. INSTEAD OF EATING THE BABIES, THE SHE-WOLF CARRIED THEM TO HER DEN WHERE SHE FED AND SHELTERED THEM.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

SOME TIME AFTERWARD A SHEPHERD PASSED NEAR THE WOLF'S LAIR, AND WAS STARTLED TO HEAR THE WAILING OF A CHILD. FINDING THE TWINS, HE TOOK THEM HOME TO HIS WIFE WHO RAISED THEM AS HER OWN. —•

WHEN ROMULUS AND REMUS WERE OLD ENOUGH, THEY WATCHED THEIR FOSTER FATHER'S FLOCKS. THEY GREW BRAVE AND STRONG, AND BECAME THE LEADERS OF THE SHEPHERD LADS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE.

ONE DAY, WHEN THEY HAD NEARLY GROWN TO MANHOOD, THE TWINS CHANCED TO TRESPASS ON THE LAND OF A RICH EXILE, AND WERE TAKEN INTO HIS PRESENSE. IT WAS THEIR GRANDFATHER NUMITOR, AND HE WAS AT ONCE STRUCK BY THEIR RESEMBLANCE TO RHEA SYLVIA. AN INVESTIGATION REVEALED THEIR TRUE IDENTITY, AND THE TWINS HEARD

THE STORY OF AMULIUS'S TREACHERY AND THEIR MOTHER'S SAD FATE. ROMULUS AND REMUS AT ONCE GATHERED AN ARMY OF SHEPHERDS AND MARCHED TO OVERTHROW AMULIUS. TAKEN BY SURPRISE, THE KING WAS SLAIN, AND NUMITOR RESTORED TO THE THRONE. —NEXT WEEK— KINGS OF ROME

UNCA WALT! IT'S TIME TO READ ME THE FUNNY PAPER.

GREAT SCOTT! HAS ANOTHER WEEK ROLLED AROUND! IT DOESN'T SEEM TWO DAYS SINCE THE LAST SESSION.

WHAT DOES THE BIG FELLOW SAY, UNCA WALT?

WELL YOU SEE HE IS LOOKING BEHIND THE DOOR AND HE SAYS "WHERE ON EARTH ARE MY SHOES?"

AN' IN THE NEXT PICTURE HE'S LOOKING UNDER THE BED. WHAT DOES HE SAY?

HE SAYS, "I'M SURE I LEFT THEM RIGHT IN THIS ROOM."

HERE COMES THE COLORED MAMMY THAT WORKS FOR HIM. WHAT DOES HE SAY TO HER?

"I'M LOOKING FOR MY SHOES. HAVE YOU SEEN THEM WALKING AWAY?"

THEN SHE SAYS SOMETHING. WHAT IS IT?

"I AIN'T SEEN NOTHIN' OF 'EM, SAH. THEY COULDN'T OF WALKED VERY FAR."

HERE HE'S UP ON A STEPLADDER WITH A PAIR OF FIELD GLASSES LOOKING DOWN AROUND AND ALL OVER THE FLOOR.

WHAT DOES THE BIG FELLA SAY?

HE SAYS "NOT A SAIL - I MEAN SOLE IN SIGHT."

WHAT DOES THAT MEAN?

THAT MEANS HE CAN'T SEE A SHOE ANYWHERE.

OH! THEN WHAT'S HE DOING HERE?

HE'S STARTING OUT TO LOOK FOR THE LITTLE BOY.

THEN IN THIS PICTURE HE FINDS HIM IN THE BATHROOM AND WHAT DOES HE SAY?

"YOU LITTLE RASCAL" HE SAYS, "WHAT HAVE YOU DONE WITH MY SHOES?"

AND WHAT DOES THE LITTLE BOY SAY?

HE SAYS, "I WAS PLAYIN' CANAL BOAT WITH 'EM IN THE BATHTUB BUT THEY SUNK!"

THAT'S A GOOD ONE. IS THAT ALL?

YES, BUT I THINK HE OUGHT TO HAVE SPANKED THE LITTLE BOY IN THE LAST PICTURE, DON'T YOU?

NO, UNCA WALT. MAYBE THE LITTLE BOY COULDN'T HELP IT.

CRAZY? OH NO! -ONE REEL- BY INK

SAY, WOT'S WRONG WITH YOU? ARE YOU CRAZY?

NOT THAT I KNOW OF.

WELL THEN KEEP THAT DOG OF YOURS AWAY FROM HERE -

THIS IS THE MINT, - NO ANIMALS ALLOWED IN HERE -

TELL ME, WHY DO YOU WANT YOUR DOG TO GO INTO A MINT?
